Atomic Waste Goes Through City

By Jon Powers

NEW PALTZ

Truckloads of radioactive waste materials are routinely shipped through the City of Kingston, but apparently there are no guidelines for evacuation or cleanup procedures should an accident — however remote — occur.

That was perhaps the most noteworthy revelation at Saturday's symposium on nuclear energy held at the State University College at New Paltz. The issue of nuclear waste shipment — and, in particular, its impact on the local area — was discussed in some detail by Marc Alhonte, a researcher for the New York Public Interest Research Group.

According to Alhonte, Route 9W is the most widely used north-south route for the shipment of radioactive wastes through New York State. The only wastes he specifically referred to were those generated in Chalk River, Canada and transported to a reprocessing plant in South Carolina.

Alhonte said he recently surveyed police and fire officials in both Kingston and Poughkeepsie to determine what guidelines they have to handle a radioactive accident: in each instance, he was told that no guidelines exist.

Alhonte said officials in both cities told him that they are not notified in advance that a waste shipment is on the way; that their personnel have no training in the handling of radioactive wastes; that there are no specified evacuation procedures should waste materials threaten to contaminate an area. In addition, he said that a spokesman for the Poughkeepsie Police Department told him that the shipments are often unmarked, which could delay safety procedures should an accident occur.

The waste is normally sealed in 35-ton casks, and transported on a flatbed truck. Stringent safety measures are required to insure that the casks cannot be damaged in transit. There have been no reports that radioactive shipments through this area have been disrupted in any way.

But Alhonte emphasized that there is always a possibility that an accident may occur, and he maintained that there is no guarantee that all of the casks used in the shipment of waste materials are precisely constructed to specifications.

According to Alhonte, if four nuclear power plants are built in the Town of Lloyd, an average of 300 truckloads of radioactive waste would be shipped each year. According to the Power Authority of the State of New York, 68 spent fuel assemblies and 627 containers of radioactive waste material will be shipped each year from its planned nuclear plant in Greene County.

All of the shipping casks are water cooled. If an accident results in loss of coolant, the fissionable materials overheat and vaporize, emitting quantities of radioactive Cesium 134 and 137 into the atmosphere. The extent of contamination would depend on the amount of fissionable material that overheats and meteorological conditions at the time; the population that would be affected by radioactive releases depends on where the accident takes place.

Alhonte conceded that he has no precise figures on the frequency of waste shipments through Ulster County, but said they were probably small in number. He warned, however, that proliferation of nuclear plants in New York State (six are currently licensed; another eight are planned by 1986) would increase the frequency of radioactive shipments, and increase the probability of an accident.

The problem of where to take those wastes was also discussed at Saturday's symposium. Dr. Marvin Resnikoff, a NYPIRG physicist, noted that one of the reasons why the West Valley facility was recently closed was that workers there were receiving radiation dosages 30 times higher than the industry average, and about 60 times higher than the amount of normal background radiation.

Waste management was discussed, too, by Dr. Peter Brown, a professor of German at New Paltz and chairman of the state's Safe Energy Coalition. "In the area of waste management, we're no closer in 1976 than we were in 1946," he said. "Plutonium diversion is a serious problem . . . someone can make a credible fission bomb with $250 worth of equipment and a small amount of plutonium."

In a more general area, Brown predicted that three major questions will dominate the nuclear debate in 1976: "Is nuclear power really safe, clean and cheap — or is it the most dangerous, the dirtiest and most expensive way of generating electricity;

"Has the federal government been covering up . . . has it been open and candid with us;

"Are the alternatives to nuclear power being given equal priority and equal funding?"

The symposium resumes today at 11 a.m. at the Coykendall Science Building. Topics will include economics, citizen strategies and the Lloyd site.

Order New Reactor Safety Rules

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has ordered operators of 17 atomic power reactors in 11 states, including two in New York State, to adopt new safety rules insuring radioactive material will not be released if a reactor cooling system fails.

NRC officials say the change can be made without shutting down the reactors. It involves a slight adjustment in pressure between the "dry well" housing each boiling water reactor and the "wet well" filled with water to supress steam in event of a primary coolant loss.

The new rules, designed to double the plants' safety factor, are similar to those recently ordered at Vermont Yankee nuclear power plant in Vernon, Vt. All the reactors involved were made by General Electric.

Two of the reactors are at the Brown's Ferry plant in Alabama, closed down since last March because of fire damage. Tennessee Valley Authority officials say it now has been made "completely safe" from fires and are asking permission to restart it.

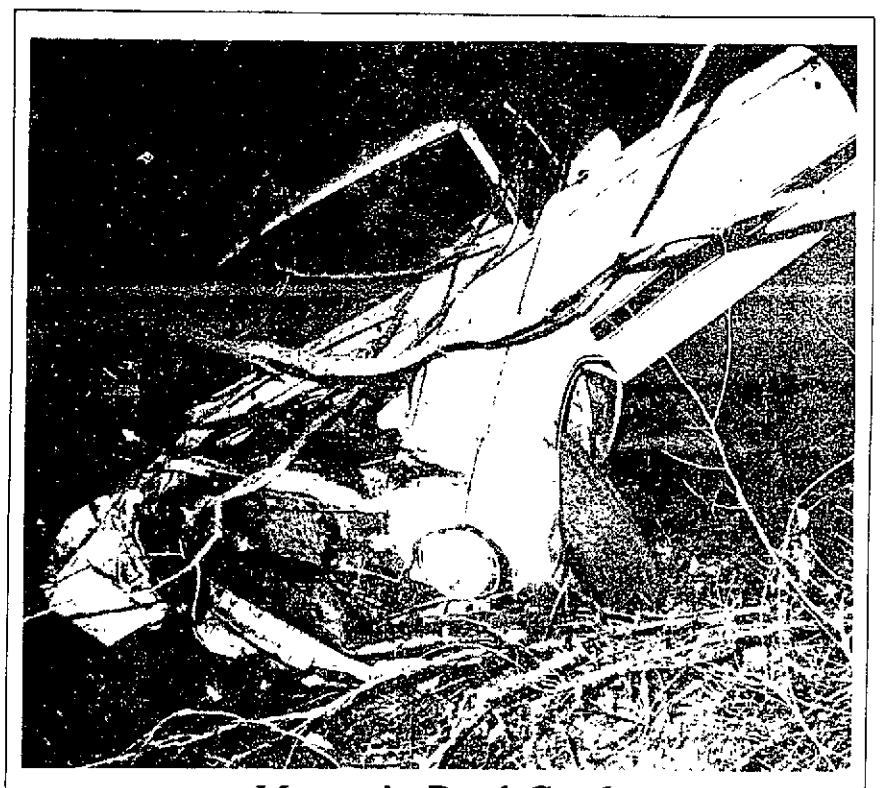

The other reactors include two at the Dresden plant and two at the Quad Cities plant, both in Illinois; two at the Peach Bottom plant in Pennsylvania; and one each at the Nine Mile Point and Fitzpatrick plants in New York State, the Oyster Creek plant in New Jersey, the Pilgrim 1 plant in Massachusetts, the Millstone 1 plant in Connecticut, the Hatch 1 plant in Georgia, the Cooper plant in Nebraska and the Duane Arnold Energy Center in Iowa.

Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. operates the Nine Mile Point and Fitzpatrick plants, both at Nine Mile Point on the shore of Lake Ontario in Oswego County.

"The action will provide additional assurance that the Mark I containment system, the type used at each of the plants, would be fully effective in the event of a loss-of-coolant accident — a very low probability event," an NRC spokesman said.

The rules change was ordered, the spokesman said, because studies showed the margin of safety offered by the containment system "may be less than had been expected." He said the change will double the safety factor.

TVA officials, meanwhile, said they have made major new fire protection changes at their Brown's Ferry plant.

Mountain Road Crash

Jocelyn Velasco, 22, of Saugerties, was injured Saturday night when her car went off Mountain Road about a half mile from Route 213 in the Town of Ulster. The driver, who was alone, was taken to Benedictine Hospital by Fatum's Ambulance with severe head injuries and cuts on one hand. Hurley State Police said that investigation into the one-car accident is continuing. For details of a fatal accident near Boiceville see story on Page 3. (Bechtold photo)

Local Share of Carey Cuts

By Hugh Reynolds

KINGSTON

Ulster County stands to lose $723,417 in state aid to education — with the Kingston Schools Consolidated District losing $256,995 — according to figures released by the governor's office late last week.

Reaction from local legislators has been predictable.

"Carey continues to rape upstate," declared an angry Senator Richard E. Schermerhorn, R-40th Dist.

"These aren't the real numbers," says Assemblyman Maurice D. Hinchey, D-101st Dist.

"The cost of education's been going up every year. Maybe it's time to stop and take a look," said Senator Edwyn E. Mason, R-48th Dist.

Figures, supplied by Hinchey, show that Ulster County received a total of $26,530,298 in state aid to education during the 1975-76 state fiscal year. The governor, as part of an overall $110 million reduction in state aid to education, proposes to cut Ulster's share to $25,801,881. It works out to a 2.7 per cent decrease, based on a county total.

Not all school districts in the county will be cut under the Carey plan, which also makes changes in the school aid formula.

Marlboro's share of state aid will increase from $1,120,179 to $1,144,577 and Ellenville will increase from $1,421,099 to $1,438,017.

For the other seven districts in Ulster County, and for most statewide, it's the opposite story:

- The Kingston district will be reduced from $8,530,674 to $8,273,995.
- Highland drops from $1,868,232 to $1,789,563;
- Rondout goes from $3,012,024 to $2,925,688;
- New Paltz from $1,732,259 to $1,652,554;
- Onteora from $1,926,711 to $1,881,013;
- Saugerties from $4,331,338 to $4,196,134;
- And Wallkill drops from $2,587,792 to $2,500,340.

Hinchey expects those figures to change — upward. "People see these numbers and they get all excited," he maintains. "Why do that when they're not the real numbers? The real numbers will come when the budget's passed."

Schermerhorn, a frequent critic of what he sees as the governor's favoritism toward New York City, sees it again in this situation. "While Carey is reducing aid to education in Rockland, Orange and Ulster counties by $4,371,451 he continues to display his insensitivity to upstate by increasing aid to education to New York City by $12 million.

"Carey has the nerve to make these cuts to our districts. Mr. Governor, the taxpayers of upstate are not asleep," said Schermerhorn.

"I don't know where he got that figure," said Hinchey, referring to the New York City aid to education increase. "I haven't seen it."

Mason said he's seen enough of education aid increases for awhile. "Every year they have these tremendous increases and I can't see where it's paying off," said the senator.

"Some of our kids can't read and write when they finish high school. I'll support aid to education to teach children but not for all these high priced administrators. Let's get the money to the kids," Mason said.

Hinchey said the idea that the state should finance aid to education through the income tax is still alive in the legislature. "The reaction from the governor's office hasn't been too favorable, though," he admits.

Fines Cost Money, Excuses Are Free

"Enclosed please find a check for 99¢ which is for a parking ticket. I put 1¢ in the meter and then found out from the policeman that the meter doesn't take pennies anymore. My penny wasn't returned so enclosed you'll find 99¢ for the ticket."

"Dear Mrs. Cahill: Sorry I'm a bit late with this but I love the first letter you sent. I found it later in the form of a cut-out snowflake my little girl made."

By Matt Spireng

KINGSTON

"Excuses, excuses, always excuses," Mrs. Mary Alice Cahill, Kingston's traffic violations clerk, might well moan judging from the above sample of the correspondence she receives. But while the excuses are fairly frequent, Mrs. Cahill treats them with the degree of good humor they frequently deserve.

"Occasionally we get an argument, but for the most part they do pay them," Mrs. Cahill said of the thousands of parking tickets handed out each year in the City of Kingston.

According to Kingston Police Department records, the men in blue handed out about 20,000 parking tickets last year. The traffic violations bureau collected about $28,000 in fines during 1975.

Of course, not everyone pays promptly even though there is a $1 penalty tacked on to the normal fine if it is not paid within 72 hours of the issuance of the ticket. Not everyone puts up the money promptly even though the city began paying postage on fines mailed in when a new fine schedule went into effect last February ($2 for overtime parking at any of the 900 or so meters; $5 for all other parking violations).

But the city doesn't shut up if the illegal parkers decide not to put up the fine money.

Mrs. Cahill explained that in about two weeks to a month from the issuance of a ticket, depending on the quantity of work, a notice goes out to the car owner warning that if payment isn't received within a week the case will be referred to city court.

Why the warning first? Because sometimes the owner of the car might not have been the person driving when the ticket was issued.

"I would hazard a guess that about 90 per cent answer these notices," Mrs. Cahill said.

And if they don't answer? Then a summons is issued, giving the illegal parker a date to appear in court. Frequently this results in payment prior to the court date.

And if they don't show up in court, then an arrest warrant is issued.

"These are few and far between because most show up," Mrs. Cahill said, noting that only two or three such warrants have had to be issued during the past year or so.

But there are always excuses.

Sometimes the excuses are valid, resulting in a ticket being voided. Mrs. Cahill explained that a ticket can only be voided by the city judges, the chief of police or the deputy chief.

Claims that the meter was broken are frequent — but that excuse is not accepted beyond 24 hours of the issuance of the ticket.

Then there was the man who claimed that when he parked his car before going to bed there was no meter by it, although there was a meter there — and a ticket — the next day.

"I got an 11-page letter from a woman once," Mrs. Cahill said. Another woman said she was buying Halloween masks and was running a 102-degree fever, which caused her to park illegally since she didn't feel well enough to walk far.

Sometimes the fines that are mailed in are accompanied by comments, but not excuses:

Simple comments like: "Ouch."

Elaborate comments like: "Gott im Himmel. It's gettin' ta a point where a feller can't stop off for a quick beer anymore." (From an area band leader, with a drawing of himself on a piece of cardboard in place of the return address.)

There was even a Buffalo man once who wanted Mrs. Cahill to send an apology to his wife because she was upset when her husband got a parking ticket in Kingston at 2 a.m. one morning (apparently when the wife thought he was elsewhere.)

Claim Kidnap Responsibility

CARACAS, Venezuela — A guerrilla organization Saturday night claimed responsibility for the kidnaping of American businessman William Niehhous and said he would go on trial as "an enemy of the people."

The Revolutionary Command in a seven-page letter sent to the newspaper El Nacional, warned police to stay out of the case or Niehous could be executed.

Niehous was drugged and dragged from his home in full view of his wife and three teenaged sons.

Ulster Rioting Flares

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Protestant youths roamed the streets Saturday, hijacking autos and buses and setting off bomb scares. A Protestant group said it kidnaped the brother of the city jail warden.

It was the second day of the worst flareup of Protestant rioting in nearly two years and was in protest against Britain's intention to abolish special privileges for convicted Protestant gunmen in jail.

Spreading Spanish Violence

MADRID, Spain — In spreading labor-related street violence, police fired rubber bullets and teargas to break up a march by some 6,000 workers Saturday night in the northern town of Vitoria.

In downtown Barcelona, small groups of youths smashed car windows in the third consecutive night of incidents there. On Friday, demonstrators firebombed a bank during five hours of street clashes that left three policemen and an undetermined number of protesters injured.

Patching Things Up

KINSHASA, Zaire — The leaders of Zaire and neighboring Angola, in their first meeting since the start of the Angolan civil war, reconciled their differences Saturday and agreed to establish normal relations.

A joint communique said a permanent commission at ministerial level would be set up to achieve "in a spirit of good neighborliness, non interference in each other's internal affairs and the mutual respect of the soverignty of each country."

Money From Kuwait

KUWAIT — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, who said Egypt needed $4 billion to pay off debts to the Soviet Union, will receive $300 million from Kuwait to help bolster Cairo's war-drained economy, government sources said Saturday.

Kuwait was the last stop on Sadat's fund-raising mission to the Persian Gulf states.

The reports came even before Sadat and Sheikh Sabah As Salem As Sabah, ruler of Kuwait, began official talks on bilateral relations and developments in the Middle East.

Jeane Dixon's Forte: News Before It Happens

KINGSTON

World-famous seer Jeane Dixon of Washington, D.C., who foretold the assassination of John F. Kennedy with uncanny accuracy, will write a daily astrology column for the Daily Freeman starting Monday.

In addition, in January and in mid-year, Mrs. Dixon will report her prophecies and predictions concerning persons and movements of national importance.

Looking upon her "sixth sense" as a gift of God, she has never profited financially from her unusual powers, and all money paid to her for the new column goes to her tax-exempt charitable organization, The Children to Children Foundation, designed to help children around the world.

The Dixon horoscope column is different in that she utilizes her psychic powers.

A devout Catholic, who attends Mass each morning, she has often startled the world, foretelling the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the assassination of Mahatma Ghandi, Winston Churchill's defeat in 1945, Truman's election in 1948, the partition of India, the Red takeover of China, Russia's first Sputnik, the rise and fall of Khrushchev and the ecumenical council.

She also predicted the outcome of the seven presidential elections from 1944 to 1968, Reagan's victory in California, the plane crashes that took the lives of Carole Lombard and Dag Hammarkjold, the suicide of Marilyn Monroe in 1966, the ouster of Sukarno and the failure of Communism in Indonesia. In 1968, she predicted the assassination in Los Angeles of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Although Mrs. Dixon has made some predictions that have proved mistaken, the Wall Street Journal reports that "on the whole she has been accurate to an uncanny degree." She ascribes two reasons for her occasional wrong predictions: she saw the correct symbols but misinterpreted them; and, in the case of psychic reactions which have to do with events that are man-made, men change their minds and thus the course of events.

Pretty, But Too Early

The warmest February in more than 100 years in Washington, D.C., is bringing out the famed cherry blossoms prematurely. This bunch was spotted on a tree on Capitol Hill. There is concern that the blossoms will have come and gone by the time the traditional National Cherry Blossom Festival opens April 5. (UPI)

Lecture For Nixon

TSUNG HUA, China (UPI) — Former President Richard M. Nixon, veteran of the finger-punching kitchen debate with late Soviet premier Nikita S. Khrushchev, got a lecture on communism from a Chinese farmer Saturday on the last day of his visit to China.

Nixon, who has been attended by a Chinese doctor and followed by an ambulance on part of his tour of southern China because of fatigue and recurring pain in his leg, was buoyed and appeared revived by the largest welcome he ever received in China upon his arrival in Canton earlier.

Earlier, the couple visited the Jenho People's commune and toured a chicken hatchery, a commune factory, the commune's hospital, a dam site, fields of wheat and rape seed, and the home of a commune peasant.

At the commune, Nixon and his wife visited the home of Yeh Yi-hung and sat around a brown wooden table, with two pictures of party Chairman Mao Tse-tung looking down from the walls.

Yeh served Nixon tea and launched into a lecture on the joys of communism like a political commissar.

Yeh told the former President how bad things had been before the Communist takeover in 1949 and how good everything was now. He said his wife, three sons and grandchild had all they needed.

Nixon cut the farmer's political conversation short, saying, "I'm glad to hear your situation is improving. I hope it will continue to improve and will be even better for your sons and grandsons."

Red Dye Substitute May Be Just as Bad

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration said Saturday it is checking the possibility that the major substitute for the recently banned artificial coloring, Red Dye No. 2, might be linked to cancer.

An FDA announcement said that mice tested with Red Dye No. 40, used in soft drinks, foods, and such cosmetics as lipsticks, had unexpectedly developed lymph cancer.

Red No. 40 is the most widely used substitute for Red No. 2, which was banned from further manufacture or sales Feb. 11, when the U.S. Court of Appeals upheld the FDA's finding that it should not be marketed until more information is obtained about its safety.

Red 2 earlier was linked to cancer in laboratory animals. Manufacturers of the dye asked Chief Justice Warren Burger to lift the ban pending a Court of Appeals hearing April 15, but Burger refused.

FDA said that in a test being conducted for the manufacturer of the dye, Allied Chemical Co., six of 18 mice which died halfway through a 78-week study were found to be suffering from lymph cancer.

The announcement said FDA asked Allied to determine quickly whether other mice in the study had cancer and "the work will require a minimum of 30 days."

Allied Chemical spokesmen had no immediate comment.

An FDA spokesman said the new information was received from Allied Feb. 25, but the announcement was delayed until Saturday so the chemical company could contact users of the dye.

Starting in 1973, manufacturers who had been using Red No. 2 began to switch to Red No. 40 as a result of test findings which indicated that Red No. 2 might be linked to cancer.

The FDA announcement came as a consumer group, Center for Science in the Public Interest, released a letter to FDA Commissioner Alexander M. Schmidt calling for a ban on Red No. 40 and another dye, Orange B, until further studies could be made

Carey Case Is Closed For Lack of Evidence

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Justice Department has found "no credible evidence" to substantiate allegations that Gov. Hugh L. Carey, while a congressman, exerted influence to obtain oil export licenses for the benefit of his brother.

U.S. Attorney General Edward H. Levi, in a letter to Carey released Saturday by the governor's office, said the Justice Department has decided to close its investigation into the matter.

Carey, in a letter of response to Levi, declared, "There was never any doubt in my mind that the legal system of our country could and would seek out the truth and that the conclusion your investigation has reached would be the result."

Levi noted in his letter, dated Friday, that Carey requested last June 24 that the Justice Department investigate published allegations that Carey, while a member of the House of Representatives, exerted influence during 1973 and 1974 with the federal bureaucracy to obtain lucrative oil export licenses for his brother Edward's New England Petroleum Co.

"The United States Attorney's office in the Southern District of New York was already conducting an investigation of this and related allegations and they were assigned to investigate the entire matter," Levi continued.

"I have been recenty been advised ... that an extensive investigation conducted by his office uncovered no credible evidence to substantiate the allegations against you," the attorney general said.

"Consequently, the department has decided to close its investigation."

Carey has said that he appeared voluntarily last Oct. 24 before a Manhattan grand jury and that he testified he made no contacts with federal officials on behalf of the license, that no member of his staff was authorized to do so and it was "inconceivable to me that anyone on my staff would do so."

L.I. Man Killed In 28 Collision

BOICEVILLE

Two cars from Long Island's north shore met head-on in the Catskill Mountains Friday night, killing the 21-year-old driver of one and seriously injuring three other people.

Pronounced dead on arrival at Benedictine Hospital after the Route 28, Boiceville accident was James Tucci of the Suffolk County town of St. James. State police said he died of "massive head and body injuries." Coroner William Keyser was at the scene.

A passenger in his car, Walter E. Daisy, 21, of the same town, reportedly received "massive injuries to the head and fractured both arms and legs on impact. He was on the critical list at Albany Medical Center late Saturday after more than 14 hours of surgery, following initial treatment at Benedictine in Kingston.

A father and son from Glen Cove were in the other car. Driver Theodore R. Hosa, 39, reportedly suffered a fractured left wrist and internal injuries; Theodore Hosa Sr., 69, had multiple fractures to his ribs, hips, and pelvic area. Both were in Benedictine's intensive care unit Saturday.

State police at Hurley described the accident as follows: The Tucci vehicle was traveling west on Route 28, about one mile west of the Route 28A intersection, at an "apparent high rate of speed" along a straightaway when it struck the Hosa car head on in the eastbound lane.

Police said the impact "partially disintegrated both cars." The Hosa vehicle was overturned in the eastbound lane. The Tucci car veered to the right, struck a guidepost, and came to rest on the shoulder of the road.

Trooper R.M. Malloy and Investigator R.C. Cooper conducted the accident investigation. Traffic was re-routed for about an hour after the 7:15 p.m. crash.

'Marksmen' Held

LEEDS

Two juveniles were arrested by state police Saturday afternoon for taking pot shots at passing vehicles on the New York State Thruway between Saugerties and Catskill Friday afternoon.

Their names were not released, as both were judged eligible for youthful offender status. Police said both live in Greene County.

A 15-year-old was charged with juvenile delinquency and released in the custody of his parents, to be petitioned to Greene County Family Court. A 16-year-old was charged with reckless endangerment, first degree, arraigned before Town of Catskill Justice George Carl, and placed in Greene County Jail in lieu of $500 bail.

The incidents occurred about 4:30 p.m., Friday, police said. A Thruway maintenance truck notified the BCI in Leeds that three cars and a Trailways bus had been hit with gunfire while traveling about 3½ miles south of Catskill on the superhighway. There were no personal injuries reported.

Troop T troopers, together with BCI investigators from Troop F in Middletown, made the arrests.

Ms. Barringer and a passenger in the Olsen car, Mary Martin, 47, were both treated for injuries and released from the hospital. George Olsen was ejected from his car, but was uninjured. Deputies said investigation is continuing.

Ford Brands Cuba 'International Outlaw'

MIAMI (UPI) — President Ford won cheering, foot-stomping approval from more than 1,000 Latins newly-naturalized as American citizens Saturday when he branded Cuba an "international outlaw" and warned Fidel Castro against armed aggression in the Western Hemisphere.

Ford, on a two-day Florida campaign swing for the state's March 9 primary, said Castro committed "a flagrant act of aggression" by sending a 12,000-man expeditionary force into Angola.

The audience of naturalized citizens, most of them Cuban refugees, broke into thunderous cheers of "Viva Ford!" Women kissed him as he mingled with the crowd.

The President's campaign swing included a grueling seven-hour motorcade from Palm Beach to Fort Lauderdale Saturday afternoon.

Ford visited with voters in shopping malls, dropped in on a church carnival, and made many other stops to shake hands with well wishers and deliver impromptu talks. He lectured about freedom to have a job and freedom from inflation, and said he was convinced his campaign now has "momentum."

Heavy rains soaked the President's route, but he seemed not to mind — pressing ahead with his campaigning although his suit was drenched and water frequently poured down his face as he rode in an open limousine.

"My administration will have nothing to do with the Cuba of Fidel Castro," said Ford, who hopes to make Florida his second early primary victory over Ronald Reagan. "It is a regime of aggression... (it) is acting as an international outlaw."

Ford's tough anti-Castro talk was delivered at a naturalization ceremony at Dade County Auditorium, where 1,121 Latins were sworn in as American citizens. In somber tones he declared:

"I solemnly warn Fidel Castro against any temptation to armed intervention in the Western Hemisphere," Ford said. "Let his regime or any like-minded government, be assured that the United States would take the appropriate measures."

Ford was repeatedly interrupted by applause while he spoke, but when he stepped from the podium and started among the crowd, the emotional dam burst. Women grabbed and kissed him and cheers of "Viva Ford! Viva Ford!" rang through the hall.

One gray haired woman, Maria Fernandez, broke into tears as Ford approached her. She sobbed and wrapped her arms around the sweating President, who also seemed caught up in the emotion.

Hearst Trial . . . Focus on Couch

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Patricia Hearst trial is on the psychiatrist's couch.

Three experts on brainwashing followed the 22-year-old newspaper heiress to the stand and spent the past week describing how she was turned into a bank robber and fugitive by the same techniques used against prisoners of war.

Their analysis: Fifty-seven days in a tiny closet and repeated threats of death converted Miss Hearst into a completely dependent "child" eager to please her kidnapers.

The doctors got their own examination from prosecuting attorneys, who hammered away at the possibility that the defendant picked up her story from their questions and then fooled them about her conversion to terrorism.

Prosecutor David Bancroft's cross-examination also brought out that Miss Hearst smoked marijuana and used LSD and mescaline prior to her kidnaping and that she refused to discuss with psychiatrists a "lost year" in her underground life.

A psychologist will conclude the defense's testimony on Miss Hearst's mental state Monday. But three prosecution specialists are in the wings ready to renew "the battle of the psychiatrists" after F. Lee Bailey rests his case.

The defense attorney said he hoped to wrap up Monday following psychologist Margaret Singer's testimony on tests Miss Hearst took after her capture and an explanation by experts of six blown-up photos he introduced just before the weekend recess.

The blowups, made from surveillance films taken during the April 15, 1974, robbery of a Hibernia Bank branch in San Francisco, show Miss Hearst with her mouth open at the moment Nancy Ling Perry shot two bank customers. The defense contends the photos show the look is one of "horror" and not a smile.

Bailey told U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter Friday that he was abandoning attempts to get favorable lie detector test results on Miss Hearst before the jury because it could hamper an appeal if she is convicted.

Before the psychiatrists took over the trial last week, the defendant reluctantly returned to the stand for a final morning of questioning after Carter ruled the prosecution could cross examine her about the missing year in her underground life and about a jail conversation with an old friend three days after her capture.

Miss Hearst took the 5th Amendment 42 times before the jury to avoid answering any questions about the period between September 1974 and September 1975. Bailey indicated she was claiming her constitutional right against self-incrimination in a fatal bank robbery in Carmichael, Calif., in April, 1975.

She admitted telling school chum Patricia Tobin at a jail meeting that any statement she would make would have a "revolutionary feminist perspective" and that she was "pissed off" over being captured. But Miss Hearst insisted she was spoke out of fear of SLA member Emily Harris.

Bailey then called psychiatrists Louis J. West of UCLA, Martin T. Orne of the Institute of Pennsylvania Hospitals and Robert Jay Lifton of Yale, all experts on "coercive persuasion" — the psychological jargon for brainwashing.

They all diagnosed Miss Hearst as suffering from "traumatic neurosis" brought on by the 57 days she spent locked in tiny closets immediately after her kidnaping.

The psychiatrists, all of whom had examined prisoners of war or captives of the Chinese Communists, said she showed a "survivor syndrome" last fall similar to that of returning POWs.

West testified that Miss Hearst's IQ dropped 20 points during her captivity and she developed a "child-like dependency on her captors" because she was terrorized.

He recalled her opening fire at a Los Angeles sporting goods store in May of 1974 to rescue William and Emily Harris, two of her kidnapers.

"Her first words when the Harrises got in the van were, 'Did I do it right?'" said West. "She was like a child performing for parents."

Joining Hands for the Handicapped

Fund raising festivities which will aid area handicapped persons take in Bicentennial trips to Boston and other historical and entertaining areas, are being planned by (L) Kenneth F. Coombs, president of Handicapped in Action; Betty Bakor, HIA associate president; Richard Walker Sr. and Richard Walker Jr., proprietors of Lagnaf Lounge in Kingston. (Freeman photo)

HIA Campaign is Underway

KINGSTON — Handicapped in Action (HIA) has launched its most intensive community-wide fund raising campaign to help finance a season-long schedule of recreational and social activities that will culminate with a Bicentennial trip to Boston.

One local business has already thrown its weight behind HIA's fund drive: Lagnaf Lounge at Foxhall and Hasbrouck Avenues will host a buffet dinner on Sunday, March 14 at 6 p.m. on behalf of the organization. The event is open to the public, and is intended to give residents an opportunity to meet with HIA members and to learn more about the programs that are sponsored by the group.

"We welcome and desperately need the assistnace of the non-handicapped people in the community," said HIA president Kenneth Coombs, "we're actually growing too fast for ourselves."

HIA was conceived by a group of "clients" employed at Gateway Industries, but has since grown to include a wide spectrum of the county's handicapped community and helps sponsor a full range of activities.

According to Coombs, it is the organization's steady growth that has drained its financial resources. As more people join, the demand for varied activities increases. Funds, however, haven't kept pace with the demand.

Most of the organization's members pay dues but, because many of the handicapped are unemployed, no one is excluded from the group because of the inability to pay.

"We estimate that we can continue our programs and activities for the year on a budget of $5,000," said Coombs, "I think we've shown that we can run our programs without a big budget and a large bureaucracy." The problem: HIA's treasury now stand at $250.

Coombs noted that the group still isn't sure how best to raise the funds it needs for this year's programs, and for that reason it is seeking advice and counsel from the business community.

Help has come so far from a few businesses and several civic and fraternal organizations. The group has given a wide berth to government-supported programs, since it is the spectre of state control and institutionalization that the independant-minded handicapped adults are trying to avoid.

This year's schedule of events for HIA includes trips to New York City for the Ice Capades and baseball games, monthly social gatherings, an April dinner-dance and bus trips to sites of interest in the Mid-Hudson Valley.

But the highlight of the year will come in late September, when 44 of the handicapped adults travel to Boston, Mass. for a three-day Bicentennial visit. The group has rented a home from the YWCA in Lowell, Mass. and will spend part of the time visiting historic sites in the Boston area.

That event, like many others conducted by HIA, will be accomplished with the direction and assistance of the Association for Retarded Children and the Recreation Association for the Handicapped.

Ulster County Is Declared 'A Disaster Area' . . . SBA

WASHINGTON, D.C. — As a result of the damage to Ulster County from flooding caused by heavy rains, Jan. 27-29, the Small Business Administration in Washington, D.C., has declared the county a disaster area.

The request for the designation was made by Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr., 25th Dist. who said the closing date for applications to SBA is April 28.

Interest on SBA disaster loans has been set at 6% per cent. Homeowners and businessmen who suffered damage when flooding was caused by ice jams and the rains, are eligible for the loans.

Earlier Ulster County Civil Defense Director John Adsit said requests for SBA loans would be withdrawn because it was felt that Ulster could not qualify for the disaster funds since the amount of damage to those who were not insured was less than $10,000. At the same time, Ulster County Red Cross estimated damage to civilian properties at about $155,000

In the wake of the storm and the havoc is wrought, the Lower Esopus Waterways Committee, a viable entity at one time, resurfaced and is seeking an injunction to prevent the City of Kingston and Fish from proceeding with their push for the long-delayed Esopus Creek Flood Control Project. The committee wants to see all residents along the creek protected rather than just business interests

Field Study Augments UCCC

STONE RIDGE

A two-week field study in Florida has augmented campus studies for 11 Ulster County Community College students.

The students, members of the Earth Science Club, went south during the January intersession accompanied by Lawrence R. Matson, assistant professor of Earth Sciences and club advisor. The trip was supported by funds from the Student Government Organization and student's own contributions.

Students studied the environment of the West Sambo Reef seven miles offshore from Key West. Two members of the group, certified scuba divers, collected reef-talus samples for later study at the college.

The students also attended a space science lecture, studied space museum exhibits, and took a two-hour bus tour of the rocket launching facilities and vehicle assembly building at the Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral.

Other activities included a study of the marine exhibits at the Key West Aquarium, the new Ocean Exhibit Hall at Virginia Key, and sampling several types of Florida beach sand for later study and use at the college.

This was the club's third out-of-state educational trip. In 1974 they studied, camped and hiked in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, studied earth science exhibits at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C., and visited the mining area at Franklin and Sterling Hills, N.J. In 1975 they studied the beach environment of Cape Hatteras, N.C., collected fossils with a consultant from the Maryland Academy of Science and again visited the earth sciences exhibits of the Smithsonian Institute.

Canine Crackdown In Woodstock

WOODSTOCK

A tougher approach to negligent dog owners is being instituted by the Woodstock Town Board, according to a news release.

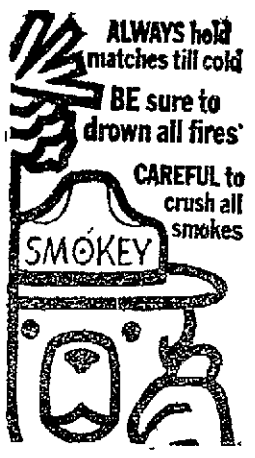

The policy of enforcement cooperation with dog warden Harold Short, senior constable Bill Waterous, and the town justices.

Said the release," . . . owners of licensed dogs will be issued court appearance tickets for violations of the dog ordinance when their dog has been picked up by the warden. The town board has informed the two justices of its intention to have this law more strictly enforced, and suggested the justices consider increasing fines for repeated offenders."

Areas of worst offense named were at the center of town and in Bearsville, with rural dog packs coming in for criticism.

Stating they feel the public wants stricter enforcement of the 1970 ordinance, the board members note that offenders in the past have typically been fined only the mandatory $5 "cost of seizure" fee and have not even been charged for the $3 daily cost of care and feeding.

Special License Proposed

ALBANY

Noting that in many cases, the only acceptable form of identification is a valid driver's license, State Senator Richard E. Schermerhorn, R-40th Dist., has introduced legislation that would enable non-drivers to obtain a special license to be used solely for purposes of identification.

Arguing that "non-drivers are at a severe handicap in establishing identity for commercial purposes where a drivers license is usually demanded," Schermerhorn said, "A non-driver's birth certificate or Social Security card are usually not acceptable when paying for goods or services."

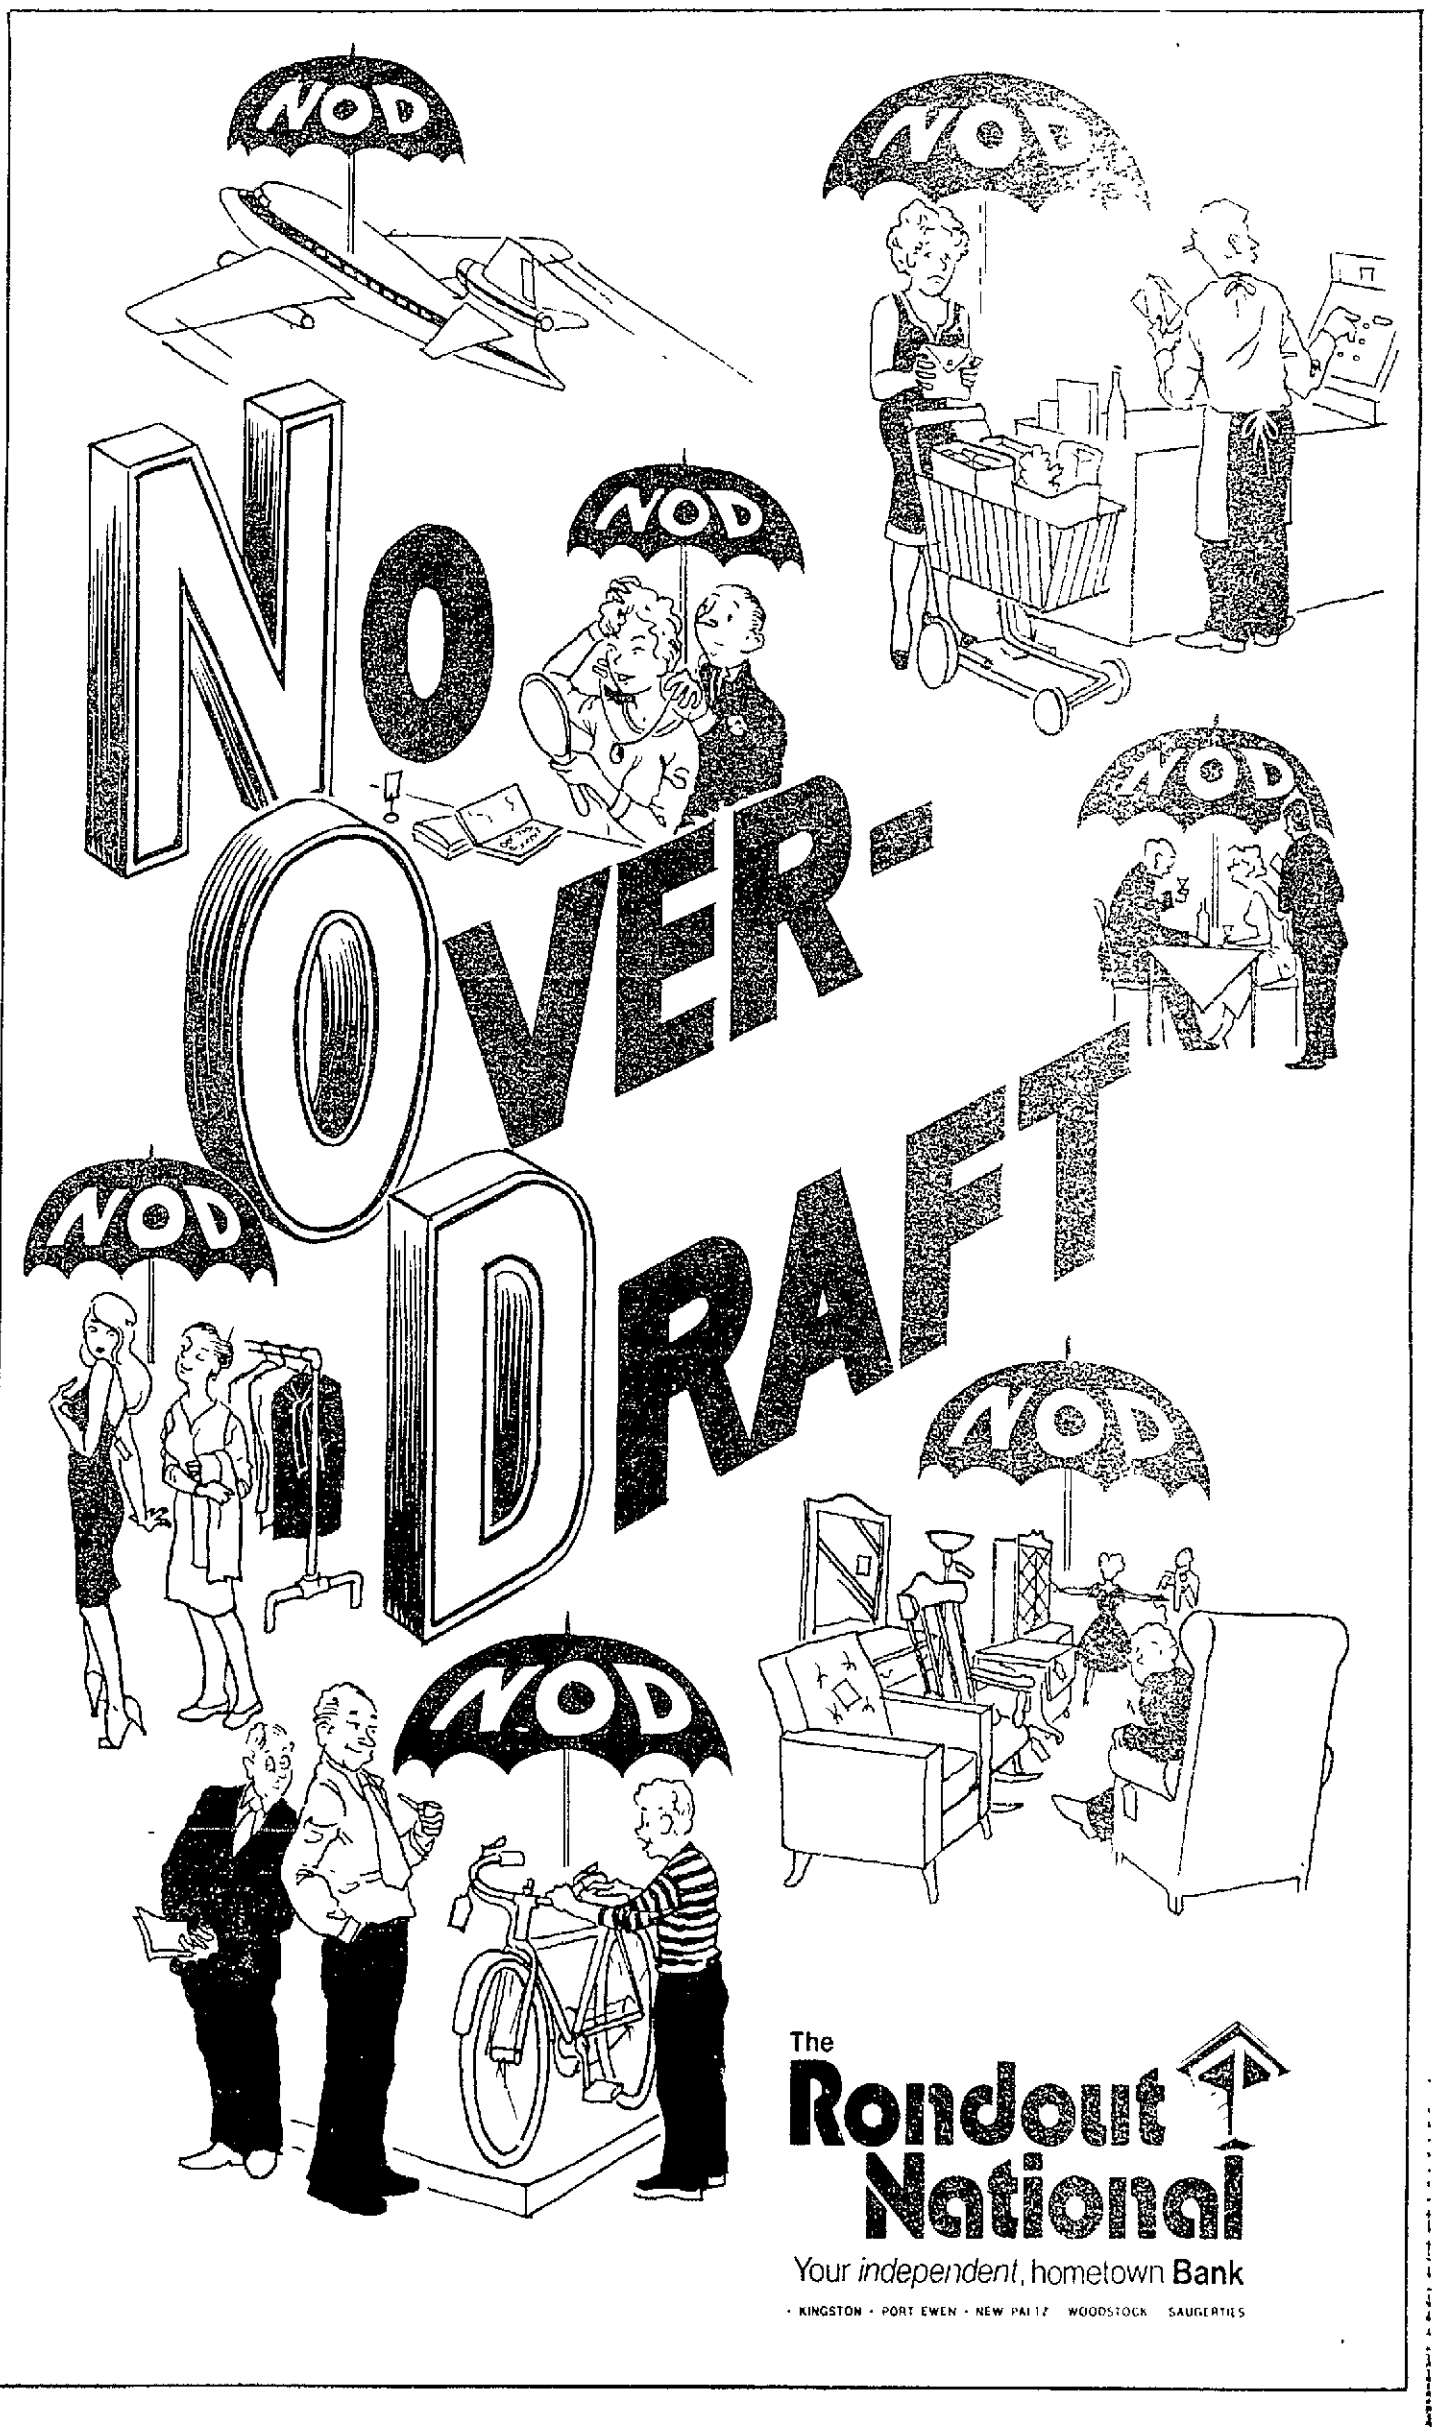

"This severe disadvantage," Schermerhorn said, "Can be alleviated through the issuance of non-driver ID cards, similar to licenses, which will allow the non-driver to facilitate with more ease commercial transactions requiring driver-type identification."

The 'Lulu' Question

The legislative "lulus" have long been a bad taste in the mouths of those of us who have to ante up more taxes to cover them. On the otherhand, to some of the Albany legislators these 11th hour checks "in lieu of expenses" are indeed sweet tasting.

The Freeman seeks to sound out the readers on this vital question —do you believe these extra payments (lulus) are unlawful and that they should be discontinued?

Beginning today, and continuing through the month, we're printing a reply form in order to find out what our readers think The replies will be forwarded to our representatives in Albany

Editor, The Freeman:
Dear Editor
I believe that extra "lulu" payments, stipends or bonuses for legislators should be made unlawful and discontined this year. The salaries, expenses, travel pay, pension system and other fringe benefits are enough If other areas of state government have to cut back, why not legislators?

Address.....

MAIL OR DELIVER TO: Editor, The Daily Freeman, 79 Hurley Avenue, Kingston, N.Y. 12401.

We will forward your replies to our representatives in Albany.

Fictitious Knowledge

Dear Editor
I was pleased to read of your support of Conservation Commissioner Ogden Reid on his stand to clean PCBs from the Hudson, based on it being a national stand

However, in you next to last paragraph you state "Sure it might cut the margin of profit for GE Stockholders Maybe they would have to settle for $32 6 million instead of $33 9 (fictitious figures) That s really too bad

Apparently your knowledge of stocks and investment too is fictitious because—G E Stock sold today on the New York Stock Exchange for $53 60 per share The current dividend per share is $1 60 per year my non fictitious arithmetic figures this to be less than 3 per cent return No wonder they can t float new stock for research you allude to

Pedestrian Mall

Dear Editor
It seems to me that what with all the money that was spent in the Pike Plan that the project could be kept as planned with no parking in the area Why couldn't that be kept as a Mall with just pedestrians It could be so beautiful—what with this being a Bicentennial year Cars and meters spoil the whole picture and trying to drive through the Wall and North Front Street sections is a joke I'd rather see it kept separate and traffic re routed I m sure all the cars parked in the Wall Street area blocking traffic don't belong to elderly people I'm sure those elderly people able to go shopping wouldn't mind walking a few extra steps in order to have a peaceful spot to shop without all the cars I know I would

Unfortunate Situation

Dear Editor
I was dismayed to read of Mrs Blanc and her organization's difficulties in contacting me I am sorry they felt it necessary to obtain public attention for themselves by attacking me and attributing comments to me which I never expressed in public or private

At no time have I ever questioned the conduct or character of Judges Feeney and Elwyn In fact, I seconded the nomination of Judge Feeney at the convention Obviously I would never have done so if there had been any question in my mind regarding his integrity, character and abilities I have the utmost respect for the job these men are doing for Ulster County

My duties as a State Senator require that I be in Albany as well as the three counties which I represent and many times it is difficult to reach me personally However, It is beyond my comprehension that if Mrs Blanc requested to see me and/or speak to me personally that my staff would not have informed me of such a request I must assume that subsequent calls were not made

I find it unfortunate that this situation has become involved in sensationalism Mrs Blanc I have three district offices, one of which is in Kingston, and an Albany office and if you would like to discuss this further I would suggest you contact one of these offices

Sincerely,
RICHARD E SCHERMERHORN

Favors Parking

Dear Editor

While winding my way down New Market Street in Poughkeepsie the other day searching for a parking spot, the parking situation here in Kingston popped into my mind If I could only find a vacant spot, just for fifteen minutes or so I m just picking up an alteration from a shop on the Mall

The Mall I hate it I can t tell you when I've been there last In fact when I lived in Poughkeepsie I think there was a period of time of about 8 months between my visits to the Mall Prior to that I had shopped downtown (in Kingston it s uptown) almost exclusively Most everyone did Granted, the shopping centers took some shoppers away because of the availability of parking places Now, since Main street has been blocked off (Oh it looks beautiful) I know of only a few who venture there occasionally Too bad

In Ms Van Vlierden's letter against uptown parking the other evening she failed to mention the person who is running a quick errand or picking up an alteration or telephone order (quite a popular means of shopping today) I am healthy, able bodied and manage to get around quite well but greatly dislike parking two blocks away from a five minute errand It takes me longer to walk where I m walking than to do what I'm doing

If a twenty minute parking rule was put in effect and enforced, many, many shoppers could utilize those forty available parking spots I'm with you, Mayor Thanks

Yours truly,

A 'Lulu' Letter

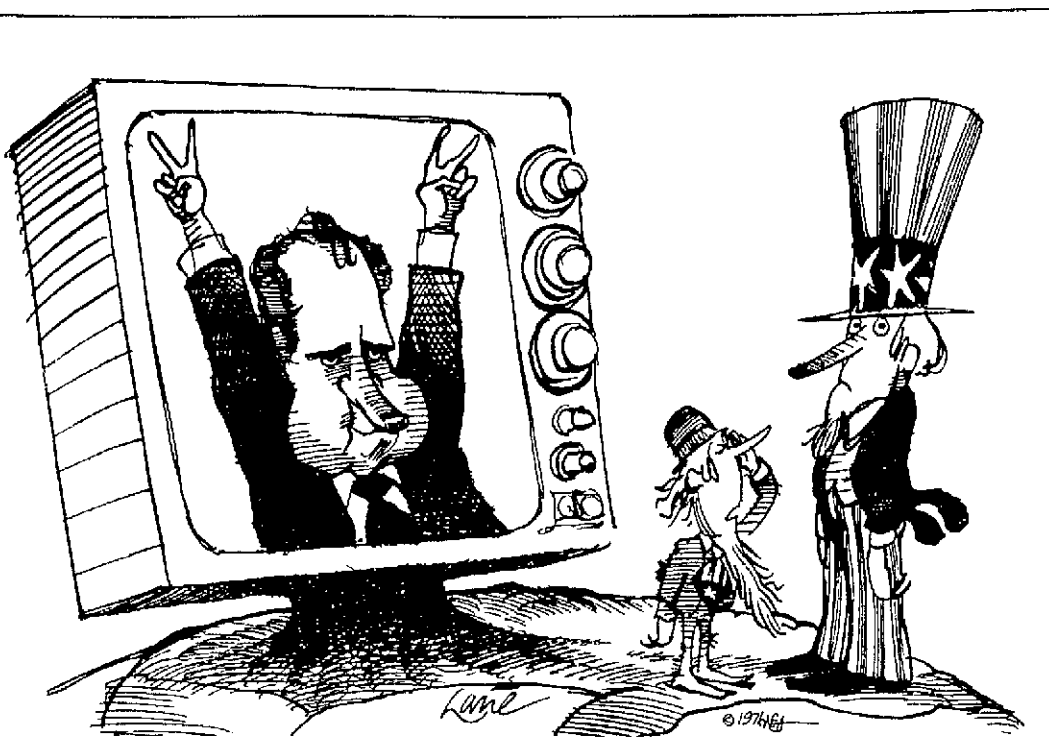

Dear Editor
Attached is a copy of my reply to a letter from Mr Harold Van Allen which appeared in the Daily Freeman
Harold Van Allen
Hurley Heights
Kingston, New York 12401
Dear Mr Van Allen
Let me thank you for you letter on the subject of "Lulu" payments to state legislators, in which you express your feeling that this is neither a fair nor justifiable practice and that it imposes an unnecessary additional burden on the taxpayers of this state

I could not agree with you more wholeheartedly Let me assure you that not only am I not a recipient of a "Lulu" but I have spoken out against them on many occasions in the past and will continue to do so in the future

You are quite right in charging that any method of supplementary payment which is not supported by a carefully supervised voucher system certainly indicates a lack of fiscal responsibility As a taxpayer you have a right to demand strict accountability from those serving you in government

As you are probably aware, we were able last year to make several important changes in the rules of the Assembly I give you my pledge that I will continue to work for a more responsible legislature This includes not only the elimination of "Lulus" but also the adoption of other reforms that will result in greater efficiency in government and savings to the taxpayers

Sincerely yours,
MAURICE D HINCHEY
Member of Assembly

Peking Wants U.S. Troops in Korea

WASHINGTON — Mainland China, the most doctrinaire of all communist countries, has been sending the United States strong signals that it wants those "imperialist" U S troops to remain in South Korea

There has been no miraculous change in old Chairman Mao Tse tung's devotion to world revolution Rather, the Chinese are more apprehensive about a Soviet buildup than the American presence in Korea

The Chinese view, as it has emerged from private discussions, is that the 43,000 U S troops should deter North Korea's recklessly ambitious Kim Il sung from attacking South Korea

If the United States should withdraw its troops, on the other hand, Kim might be tempted to try unifying Korea by force This would give the Soviets an excuse to move heavily into Korea

More than a million Soviet soldiers already line the 4,150-mile border between Russia and China A Soviet move into Korea would tighten the vise

The Korean peninsula is also a dagger pointing at the heart of Japan A communist takeover in Korea, therefore, could upset the stability in Asia and push Japan into rearming

In the Chinese view, it would be far better to have a few thousand GIs in South Korea

The first clear signals from China were picked up by Sen Charles Percy, R -Ill , during a visit to Peking last August Recalling his talks with Chinese Foreign Minister Chiao Kuanhua, Percy told us "On the surface, he was for a unified Korea "

But the Chinese let Percy and his colleagues know subtly that they "had no real objection" to the U S military presence in South Korea "In broad terms, they do not object to U S forces in places where the Russians would move in," Percy explained

Another congressional delegation led by Rep John Anderson, R -Ill , came back with a similar feeling An "abrupt withdrawal" from South Korea, Anderson told us, "would worry the Chinese tremendously "

The most recent congressional visitors to China, led by Rep Margaret Heckler, R -Mass , and Patsy Mink, D -Hawaii, held long talks with top Chinese leaders in January

Ms Mink put the South Korean question bluntly to the Chinese who, at first, replied with the usual polemic on "imperialism' and "intervention ' But the line quietly switched as the conversation progressed

According to two people who were present, the Chinese made clear they didn't want the United States to pull out of South Korea abruptly Ms Heckler, who was also present, felt the Chinese hints were much more veiled than this

Meanwhile, members of the Chinese delegation in Washington have let U S policymakers know informally that they want the United States to stay in Korea One U S official told us a Chinese diplomat informed him explicitly that China "is not concerned with the U S troops "

"They have no objection at all ' the official told us "In fact, they even said we ought to expand our naval base at Diego Garcia " This is an Indian Ocean base, which the United States is building to counter Soviet naval expansion into these waters

Footnote The delicate position of the Chinese surfaced last fall in the United Nations A few weeks after the private assurance to the Percy group that a U S military presence was acceptable in South Korea, the Chinese foreign minister issued a public demand for a U S troop withdrawal The purpose, of course, was to keep Kim Il sung from turning to the Soviets for more support

PIPELINE LEAD? There is concern that an earthquake or explosion could burst the Alaska pipeline, causing hundreds of thousands of barrels of crude oil to pour into Alaska's virgin wilderness

Yet an automatic system, which would shut down the pipeline's oil flow under abnormal conditions, has been eliminated from the construction plans

These plans were approved by the Interior Department and subjected to intense public scrutiny Now they have been quietly changed

We have obtained copies of portions of the Alyeska consortium's revised plans, which show this important oil leak prevention system has been deleted

Alyeska officials told us the system was deleted because it is no longer necessary They have a better system which has no need for automatic controls, they said

But Ray Smith an environmental engineer who helped the Interior Department review the original plans feels the deletion could mean massive oil spills in case of a break in the pipeline In his opinion, Alyeska is guilty of a gross violation of the public trust

The consortium upon learning that Smith had passed some of the revised pipeline plans to us threatened to take him to court for harassment and then offered to buy his copies of the plans from him

Footnote Interior officials insist the changes in the pipeline plans don't violate any of the environmental stipulations which Alyeska is required to follow

Understanding Hoover Via Rowan

The whole Hoover business is getting out of hand One of the reasons for it is the partisanship of the headlining Congressional investigating committees, which make one think back wistfully on the rough justice of those Nixonites engaged in maximizing the incumbency Now hear this Carl Rowan the prominent black journalist and former director of the United States Information Agency, has actually suggested that the evidence mounts that the Federal Bureau of Investigation, under Hoover's leadership, connived in the assassination of Martin Luther King

I don't think Joe McCarthy ever made an allegation quite so breathtaking They ran McCarthy out of town with wet towels All that has happened to Carl Rowan so far as I can see, is that he has received a quiet letter from Ladislas Farrago, the writer, biographer of General Patton, who has been spending the last several years preparing an authoritative biography of J Edgar Hoover Rowan would probably have preferred the towels

Farrago wrote to Rowan to say, in effect

Look, 1) in 1967 there was a genuine national concern over the company (I do not mean sexual) Dr King was keeping

2) During that period there were periodic threats against the life of Dr King These came in part from white fanatics, against whom the FBI was generally able to contend — by bugging certain telephones, keeping some people under surveillance, penetrating their organizations, and providing King with special protections But it became more and more difficult to protect him against the black extremists — such as, for instance, had assassinated Malcolm X — because the hostility to the FBI engendered by King and a few black extremists had made the work of the FBI extremely difficult in tight black circles

3) Moreover, Rowan, back in 1967, was one of the black leaders who knew these facts His idolatry of Dr King is strictly a posthumous affair Mr Farrago reminded Mr Rowan of an article published in September, 1967, in the Reader's Digest. Martin Luther King is saying "utterly irresponsible things, ' Rowan wrote then After the speech in which King compared Americans in Vietnam to the concentration camp masters of Nazi Germany, Rowan said, "Reaction across the nation and around the world was immediate and explosive Radios Moscow and Peking picked up King s words and fed them to distant capitals In the White House, a Presidential aide shouted, 'My God, King has given a speech on Vietnam that goes right down the Communist line!' "

Rowan then gave a list of liberal leaders who had chided King on his excesses — Bunche, Brooks, Freedom House, The Washington Post.

Rowan went further "King," he analyzed, "seemed to develop an exaggerated appraisal of how much he and his crisis techniques were responsible for the race relations progress that had been made " And he warned

"Negroes had in fact begun to grow uneasy about King He no longer seemed to be the selfless leader of the 1950 s " His visits to the jail looked like publicity stunts

Why did King move the civil rights issue into foreign policy? ' Why did King ' in adopting the Communist line, ' reject the advice of his old civil rights colleagues? Some say it was a matter of ego Others revived a more sinister speculation that had been whispered around Capitol Hill and in the nation s newsrooms for more than two years — talk of Communists influencing the actions and words of the young minister This talk disturbed other civil rights leaders more than anything else

And — may we not assume? — disturbed the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation? Carl Rowan would perhaps have an easier time understanding the whole mess if he went back to read what he was himself writing about it at the time of Hoover's maximum concern

Unionization of the Armed Forces

WASHINGTON — There is a lot of talk that American unions are seriously considering organizing members of the armed forces Rumor has it that the unionization of military personnel will begin at the end of the year

I can't see anything wrong with this, except that if the unions in the military get into job classifications it may be harder for our soldiers, sailors and marines to fight another war

Had our fighting boys been organized during World War II this is what might have happened

The scene is aboard a battleship It has been hit by the Japanese and several sailors have been knocked out of action

A chaplain realizes the seriousness of the situation and starts passing shells to the gunners as he sings, "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition "

The shop steward comes up to him "I'm sorry, Padre, but you can't pass shells to the gunner You're not a member of the Ammunition Carrier's Local No 4 "

"But," the chaplain says, "there aren't enough men to pass the ammunition so we'll all be free "

"That's the Navy's fault They didn't hire enough carriers By passing shells to the gunner, you are taking a job away from someone who needs it The union rules specifically say that chaplains must pray and that's it "

"All right, give me my Bible and I'll start to pray "

"I can't touch your Bible Only members of the Boatswain's Union can move a Bible from one place to another "

"Oh, for God's sakes All right, I'll sing, 'Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition.'"

'I'm sorry, Padre, if you're going to sing you'll need at least 10 musicians, and since this action is taking place at night they will have to be paid overtime after midnight "

"We're at General Quarters Where am I going to get 10 musicians?"

"You can use a phonograph, but you'll have to pay for a standby orchestra "

"It doesn't seem to make any difference," the chaplain says, "we're sinking I'm putting on my life jacket '

"You can't put on your life jacket, Padre Members of the Deckhand Dresser's Guild are the only ones who can put on your life jacket for you "

"When the ship sinks, is it all right to swim?"

"Yes, but if you get into a lifeboat you can't row That job classification has been given to the Pastry Chef's Local 135 "

The soldiers may also find themselves in trouble Cpl Barney McNeil is manning a machine gun at Bastogne As each wave of Germans attack McNeil fires away, dropping them in their tracks Sgt Roy Bender, shop steward for the Machine Gun and Mortar Firer's Union, crawls over to him

"What do you think you're doing, Barney?"

"I'm killing Germans," Barney says, letting another blast go

'You re killing too many Germans!" Bender shouts at him "Slow up or the other guys will think you're an eager beaver Our contract says we're not supposed to kill more than 10 Germans a day I can see a hundred bodies over there "

"But dammit, we have to win the war, ' Barney protests

"Listen, you dope, if you kill 100 Germans in an hour the Army will expect us all to kill 100 Germans in the same time Relax, go have a cigarette or get into a crap game somewhere In an hour we'll go into overtime and then you can kill some more Germans if you want to "

"Bull --, I'm going to win me a Congressional Medal of Honor," Barney says

"You try it and I'll bring you up on charges with the union board They can fine you three months pay for winning a medal and making the rest of us look bad "

"Here they come again!" Barney says, raking the horizon with bullets

Sgt Bender is hit in the shoulder by a German fragment "I'm hit, Barney! Stop the bleeding "

"I'm sorry, Sarge If I touched you the Corpsmen's Union would never forgive me "

Berry's World

" Oh, nothing much! What's new with you since I saw you last?"

Gallup Poll

$177 Weekly Now Needed by Family of Four

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J.

A family of four needs a record $177 per week to take ends meet, according to the public's current estimate of living costs.

The impact of inflation is dramatically revealed by the fact that one year ago the comparable figure was $161, while two years ago the amount specified was $152. In 1937, the year this measurement was started, the estimate for a family of four was only $30 per week.

These dollar estimates are based upon samples of the U.S. adult, civilian nonfarm population. The current figure of $177 is the median of the responses to the following question (the "median" is a type of average):

"What is the smallest amount of money a family of four (husband, wife, and two children) needs each week to get along in this community?"

This cost of living index is based upon the respondants' estimates, while the federal government's cost of living statistics are based upon retail prices and price changes.

Residents of the largest cities (one million and over) give a considerably higher figure ($201) than do persons living in smaller communities and rural areas.

Those in families where the head of the household is in the professions, business or in other white-collar professions estimate it takes $200 per week for a family of four to get along in their communities. This figure exceeds the average estimate of blue-collar families, which is $176.

The following teble shows the highlights of the national trend since the first measurement in 1937:

Minimum Amount Needed by Family of Four (Nonfarm families)

	Medians
1937	$ 30
1947	$ 43

1971	$ 127
1973	$ 149
1974	$ 152
1975	$ 161
1976	$ 177

The table above shows the rapid rate of growth in the public's cost-of-living estimates and the decrease in the value of the dollar. In the decade 1937 to 1947, the amount increased by $13. In the next decade, 1947 to 1957, the figure went up by $29. And, in less than a decade, between 1967 and the latest (1976) survey, the amount has climbed $76, an increase of 75 per cent over the 1967 figure.

The following table shows the results by population groups:

The Politics of Sex

WASHINGTON—If last week's presidential horse race in New Hampshire and this week's race in Massachusetts prove nothing more, they confirm that sex will be a political issue in 1976 and that politicians quite capable of handling issues of war and peace are utterly confused about what to do with the issue of sex.

Inasmuch as the women's rights movement gave birth, you might say, to the sex issue, the most obvious source of confusion lies in the fact that all the serious presidential candidates are men.

The deeper trouble with sex as a political issue, however, is that it involves moral and thus emotional and religious judgments. And the deepest root of the trouble is that sex is a very personal and thus a highly ambiguous issue and nothing leaves politicians so confused as ambiguity.

The sex issue raised its head in New Hampshire and Massachusetts as the abortion issue and every Democratic and Republican candidate in the presidential primaries took a position because he was forced to do do by women's groups, by the Catholic Church and by Mrs Ellen McCormack, the Catholic anti-abortionist candidate who's running only to force the issue.

Confused and uncertain, President Ford and almost all the Democrats retreated into ambiguity, which is no position. Ford said the Supreme Court "went too far" in striking down laws that prevented women from getting abortions. But Ford also said he's against a constitutional amendment that would reverse the Supreme Court's pro-abortion decision.

Democrats Jimmy Carter, Birch Bayh, Henry Jackson, Morris Udall and Fred Harris all have taken equally ambiguous positions.

Ford and the others may or may not have personal feelings for or against abortion, but their real feelings have nothing to do with public positions.

Ford and the rest felt the political heat of well-organized, well-financed anti-abortionists. They had to say something What they said was dictated by the political belief that the anti-abortionists are a noisy minority of voters and that the silent majority of voters in New Hampshire, Massachusetts and the rest of America—including Catholic voters—favors abortion. The voting booth is not the confession box.

Thus, to most of the Republican and Democratic presidential candidates, the safest political position on abortion is no position. Anyway, it seems quite unlikely that any candidate will win or lose simply on the basis of his position on abortion.

Unfortunately, however, that doesn't solve the problem. The sex issue is bigger than the abortion issue and, hoever much most politicians would like to avoid it,the sex issue is becoming increasingly politicized in 1976.

Directly or indirectly, the women's rights movement has given birth to many offspring with moral and thus emotional and even religious attributes. For instance, since abortion was legalized by the Supreme Court, women's groups are demanding that, as a matter of principle, prostitution must be legalized. Many members of Congress nowadays are receiving mail from gay groups demending not only decriminalization of homosexual conduct between consenting adults but all kinds of other equal rights for gays

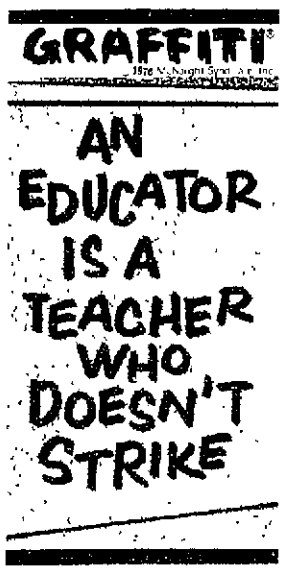

If the flood of pornography in America is not a direct offspring of the women's right movement, pornography nonetheless is another current in the rushing stream of private rights and public permissiveness that has inundated moral standards of an earlier day

While most politicians are confused by and thus would like to ignore the sex issue, the issue in fact is becoming a polarizing kind of political confrontation.

Two presidential candidates, Republican Ronald Reagan and Democrat George Wallace, are unambiguous on the abortion issue They are against abortion and for a constitutional amendment. Both are on the extreme right of their parties and both stand for a containment of private rights and public permissiveness and for a return to moral standards of another day.

No presidential candidate yet has appeared on the extreme left to champion abortion and argue openly for greater private rights and public permissiveness, perhaps because liberal George McGovern in 1972 ran on a platform of "amnesty, abortion and acid" and was soundly defeated

But sex will be an issue in 1976 and, in the voting booth if not the confession box, the people will decide whether sex marches on.

Inside Report

Florida A Must for Reagan

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON—Highly favorable New Hampshire poll results a week before the primary led Ronald Reagan into miscalculations that magnify the impact of President Ford's eyelash win Tuesday and dictate tactical campaign changes that may appear a policy of desperation.

The 11th hour poll results, showing an eight-percentage-point Reagan lead, promptly leaked throughout Republican political circles. More important, that seemingly comfortable cushion persuaded the Reagan high command not to retaliate in kind against the President's suprisingly cutting anti-Reagan remarks on his nationally televised news conference Feb. 17.

The impact of those decisions could be fateful. By exciting such high expectations, the Reaganites have puffed up the President's two-percentage-point squeaker. Consequently, by Wednesday morning Reagan supporters—both on and off his campaign staff—were pleading for Reagan to assault the Ford presidential record between now and the March 9 Florida primary. But criticism that might have been effective against Mr. Ford in New Hampshire last week may seem a desperate last stand in Florida today.

Desperate or not, such a tactical change was being urged by Reagan advisers in the small hours Wednesday at the New Hampshire Highway Hotel in Concord, N.H., when the Ford win finally crystallized (while Reagan slept). Contrary to public statements of bland satisfaction, Reagan insiders privately viewed the outcome as a chilling defeat which makes Florida two weeks hence an absolute make-or-break situation for Reagan; he has to win.

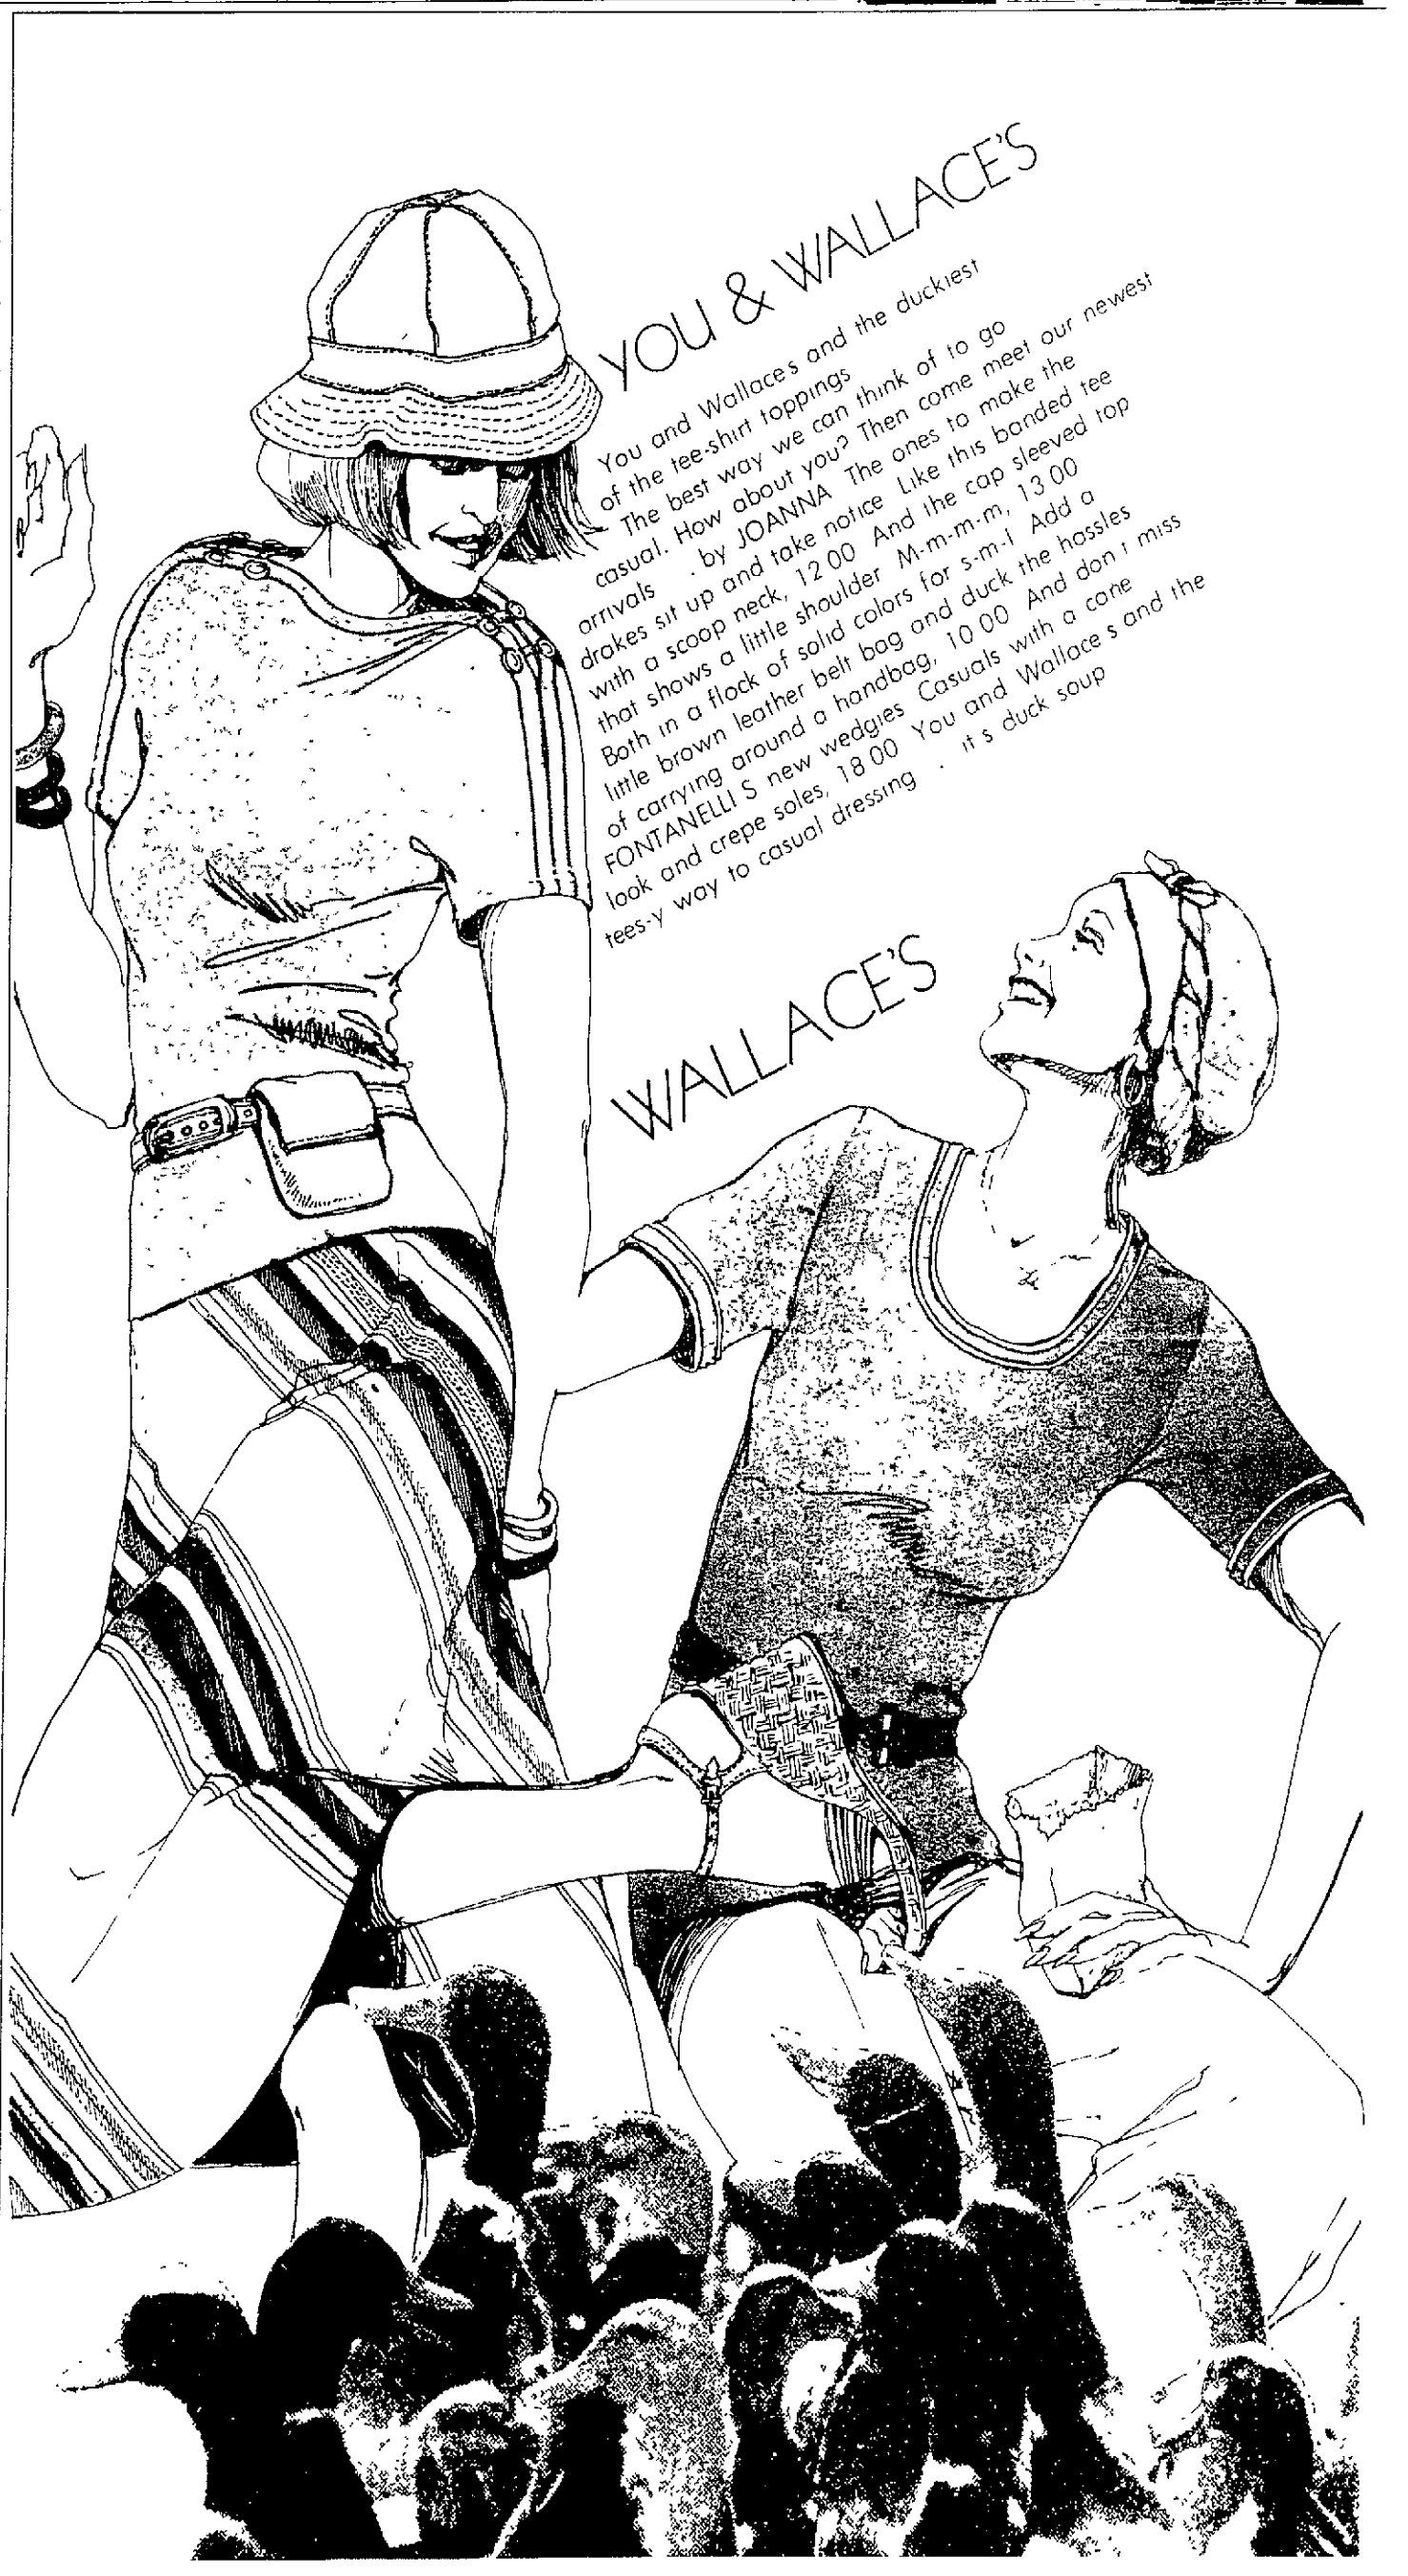

That view is fully shared by Reagan's conservative backers, never happy about either his rigid adherence to the 11th Commandment (Thou shalt not speak ill of another Republican") or campaign manager John Sear's decision to turn the other cheek to the Ford attacks on Reagan on grounds they were a sign of weakness. "I can't see Reagan having a chance now unless he takes off the gloves," a pro-Reagan Congressman told us.

Just why Mr. Ford was able to close that eight-percentage-point gap in one week may be explained partly in terms of his last campaign trip there, but much more by the awesome power of incumbancy. While committed voters favored Reagan, the undecided — voting in heavy numbers on an unusually pleasant Feb. 24—picked the incumbent by a probable 3-to-1 margin when they entered the voting booth.

Beyond incumbency, the President's late-hour attacks on Reagan— exaggerating and essentially misrepresenting his position on Social Security and his $90 billion transfer scheme —may well have weighed heavily with the undecided. Thus, there is remorse within the Reagan camp over the lack of retaliation by Reagan himself.

Also contributing to the narrow victory was last-minute energizing of New Hampshire's moderate Republicans (perhaps 20 per cent of the party). In retrospect, Secretary of Commerce Elliot Richardson's swing through the state Feb. 9-10 followed a week later by Rep. Paul M. (Pete) McCloskey Jr. of California stirred the first pro-Ford sentiment among the moderates.

McCloskey, repaying Vice President Gerald R. Ford's courageous support for him in the 1974 Republican congressional primary, was particularly effective, not only in campaigning but in recruiting liberal Republican Congressman for the President. One of these, Rep. William Cohen of Maine, visited the University of New Hampshire and stimulated formation of Ford-for-President student clubs less than two weeks before election day.

The Meter People . . . '76 Vintage . . . as the Mayor Looks Ahead

City Beat

By Hugh Reynolds

City Hall Reporter

METER PEOPLE—There's more than just an appreciation of the post-lib lingo involved with the mayor's reference to "meter persons" to patrol uptown and central Broadway parking meters.

"Meter Maid" is a no-no at city hall (Koenig's city hall) because history records that Mayor Ed Radel was "beaten" by the meter maid back in 1961 in probably the best election this town has ever seen.

The meter maid, it seems, did her job all too well, ticketing every violator she could find. And could she find 'em! Result? Radel loses by 84 votes to John J. Schwenk...hardly an hour's work for the meter maid.

That's a lot of bull, of course, but try to convince Ed Radel

Let's look at it this way. As Mrs Reynolds used to say, "One mother can support four children but four children can't support one mother"

Likewise, one person can win a campaign but it takes a lot of people (and reasons) to lose one.

Compare it to bowling The anchor man gets up in the 10th needing a spare to win it He chokes Loses the game? Right? How about the guy who got three pins on a double in the third or the guy who missed five or six frames or the guy who counted six pins on four spares?

The meter maid didn't beat Eddie Radel And it's about time that lesson was learned Maybe now we'll get some enforcement

Continuing on the same subject, the mayor is, of course, a student of history, sometimes to the detriment of his loyal constituents. The meter maid thing is and example Reassessment of the city is another. Radel was the victim of the former, the beneficiary of the latter. Koenig was Radel's secretary in 1959

In regard to the meter people of '76 the mayor was not looking over his shoulder but marching forward down the road to progress, as he's wont to say

In short, his statement that he'd go along with the aldermen on their scheme to hire two meter people was aimed at the aldermen, who, you might recall, will be considering the mayor's veto of their Wall Street parking ban when the baker's dozen convenes Tuesday night

The mayor is prepared to offer a package: give me my meters and I'll give you your meter people Now, who these meter people will be is still another subject. Two jobs in the middle of a depression could appear quite juicy

As for the veto override, our gut feeling is that the mayor has the muscle to sustain his veto From what we can gather (as of Friday) the hard bargaining hasn't started It will culminate at Monday night's Democratic caucus

FRANKLY SPEAKING—Every now and then some one will come up to us and bellow "why don't you write something nice about Frank Koenig?"

And we always reply, "listen Frank, when you do something nice we'll write something nice."

We're kidding. Actually, the relationship between the mayor and his principal irritant is more on the order of friendly antagonists; it's an adversary situation. Frank's got the news. We're after it.

The mayor would be the first to admit that he gets his fair share of good press. It's not as good as it used to be when he got his picture in every night for such things as "national hairdresser's week" and "country music week" but nothing lasts forever.

Simply put, the mayor takes the good with the bad People, by and large, remember the bad stuff

Here's some good stuff.

A few weeks ago, the mayor recommended (city halleeze for "ordered") to his recreation commission that it impose roster limitations on the number of out of town softball players.

The figure the mayor suggested was two-thirds, as in two-thirds of your softball players will be city residents. This will cause something of a revolution in city softball since by conservative estimates city residents are outnumbered six to four at present

As a manager of a softball team, we don't like what the mayor's doing. Our team has been together for awhile and it's going to be tough to tell some of the guys they'll have to go.

As a taxpayer, we can look at it differently. Which is the way the mayor has to look at it.

The situation was beginning to get ridiculous. The league had mushroomed to 66 teams. The number of fields had stayed exactly the same three. A conservative estimate would show six out of town ballplayers for every four city players. And who was paying for it?

Sure, you can argue that the out of town player brought business to Kingston, but how much?

Clearly, something had to give. The mayor's decision two-thirds limit is a bit stiff. We'd (as a manager) rather see it 50-50 for the first year at least.

It is, however, a step in the right direction. And that direction is toward county responsibility for some of these athletic programs the city has been supplying for all these years.

If they can dump upwards of 600 big ones in a swimming pool at New Paltz they can spread a little around the Kingston Metropolitan area for softball fields.

CITY BITS—Mel Mones is a sensible fellow, who befitting a county legislature, is prone to an systematic review of the facts before acting. In the case of the fiscal follies of the Ulster County Community Action Committee, we can go half way with Mel's recommendation for an orderly private study of the situation. There's been enough privacy. Let's get the whole thing out in the open.

A Report On the Eateries

KINGSTON

Major health infractions have been found at three Ulster County eating establishments, according to Health Commissioner Dr. Bartholomew J. Dutto who said they and 12 other restaurants face re inspection in the near future

During the January inspection of 65 county restaurants of which 50 were in compliance with health laws, the local health department found that two New Paltz and one Wawarsing eating establishment failed to comply with health laws They are Chez Joey and Golden Land Chinese Restaurant in the college town and Pizza King in Ellenville

Recommendations have been made by the department to help them meet health standards. Dr Dutto said the 12 other eateries which require reinspection must make minor chnages to be in full compliance. They include. Colonial Diner, Kingston; Highland Diner, Highland; Tw-Hwa Chinese Rest, Gay Nineties, Tariff and the Thesis, all of New Paltz, Country Twist Dairy Bar, Plattekill; Minnewaska Ski Snack Bar, Rochester, Buono's and Dragon Inn, both of Saugerties, Cathalia Ski Center, Wawarsing.

The health department is initating an award system in which exceptionally well kept eating establishments that meet health standards, will receive gold certificates of merit.

Iwo Jima Was 31 Years Ago But the Pride Still Remains

GARDEN CITY (UPI) — Their hair is varying shades of gray Some have bulging waistlines But they have one thing in common — pride in their roles at Iwo Jima

In all, there were 40 of them — survivors of the bloody World War II battle in which 4,300 Americans were killed and 10 000 wounded in the 28 days it took to secure the tiny Pacific atoll from the 22,000 Japanese garrison Only the 1,000 Japanese captured survived

The 40 men gathered in a suburban Long Island restaurant as is their annual custom, and the added twist of eating their creamed chicken and peas from regulation mess kits was hardly needed The memories flooded back

Historians called it "one of the bloodiest conflicts in the annals of war ' But what these men, almost all now Long Island residents, remembered, on the 31st anniversary of the Feb 19, 1945, assault landing by 30,000 Marines and Navy support, was far more personal

For George O'Haire 50, a Hicksville lawyer, it was the "extreme noise "

' There were 100 of our ships off shore, and it seemed like every one of them was firing salvos at the Japs," he said If you suffered from seasickness as we moved into the beach you forgot about it because you were so distracted by the noise

O'Haire, who was a private and who was evacuated a week later with a shoulder wound said the "very loose sand helped to prevent an even higher casualty list "The sand absorbed the impact of many of the mortars and bombs '

Herman Rabeck, 53, a carpet salesman from Plainview who had already won the Silver Star for bravery in the battle for Saipan, suffered a brain concussion from the blast of a 1 000-pound rocket soon after the beachhead was established

From a hospital ship he viewed the celebrated raising of the American flag atop Mt Suribachi four days after the start of the invasion

You better believe that was a thrilling sight he said When I saw that flag, go up I thought that was it I thought the battle was over But I soon found out how wrong I was

Lewis Panica 55 of Valley Stream said he was lucky to be in the first wave of troops

The Japs held their fire until we got ashore but by the time the fourth wave came in they really opened up ' he said They pinned us down on the beach for the next 48 hours and during that time we suffered 2 000 casualties We were right under Mt Suribachi and there was no way to go but up that hill

Panica had already participated in the invasions of Vella Vella and Bougainville in 1943 and suffered shrapnel wounds of the leg in Bougainville while serving as a Marine paratrooper

Panica became a reserve member of the Army Special Forces after the Korean war and capped a 30 year career as a paratrooper by making his last jump in February 1973 Now he is a supervisor for the Fairchild Aircraft Corp

Making Love When Can't Make Money

LONDON (UPI) — Struggling to emerge from the worst recession since World War II Britons have naturally been looking around for inexpensive entertainment According to the magazine New Society they have found it — sex

Looking at the somber economic scene with a sociologist's eye the magazine said

Whether the New Depression will eventually trigger a rise in the birth rate through increased sexual activity is an ironic but intriguing proposition We already know that strikes and lengthy power cuts tend to result in overflowing maternity hospitals nine months later but what about a lengthy depression?

Are people turning back to sex as the oldest and cheapest form of human entertainment?

It cited the astonishing sales of glossy sex magazines and the strong market in birth control pills as indications that this might be the case And it quoted an executive of a company making another type of contraceptive as also reporting good business with the words After all a poor standard of living doesn't seem to stop them in India for example

But the magazine said the rising cost of breeding has seriously affected the birth rate

Between mid 1974 and mid 1975 the population of England and Wales rose by less than 10 000 This says the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys was the smallest peacetime increase since detailed estimates started in the 1920s More and more couples are undoubtedly postponing or abandoning the idea of having children and more women of child bearing age are in full time work

The article said there has been an upsurge in the crime and suicide rates during the recession and a complete absence of innovation and experiment on the cultural front More and more people are seeking escapism through football foreign holidays gambling emigration and disaster movies

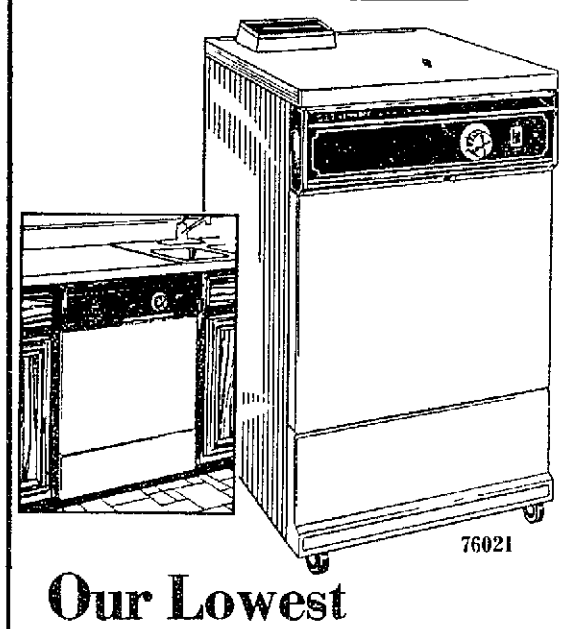

The magazine said the fall of 4 per cent in living standards in 1975 was unprecedented in the postwar era It said there was an 8 per cent drop in liquor sales a 4 per cent fall in expenditure on fuel and light and 7 per cent in consumer durables while the continued decline in food consumption was quite astonishing

In the 10 years to 1974 the average quantity of food by weight consumed by all households has dropped precipitously Fish consumption is down nearly 30 per cent and carcass meat consumption by 15 per cent In fact by weight the only things we can afford to eat more of are cheese (up 18 per cent over the 10 years) other meat— mainly chicken (up 7 per cent) and vegetables (up 4 per cent)

The magazine said that it was in the realm of social behavior that the most dramatic and disturbing effects of The New Depression can be seen Suicides para suicides (the new name for attempted suicide) and calls to the Samaritans have shot up over the last two years

Memorial Donation Honors Berardi

Benedictine Hospital Medical Director Dr. John A. Olivet (second right) accepted a check recently for the hospital's cardiac care unit from Thomas Owens, president of United Transportation Union Local 1528. The donation was made by employes of Adirondack Transit Lines in honor of the bus company's late president Eugene J. Berardi who died Jan. 9 of a heart attack. Many of the employes, including Austin Davoren (L) and Ronald Heckerman, rear, are union members. Berardi's widow, Cynthia, who succeeds her husband as president of Adirondack Trailways, looks on. Urged to File W-4P Form

Tax Note for Retirees

ALBANY

Retirees who receive pension payments and other forms of taxable income may be required to file a declaration of estimated tax and pay the tax, Raymond A Spillman, district director of Internal Revenue, for Northeastern New York said today

He said that retirees who will owe $100 or more in tax, but who do not have any money withheld from their pensions or other income subject to tax, are required to file Form 1040 ES by the date that their Federal income tax return for the previous year is due The amount of estimated tax may accompany Form 1040 ES, or be paid in equal quarterly installments, beginning with the filing of the form

Retirees who have some money withheld, but whose estimated gross income still includes more than $500 in income on which tax hasn't been withheld, also must pay the estimated tax if they will owe $100 or more, according to Spillman

Taxpayers who are required to make estimated payments, but fail to do so, must pay a penalty he continued

Spillman suggested that many retirees may avoid the estimated tax filing requirement by filing Form W-4P Annuitant's Request for Federal Income Tax Withholding,' with the agency paying their pension or annuity By filing this form, retirees will not have to pay estimated tax if they have 80 per cent of their total tax withheld Taxpayers may obtain information and forms by contacting the IRS

Would Withdraw From Games

WASHINGTON D C

Senator James L Buckley (C R N Y) has urged the United States Olympic team to withdraw from the Summer Olympics in Montreal if Radio Free Europe and all other legitimate press and media services are not accredited by the International Olympic Committee according to a release

"The International Olympic Committee has made a disgraceful retreat in front of a blatant Soviet and Eastern European power play he said 'Radio Free Europe has been accredited by previous International Olympic Committees and is still accredited by the Austrian Olympic Committee There are absolutely no grounds other than Soviet and Eastern European pressure for the banning of Radio Free Europe '

The Conservative junior senator from New York feels that "to cooperate with censorship is too great a price to pay for even a gold medal If the International Olympic Committee can ban Radio Free Europe from covering the games then there is virtually nothing to prevent the OIC from banning other radio stations and newspapers from future games

Teenagers: Alternative to Driving While Under the Influence

By UPI

"Kids tell me they have no alternative to driving under the influence," says Dwight Fee, one of Uncle Sam's highway safety crusaders.

"They tell me they're under orders from parents. They 'must' get that car home.

"They dare not call a taxi. They dare not call Dad or Mom. They dare not admit that they're tipsy."

The drunk youth grips the steering wheel and tells his teen-age passengers not to worry.

Trying to fill the parental expectation of getting the car home results in middle-of-the-night calls to thousands of parents from police each year.

Eight thousand hear that the child they burped, shielded and guided through life has died in auto accident relating to alcohol; 40,000 others hear that the kid they had fitted with braces, took to the dermatologist and otherwise tenderly cared for is hurt.

Fee said in an interview that if parents and teen-agers worked out a contract about driving and drinking a good many of these fatal and disfiguring accidents might be prevented.

He is a special assistant in the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration of the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Fee hit on the contract idea when figuring how to keep his teen-age daughter from being a victim in an auto accident involving young persons and alcohol.

He was worried that she might have the notion she couldn't call for a ride home or take a taxi when unable to drive the family car. Many teen-agers have told Fee that's the case.

A copy of the contract is in a free new pamphlet — "How to Talk To Your Teenager About Drinking and Driving."

"In the contract," Fee said, "parents and teen-ager agree to take certain actions when he or she is in a situation involving drinking and cars."

A sample contract goes like this:

Teen-ager: "I agree to call you for transportation if I am ever in a situation where I have had too much to drink or if a friend who is driving has had too much to drink."

Parent: "I agree to come and get you at any hour, any time, any place, no questions asked, and no argument or I will pay for a taxi to bring you home."

Fee and other crusaders for highway safety officials have a hunch that, if parents and teenagers rap frequently about booze, the increase in teen-age drinking also might be curbed, or at least better controlled.

That's one reason Uncle Sam's offering the free booklet. For a copy write to National Clearinghouse for Alcohol Information, P.O. Box 2345, Rockville, Md. 20852.

Spend a dollar and you can get a 46-page handbook "All in the Family — Understanding How We Teach and Influence Children About Alcohol."

Send the $1 to U.S. Jaycees, Products Division, Box 7, Tulsa, Okla., 74102.

Drug Use Up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 1960's epidemic of drug use shows no signs of easing and for several drugs, like cocaine, is increasing, the National Institute on Drug Abuse said today.

"There is no basis to suggest that the drug epidemic has ended; indeed, for several drugs, notably cocaine, the data are consistent with a continuing increase in use," the institute said in a preliminary report on a nationwide survey of men who were in their 20s and 30s in 1974.

But tobacco may be bucking the trend. Cigarette smoking may be declining among young men, particularly those with advanced education, it said.

In fact, users ranked tobacco second only to heroin in terms of negative effects, the study said. It reported "a clear trend toward less use of tobacco with increasing education."

Its statistical tables showed that 79 per cent of men born in 1944 have used cigarettes at some points, but there is a steady decline to the last birth year — 1953 — when only 60 per cent had tried them, and it said: "the data suggest a possible decline in use of cigarettes."

Alcohol continues to be the national drug of choice, used at one time or other by 97 per cent of the young men in the country and regularly being used by 92 per cent of the men at the time of the survey.

The study found that for all drugs except cigarettes, the younger the man the greater the likelihood of drug use.

The survey was based on interviews with 2,510 men collected from October, 1974, to May, 1975, and still being analyzed. Other NIDA studies cover drug use among both men and women, but the new report declares that more males than females can be expected to have used most drugs.

Dr. Robert DuPont, director of the drug abuse agency, called the 144-page report "an encyclopedia of contemporary American drug use."

He said it offers information on the "very puzzling and important social change in America" — unprecedented increases in drug use in the 1960s.

GI Bill Payment Deadline

KINGSTON

GI Bill Payment Deadline—Female Veterans—Women veterans who attended school under the GI Bill between June 1, 1966, and Oct. 24, 1972, are reminded that they have only six more months to apply for retroactive benefits. Application deadline is July 1.

Eligible for up to $1,000 in retroactive payments are women who were married while attending school under the GI Bill but only received the single GI Bill allowance.

Women who have trained under the GI Bill since Oct. 24, 1972, have been paid the same allowances as their male counterparts. Women must produce evidence to show that they were married while in training to be eligible for retroactive allowances. The amount to be paid in a lump sum is about $30 per month for each month a woman veteran was in training under the GI Bill while she had a husband.

Officials say women who attended scool under the World War 2 or Korean Conflict GI Bill programs are not eligible for retroactive dependency allowances.

Female veterans seeking assistance in filing a claim are urged to visit D. G. Moore the local counseling center of the New York State Division of Veterans' Affairs at 300 Flatbush Avenue, UPO Box 527, Kingston.

National Awards For Conservation

KINGSTON — Two members of the Ulster County Environmental Management Council, Mrs. Shirley Kobran and Sam Finkelstein, have been presented national awards for their efforts in environmental protection.

Participating in the recent award ceremony were Ulster County Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago and Eric B. Outwater, deputy administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency regional office in New York City, which presented the national citizen recognition awards.

UCEMC chairman Donald C. Bruyn said, "The council is extremely proud that two of our members have brought national recognition to the county. Only 36 such awards were given in the entire state, and Sam and Shirley are certainly deserving, as they have both given many, many hours toward the preservation of Ulster County's environment."

Mrs. Kobran, of 5 Arnold Drive, Kingston, served as council chairman from 1973-75 and is presently chairman of the Energy Committee. She was also recognized for her efforts as founder and chairman of the Environmental Task Force which she organized in the late 1960's. She has been the recipient of numerous awards and recognitions during these years.

Finkelstein, of Carnation Avenue, Ellenville, is presently chairman of the Town of Wawarsing Environmental Conservation Commission and has been a leader in organizing an active newspaper, glass and aluminum recycling program in the Ellenville-Wawarsing area.

Gilman 100 Pct. With APC

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Congressman Benjamin A. Gilman, R-26th Dist., has earned a 100 per cent rating for his voting record on legislation affecting children by the American Parents Committee Inc.

The organization, which annually publishes a Washington report on federal legislation for children, based its ratings on ten issues which were felt to be the most important children's issues considered during the first session of the 94th Congress.

According to the parents committee, the most important legislative activity in 1975 was the passage of the National School Lunch and Child Nutrition Act, which Gilman strongly supported.

Other legislative areas in which Gilman and the APC in complete agreement include: Child Support Programs; Education Appropriations; Youth Camp Safety; Maternal and Child Health; Health Services Act — Veto Override; and Education of the Handicapped — formula change.

Rep. Benjamin A. Gilman, R-26 Dist. has announced that the Mid-Hudson Valley Legal Services Project, headquartered in Middletown, and the Legal Aid Society of Rockland County, Inc., have been approved for funding for the one year period beginning April 1, 1976.

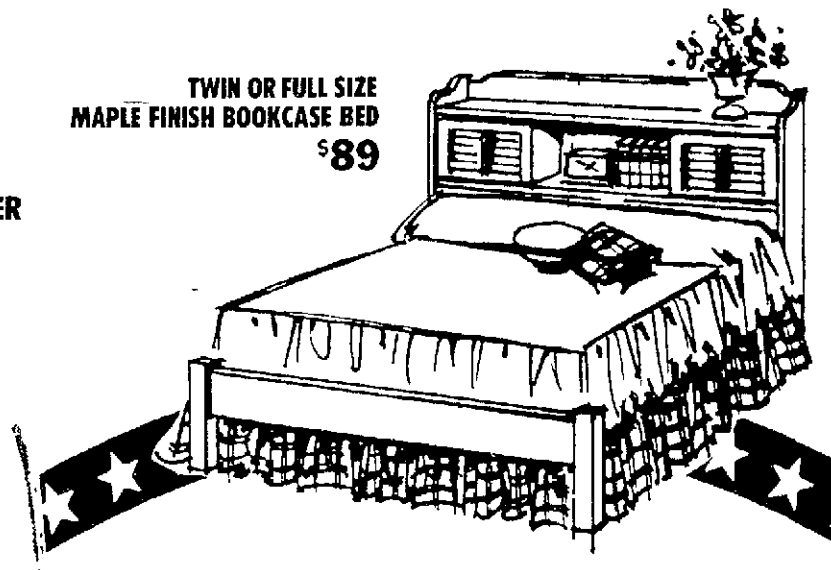

The Mid-Hudson Valley Project, which also has offices in Kingston, Newburgh, Poughkeepsie and Monticello will receive a grant in the amount of $237,820. The project director for the Orange County based legal assistance agency is John Gorman.

The grants were awareded by the Legal Services Corporation which was established by Congress to support legal assistance for the indigent in civil matters. In October the corporation assumed responsibility for the existing legal services programs and undertook its first major task. A complete review of those programs.

"Stars are no mystery to me," muses Morris, the finicky feline Superstar of the 9-Lives commercials. To help other cats chart their own success, The Finicky One has purr-fected the Morris-scope — a tongue-in cheek guide to cat character and compatibility with humans according to the stars — and Morris.

[illegible] head of [illegible] muses [illegible] his fur [illegible]

The Morris-Scope

A Chart to Cat Character

What's the purr-fect pussycat for you?

"It's in the stars!" states Morris.

And who should know better about stars than Morris — a Superstar himself!

He knows how important it is for felines and their humans to spend a happy nine lives together. This means that their personalities and life-styles must be compatible. But with the infinite variety of cat characters and breeds, it is difficult to find the ideal pet without a guide.

The Morris-Scope is just that. It's a tongue-in-cheek guide to cat character and compatibility with humans according to the stars — and Morris.

To find the ideal feline partner, find your birth sign on the chart and discover which feline breed might star in your home.

***

"Helpless as a kitten" describes Aries, the "baby" of the zodiac, and the perfect cat for this sign could be the Siamese. This feline is the "kitten" of the cat family with his mischievous ways and clownish antics. Siamese need a great deal of affection as well as an attentive ear, for like the child learning to speak, these cats love to vocalize! Their feline frolics will tickle any Aries' whiskers!

Strong, silent Taurus is the steady, easy-going sign of the zodiac, and an ideal cat for stubborn Taurus might be the Rex. Known as the "cool cat" of the feline fraternity, his composure seems almost contrary to his appearance. For the Rex's coat is unusually curled, looking almost as if he's had a pussycat permanent. ("Kinky, but nice," snickers Morris.)

Dual-personality Gemini is an extrovert and an explorer, and the ideal cat for this sign is the Abyssinian. This affectionate little fellow basks in the sun of human companionship, and his native curiosity finds him into everything at once. But curiosity won't get the best of this cat. He's far too busy purr-suing new places to explore!

Gentle, sensitive Cancer may be the life of the party, but inside he's really a quiet dreamer who longs for admiration. The best feline partner for Cancer may be the Himalayan, who will almost wilt from lack of attention. Like the Siamese, these felines love a good cat chat. ("Eat your heart out, Martha Mitchell," quips Morris.) But the Himalayan Cat will make any Cancer purr back with delight!

Regal and proud, Leo is the feline of the zodiac, and the ideal stage partner for this sign is the Burmese Cat. This feline loves dramatics and enjoys putting on the dog for you — but only when he's the sole star on the stage! He can be found hamming it up in front of any willing audience, but he will not tolerate being ignored. He just has to be Top Cat in any household realm! ("Only when I'm not around," boasts Morris.)

Quiet, hard-working Virgo is fastidious and admires intelligence, and the Balinese might be his favorite feline. This unusual breed looks like a long-haired Siamese ("Some of my best friends are hippies," muses Morris), and keeps his beautiful coat immaculately groomed. This is a stroke of fortune for busy Virgo!

Libra is the peacemaker of the zodiac, seeking harmony in every facet of life. The perfect feline for Libra is the Persian Cat — the "flower child" of the cat family. The world is his garden, and he lives by the philosophy that everything in his universe moves in an ordered and harmonic way. Persians will peacefully pad their way into any Libra's home — and heart!

Mysterious Scorpio is no shy pussycat! There's total ego under that well-controlled nature, and the favorite feline for Scorpio might be the Korat breed. These mysterious cats are possessive of their humans. ("A cat that's too cooperative loses control of this human," replies Morris. "My philosophy of nine lives.") They cannot be ignored. Flatter him and he'll follow you anywhere. Ignore him, and you'll never have the last meow!

Innocent Saggitarius is the clown of the zodiac, and the Havana Brown is his ideal feline playmate. Exhilarated by an audience, this cat is quite a purr-former! Dignified but capricious, their feline frolics smack of the catnip of life!

Freedom-loving Capricorn is a practical tough guy with a gentle heart, and the ideal feline for this sign is the "cat's cat — the Domestic Shorthair. Though sometimes called the "alleycat," this breed is no ordinary one. He's all cat! and he insists on his freedom to cat around. ("A real travelin man," boasts Morris, who loves taking trips himself — especially ego trips!)

Aquarius invented rainbows — and he seems to live his life on one! Forever the idealist, this sign's perfect pussycat is the Russian Blue, whose beauty makes him the pot of gold at the end of that glorious rainbow!

Free-spirited Pisces cannot abide confinement or competition, and the Manx Cat is the perfect feline pal for this sign. This rare breed is a one-man cat. ("How finicky can you get?" muses our Supsrstar.) he will follow his owner wherever he goes, but it's really just a way of keeping his human eating out of his paw!

Superstar Has the World by the Tail!

He travels incognito wherever he goes to avoid being mobbed by adoring fans.

He has recently turned down a movie offer because of his many other celebrity commitments.

He receives so many fan letters every day that he has a full-time secretary to answer his mail.

He has a trophy in his name designed by the same people who developed the Hollywood Oscars.

He is one of the world's most eligible bachelors.

Who is this charismatic character?

He is one of today's hottest Superstars — none other than Morris the Cat, that finicky feline Superstar of the 9-Lives commercials.

And this Top Cat is my boss! Yes, I am Gal Friday to Morris.

Morris' fans often ask me just what it's like to be secretary to a famous feline. Well, as the old saying goes, "it's the cat's pajamas!" Being Gal Friday to this celebrity has all of the glamour and excitement one could hope for, and I was certain it would from the day I first met Morris.

I was a bit nervous as I first entered the room for my interview and shyly introduced myself. But The Finicky One soon put me at ease. Meeting him was akin to having Marlon Brando run over to kiss my hand. I was completely bowled over?

As we got acquainted, it almost seemed as though I was interviewing Morris. It was important for me to know the details of his life — especially if I were going to be his right-paw man.

And so I asked Morris how he felt about his success as a celebrity. "I'm purr-fectly delighted that the world recognizes me as the great talent that I am," replied our Superstar, adjusting his gorgeous red fur coat. "Good talent is so hard to find these days."

When I asked what he enjoyed most about his celebrity status, he thoughtfully flicked his tail and ansered without a twitch of a whisker, "Not having to share my 9-Lives din-din with anyone."

Knowing that Morris travels thousands of miles each year for personal appearances and interviews, I questioned him about his most memorable trips. Without a paws, he said, "Ego trips, of course! I try to take them as often as possible." (And he does!)

I knew Morris' latest adventure was being honored at a literary gathering in the nation's capital for his book, Morris: An Intimate Biography. Here, rubbing paws with literary critics and renowned authors from all over the world such as Art Buchwald and Julie Andrews, Morris had made a speech which brought the house to its feet with a standing ovation! When I asked The Finicky One how Buchwald had reacted to his success, he boasted: "Art and I are like two tunas in a bowl — we got on well. But then, great minds always think alike!"

I was rapt with attention I didn't want to miss a scrap of information. And as we continued to talk tuna, my prospective employer told me a little about his rise to success.

"It's a true Horatio Alleycat story," he began. "I was a poor boy who made good. Wandering the streets, eking out a meager existence, I never knew where my next meal was coming from. Alone and unwanted, I feared that my nine lives were about up."

Shifting in the comfortable chair in which he was lounging, Morris continued. "But I had a stroke of good fortune. My friend and mentor, Bob Martwick, was looking for a handsome devil like me for a television commercial, and just twenty minutes before I was slated for a permanent catnap, he adopted me."

What are friends for?" I interjected.

When I asked whether Morris thought he would have achieved fame and fortune without Martwick, our charismatic cat replied that he was "an idea whose time had come. But when opportunity knocks — don't knock it!"

My interview time was growing short, but I felt as though we were becoming close friends. And as a friend, I wanted to know about the romance in Morris' life (in case I had to handle his purr-sonal calls, of course!).

Knowing that he is one of the world's most eligible bachelors, and that he receives many proposals of marriage from femine feline admirers, I asked whether he had any plans to marry in the future.

He slowly looked at me with his sexy green eyes and said: "There is absolutely no truth to the rumors about my bachelor days being numbered. Girls are okay. But I have more important things to think about right now. I have my career. And I intend to remain the paw-loose bachelor that I am."

Yes, Morris the Cat definitely has the world by the tail!

SNAP Deals With Birds and Bees; Dogs and Cats

KINGSTON

It is sometimes said that in the Spring a young man's fancy turns to what a young woman has been thinking about all winter.

Operating under a typical misconception that dogs and cats were awaiting Spring to indulge their propensity for procreation, we consulted those in-the-know and found we were wrong. There are not always warnings that your female pet may be in heat, according to veterinarians and animal care groups.

Birth control among pets is a generally accepted parctice, but the pitfall naturally is money. Many people in Ulster County and environs would spay their cats and dogs except for the price tag, which runs from about $27 to $50, depending on the size and previous experience of the animal in producing litters.

Operating in accordance with the adage originated under somewhat different circustances by Benjamin Franklin that "a stitch in time saves nine," Spay Neuter A Pet (SNAP) of Kingston has been doing something concrete about keeping the pet population in line since last June.

Actually, it takes a few stitches after the operation, but in all probability they save closer to 90 unwanted animals from entering the world than nine.

Dorothy Wilson of Kingston is a SNAP organizer and worker. She was formerly associated with the Ulster County SPCA, which maintains a policy of not giving female animals up for adoption unless they are spayed by the new owner.

SNAP subsidizes neutering of pets as a humanitarian gesture for those without sufficient funds to pay for the operation themselves, sometimes paying for 50 per cent of the cost and sometimes more. She reports excellent cooperation from Ulster County's veterinarians in the program.

Since June, 1975, SNAP has assisted with the spaying or neutering of 162 cats and dogs. Mrs. Wilson said that every dollar donated or raised for SNAP is used immediately to subsidize a fee. "After all, that's what it's there for," she explained. Sizeable donations are hard to come by these days, and most of the money is hustled up through bake sales, flea markets, sales of jewelry and other items by members or friends. Vet Wayne Tremper of Ulster Animal Hospital has catnip-stuffed crocheted mice for sale in his office to help the cause, and Mrs. Wilson sells earrings and other items in her Albany Avenue maternity shop for support.

It is a grass roots organization, not intended to assist people adopting SPCA animals as area vets are already cooperating with the shelter in spaying animals at a reduced fee. There are no overhead costs or officers in SNAP; every dollar goes into the program.

Spaying one dog or cat might seem like a futile attempt to stem the tide of uncared for pets, but an interesting projection by SNAP shows that effects are more far reaching than one might think.

Based on the conservative estimate that a female dog or cat producing two litters per year of five offspring each (or ten a year); that theoretically there would be five males and five females in the group, and each female would begin production by the age of one year; that half of these animals would die young; this might be the result — one mother dog or cat could be responsible for producing 19,525 little animals by the time her fifth-year litters were producing offspring of their own.

"If only we could get the same thing started in Poughkeepsie, Newburgh, Beacon, Hudson and some other spots around the Hudson Valley," exclaimed Mrs. Wilson. "We could really make an impact."

Placing SNAP's money where it's mouth is, she was writing out a check for ten neutering jobs when we visited her, to be sent to the beleaguered Dutchess County SPCA that is threatened with extinction.

SNAP is not the only program heavily involved in trying to keep the pet population under control. Friends of Animals, Inc., with headquarters in New York City, is active locally and some accurate information on pet reproduction from that outfit is herewith passed on.

And, lest the uninitiated feel that the pet groups are representative of a male chauvinist viewpoint in advocating primarily the neutering of female pets, Dr. Andre Ross of Stone Ridge has the answer to that one.

"The females are free roaming," she said. "If every male in the neighborhood is neutered, she will travel miles to mate. You can't win by neutering the males."

MYTH: It is wrong to spay animals because it interferes with nature.

FACT: When we spay animals we are trying to correct the proboems caused by the fact that for many years people HAVE been interfering with nature. When cats and dogs lived in the wild state their population was lightly distributed. To allow them unlimited breeding would very quickly result in hundreds becoming thousands.

MYTH: A spayed pet becomes very fat and lazy.

FACT: If the owner is in control of the food supply, he or she can control the pet's weight. If your spayed dog has the appetite of a buffalo, she had it before the operation. As for becoming lazy, if she is given the opportunity to exercise, she'll use it.

MYTH: Spaying causes animals to lose their natural instincts.

FACT: Spaying has no effect whatever on a dog's ability to guard your property or her livestock. In fact, seeing-eye dogs are invariably neutered. If you depend on your cat for mouse control, she'll have much more time to spend at it once she is spayed.

MYTH: When pets become old they no longer breed.

FACT: Pets can produce litters far into their teens. One vet reported an owner bringing in a cat who was 24 years old and still producing two litters a year.

MYTH: If there are no male cats or dogs in your neighborhood your female will not be bred.

FACT: Many male pets circulate through areas periodically (no pun intended). They appear to have mental lists of eligible females.

If a female should come into heat and one of these fellows isn't around, she'll travel miles to find him.

MYTH: Pets must have a litter or a heat before being spayed.

FACT: Spaying consists of the removal of the reproductive tract and this is available regardless of what experiences the pet has gone through. Operating on an immature animal is actually safer and easier on the animal and the veterinarian, and usually cheaper.

MYTH: There are things one can buy in a pet shop that will keep females in heat from mating.

FACT: All these do is cut down on mating odors. Don't rely on them as your female will think of some other way of making the fact known that she is ready.

MYTH: Dogs never come in heat more than twice a year.

FACT: One sometimes sees dogs whose cycle is shorter than every six months. And there are such things as "spontaneous heats" that the owner isn't even aware of when the female decides to accommodate a certain dog.

At Wit's End

Fido Must Have Other Name

I have friends whose dogs will eat anything.

Wilted lettuce, baked beans, cold egg rolls, you name it!

The other day, I cracked an egg and missed the bowl. The egg slid slowly down the cupboard and onto the floor. "Hey, Buddy," I said to our dog, "are you in luck. C'mon, fella, here's your 35-cent egg just waiting to be lapped up. Good dog!"

The dog circled the egg cautiously for a full five minutes in a crouched position.

"Trust me," I said impatiently. "The egg is dead."

He eased in slowly, sniffing his way. Finally, he reached out with his paw, broke the yoke and walked away leaving a trail of yellow pawprints.

"Dogs love eggs," I said following him into the living room. "I read that on a can of dog food somewhere."

As he crawled under the sofa, I got strong vibes that the discussion had been terminated.

I couldn't believe it. This was the same dog who could stand at the kitchen window when a cookie fell off a curb and still get there in time to grab it in mid-air.

When my husband came home, I was on my hands and knees cleaning up the mess. "Why can't that dog be like the Ellises' dog? He keeps the floor licked clean."

"You mean old wax breath?"

"Not like our dog. Did you see him the other night? He just looked at those barbecued ribs, sniffed and walked away."

"We did the same thing at the table."

"That's different. A dog is supposed to be grateful. Frankly, he's getting harder and harder to feed.

"I blame it on the commercials," said my husband. "He sees all those cats being pampered and all those dogs getting the big chunks of meat and gravy and he says to himself, 'Why should I eat leftovers?'"

"He's persnickety," I grumbled. "Do you know he's the only dog I know who washes his hands after he's played with our children?"

Later, we looked in the living room in time to see our dog intently watching the commercial of the dog breaking his own egg into the skillet. He got up and walked toward the stove.

I never let on. "You make a mess and you clean it up!" I warned.

PART III

French Fish Soups
by Julia Child

When you are in Mediterranean France you will see far more soupes de poissons than you will bouillabaisses because the latter is an elaborate production and the former is really a kind of fish bouillon. Ideally you use handfuls of tiny fresh rockfish and boil them up with garlic, onions, leeks, and tomatoes, then strain the rich broth and serve it with a garlic and pepper sauce — rouille — and hard-toasted French bread rounds. Actually and most frequently, the soup is made with fresh fish trimmings or fish frames — the head, tail, and bony frame remaining after the fish has been filleted. Whether from fish, frames, or trimmings, it is a marvelously fragrant and hearty brew that could begin an equally hearty meal of roast meat or fish, or pasta.

About 2 ½ quarts, for 6 to 8 people

1 cup sliced onions
1 cup sliced white of leek (or 1 cup more onions)
½ cup olive oil
6 to 8 unpeeled tomatoes, washed and roughly chopped
4 to 6 large cloves unpeeled garlic, crushed
8 sprigs parsley
½ tsp. thyme
¼ tsp. fannel seeds
3 big pinches saffron threads
½ tsp. dried orange peel
Either: 2 quarts of trimmings from fresh fish or shellfish, 2 ½ quarts water, and 1 Tb. salt
Or: 1 quart clam juice, 1 ½ quarts water, and no salt
Equipment: A heavy 8-quart kettle or casserloe and a large sieve or colander

Stir into the kettle or casserole the onions, leeks, and olive oil; simmer 5 minutes without browning. Stir i n the tomatoes and garlic, and cook 5 minutes more. Then add the rest of the ingredients listed and bring to the boil. Skim, and boil slowly, uncovered, for 40 minutes. Strain, pressing juices out of ingredients, correct seasoning, and set aside uncovered. When cool, if you are not proceeding immediately, cover and refrigerate.

SERVING SUGGESTIONS. Serve the soup just as it is, accompanied by rounds of hard-toasted French bread, croutes, a bowl of freshly grated Parmesan cheese, and the rouille described below. Or, you may want to incorporate the rouille in the soup to thicken it before serving; to do so scoop it into a mixing bowl or soup tureen, stir in a cup or so of hot soup by dribbles, then pour in the rest, and decorate with chopped green herbs. A final suggestion to make a more nourishing soup: simmer in the cooked, strained broth 2 cups of diced potatoes or a handful of pasta; or serve croutes and poached eggs in the soup, along with grated cheese and the rouille.

ROUILLE; garlic and pepper sauce for fish soups.

This is especially recommended for those times when you are using one or two kinds of fish, such as cod or perch, or scallops only. The bread crumbs will thicken the soup while the egg yolks and oil enrich it. (Although this appeared in the newspaper recipe for the bouillabaisse show, I didn't do it on the screen, and some woman wrote in, furiously upbraiding us for showing all those foreigners and those foreign fish that didn't exist over here, when I could have made that sauce instead!)

For 1 cup or so, enough for 6 to 8 people.

4 large cloves peeled garlic
2 eggs yolks
1 dozen large leaves fresh basil or 1 Tb dried, or 1 tsp thyme or savory
¼ cup canned red pimientos, drained
½ cup fresh crumbs (pressed down) from unsweetened homemade-type white bread
2 to 3 Tb hot soup base
⅔ to ¾ cup olive oil
Drops of hot pepper sauce, or a big pinch Cayenne pepper
Salt and pepper to taste
Equipment: A heavy bowl, and a pestle or pounding instrument of some sort, like the wrong end of a wooden spoon

Puree the garlic into a small, heavy bowl and add the egg yolks and herbs. Pound and stir into a thick sticky paste; pound in the pimientos, incorporating thoroughly. Then pound in the bread crumbs, adding drops of soup base to moisten them. When all is thick, sticky, and smooth, begin adding the oil by droplets, as though you were making mayonnaise — pound and stir, and change from pestle to a small whip while adding the final oil. Beat in the seasonings. Sauce should be thick and strong. Cover airtight until serving time.

Bouillabaisse a la Marseillaise

When you have your fish-soup base done, and your fish prepared, the actual making of the bouillabaisse itself is a matter of only 20 minutes or so. Then be ready to serve immediately, although you will find that any leftover soup and fish will be delicious when warmed up the next day. You may wish to add a side dish of boiled potatoes when this is your main course, and follow with a dessert of fresh fruit, or a fruit tart. Serve a young red wine like Beaujolais, or a rose, or a strong dry white wine like a Chablis or Cotes du Rhone.

For 6 to 8 people
The 2½ quarts prepared, strained, and perfectly seasoned soupe de poissons base, in a kettle large enough to hold all the fish easily
The prepared fish — 1 lb. whole fish per person, or ½ lb. filleted fish, as large a variety as possible, although only one kind will do if that is all you can get (list and directions on page 29)
A cup or so rouille, preceding recipe
⅓ cup chopped fresh parsley
2 or 3 croutes per person — hard-toasted French bread.

Be sure to provide yourself with a large hot platter for the fish, and a tureen or large serving bowl for the soup, plus a ladle, and wide soup plates.

About 20 minutes before serving, bring soup base to a rolling boil. Add lobsters and crabs if you are using them, and firm-fleshed fish such as halibut or eel, and boil 5 minutes. Then add the other fish (cod, hake, perch, flounder), and the mussels or scallops. Bring rapidly back to the boil, and boil slowly about 5 minutes. Fish is done when it is opaque, and springy rather than squashy — do not overcook. Lift out the fish and arrange it attractively on the platter.

(If you have used only 1 or 2 kinds of fish, the rouille, rather than being passed separately, should now go into the soup tureen; correct seasoning of soup and, beating rouille with a whip, gradually ladle the hot soup into it until about 2 cups have gone in, then pour in the rest, stirring to blend.)

Ladle a bit of soup over the platter of fish, decorate both soup and fish with chopped parsley, and bring to the table.

To serve, place 2 croutes of French bread into each soup plate, arrange a selection of fish over and around them, and ladle in the soup. Pass the rouille separately if you have not already beaten it into the soup.

Catalogs

As a rule, mail-order firms do quite well in processing the orders they receive. Most send acknowledgements within a week or so, and the ones which specialize in plants send viable seed or healthy plants which have been properly packed to avoid damage in transit.

Most problems can be traced to the original order; either the would-be buyer didn't make it out properly, or the firm didn't interpret it correctly. To make sure it isn't your fault, here are some suggestions on how to make out an order.

First, print your complete name, street address, city in which you live, state and zip code number on the order blank. Type or hand-print this information; never write it out in longhand. Put the date on your order; even though there may not be a space designated for this, put it somewhere.

Next, fill in the catalog numbers of the items you want, the descriptions and the quantities. If more than one of a kind is ordered, give the per-unit price as well as the extended one. Read the "fine print" pertaining to minimum-order requirements, charges for packing, handling and shipping, sales taxes that may appiy, additional postage or freight for delivery to certain areas and so on. Add your figures at least twice. If payment must be sent with your order, pay by personal or bank check, by money order or by some means that will provide you with a record of payment. (Don't send cash through the mails.)

Check each item you order to be sure you haven't been misled by ambiguous wording in the catalog. To quote verbatim, from one of my favorite catalogs: "PENTAS, Egyptian Star Cluster, pot plant." This caption was followed by a description of the plant, its foliage and flowers and its uses indoors and out, all in rather fine print. The final line noted "Packet contains 100 seeds," with the price per packet further down.

Up until the last line, almost anyone would have believed that plants, not seeds, were being offered. Looking only at the quoted price, I felt it was reasonable for a plant like a pentas, and only upon closer reading of the text did I realize that plants weren't being offered at all — the prices applied to seed packets. So I'm in complete sympathy with my readers who have been misled by this and similar cataiog blurbs, and if mail-order houses complain again to me about orders they can't decipher, I intend to complain about catalogs that are beyond easy comprehension.

cost. An order copy can be very helpful in keeping track of partial shipments as they come in. You can request payment for items which never arrived and for which no credit or refund was ever issued.

Questions And Answers

Q. Last year I sent a rather large seed order in to a well-known firm, and only received about half my order although I prepaid the whole thing. Is there any way I can avoid this problem in the future?

A. If your order was not completed, you should have received either a notice of shipment to be made later, a refund or credit. When making out a mail order, I always make a carbon copy so that I know exactly what I ordered and when and how much it

Q. In looking through a listing of common names for houseplants, I found many that I consider objectionable, for they include epithets that disparage certain ethnic groups and minorities. I hope you will use whatever influence you have to correct this.

A. Your concern over the usage of objectionable words in common plant names is, I'm sure, admirable. However, I think enough changes in nomenclature are being pushed down our throats as it is. If you object to certain common names for plants, encourage the use of the proper Latin names, but please don't ask me to become a part of the current "language sanitation" program. I've got my own problems with mail addressed to "Ms." Walker.

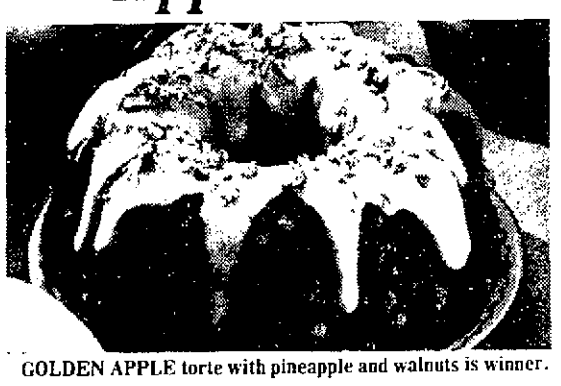

Q. My Poinsettia is beginning to lose its red bracts so please rush a copy of your booklet to me. I want to save the plant if I can. Enclosed is 25c plus a self-addressed, stamped envelope for the booklet, "Poinsettias."

A. Thank you, and the booklet is on its way. With its help, you should have no trouble keeping your plant and having it bloom again next year.

Katherine B. Walker has written a booklet on the care and culture of GLOXINIAS and other tuberous-rooted members of the Gesneriad Family. For your copy of Gloxinias, write to Mrs. Walker in care of The Daily Freeman, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25c in coin to cover printing and handling costs.

Mrs. Walker is always happy to hear from readers, and whenever possible she answers their questions on house plants in her column, but she regrets that because of the vast volume of mail received she cannot reply to individual letters.

Apple Torte

GOLDEN APPLE torte with pineapple and walnuts is winner.

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

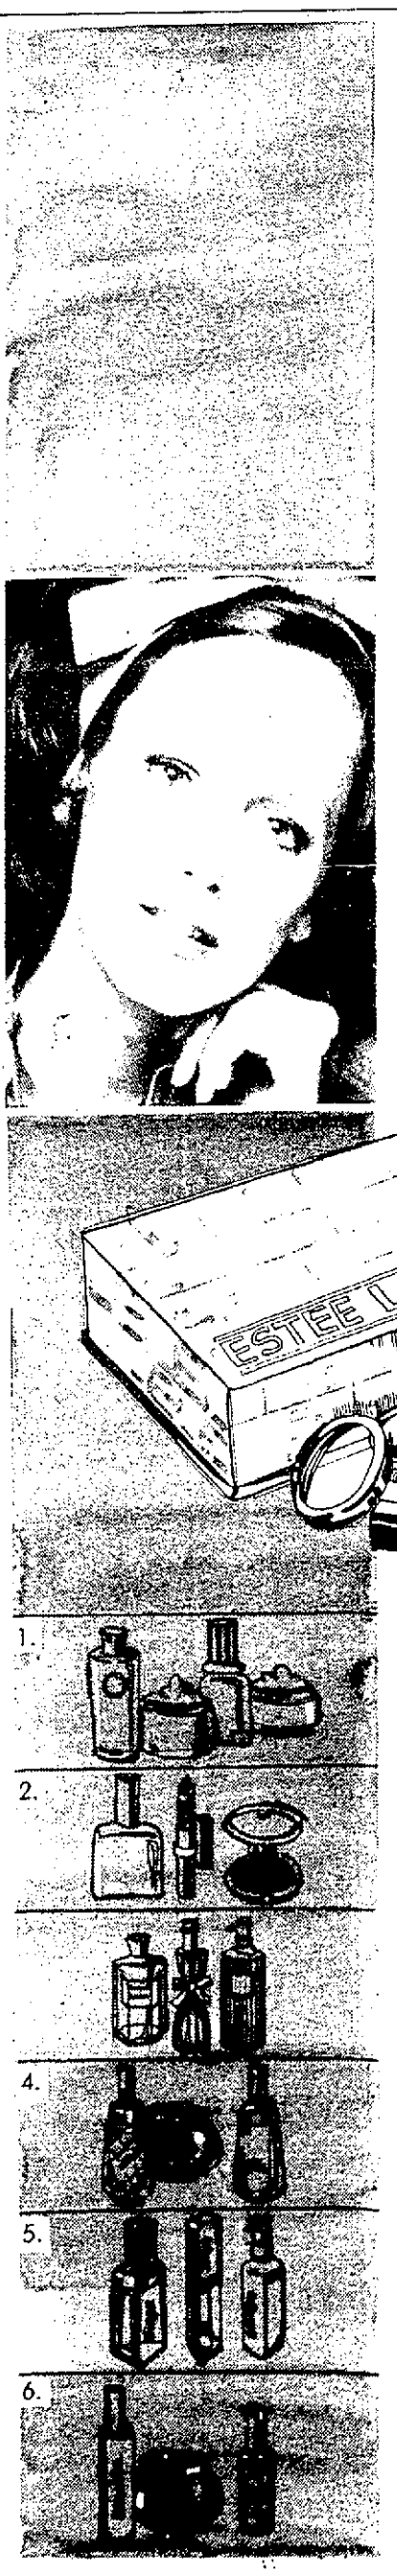

Want some old-fashioned goodness to nibble on for a birthday celebration or other special occasion? A golden apple torte baked in a decorative bundt pan, crowned with tangy lemon glaze and sprinkled with chopped walnuts is the answer. The natural moistness of apples gives this cake an excellent keeping quality, although there probably will be only crumbs left over. The rich apple batter is accented with crushed pineapple and cinnamon and nutmeats add crunch.

GOLDEN APPLE TORTE
3 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1½ cups oil
1½ cups sugar
2 cups grated golden delicious apples
1 (8 ounces) can crushed pineapple
1/2 cup chopped walnuts
1½ teaspoons vanilla
3 eggs
Lemon Glaze (below)
2 tablespoons chopped walnuts

Sift together flour, soda, salt and cinnamon. Combine oil and sugar. Add half of dry ingredients, mixing well. Blend in grated apples, pineapple, one-half cup walnuts and vanilla. Add remaining dry ingredients. Add eggs, one time, beating well after each addition. Turn into greased 3-quart bundt pan. Bake at 350-degrees for 1 hour or until cake tests done. Cool in pan 15 minutes; turn out on wire rack. Drizzle with Lemon Glaze and sprinkle with 2 tablespoons chopped walnuts when cool.

Lemon Glaze: Combine one and one-half cups powdered sugar, 3 tablespoons soft butter, one-half teaspoon grated lemon peel, 2 teaspoons lemon juice and one and onehalf tablespoons hot water. Stir until smooth.

The Consumer Panel

Pizza Tasting in Ulster

"You've tried the rest, now try the best!" is the slogan of dozens of good, bad and mediocre pizza parlors around the country Mediocre usually predominates How, then, separate from and elevate above the rest of the pack those with the best pizza? Where can the pizza lover be assured of a fresh and spicy pie with a light and puffy crust? Where is the oregano sprinkled on to perfection, the hot peppers hottest, the mozzarella really baked in and all-covering?

'For purposes of locating a palatable pizza in the environs of Ulster County, we sent our Freeman consumer testing panel out to their neighborhood pizza parlor this week to compare breadier crusts, thinner wedges To put "On Trial' which ovens in which towns serve pizza in the true style of the old country

Ruth Martin, who lives in Woodstock, picked a Sunday night to visit Millstream Pizza beside the Sawkill in the art colony Ruth, her husband and her nine year old son ordered a large mushroom and sausage pizza — ample for three and priced at $5 10 With drinks tips and taxes added, the Martin's bill came to $8 04

Since it was Sunday night and the Millstream receives many orders for take out pizzas that particular evening of the week, they waited approximately 20 minutes for their pie

The Martins all prefer the breadier thick crust of Sicilian pizza to the thinner Neapolitan, felt this time around the crust was not as good or as thick as usual at the Millstream But they had praise for the "most generous use of sausage and mushrooms

"It was very good," emphasized Ruth, "even though we would have liked the crust thicker And very good even though the chef must give attention to all the other menu items that include fish, all kinds of Italian food, sandwiches, chicken, ham, pork chops, desserts and drinks"

The Martins are convinced prices at the Millstream are "quite reasonable," but since they started going there some time ago, they've noticed inflation has just about doubled the pizza prices

Ruth's children (her daughter wasn't along this trip) always enjoy the new and unusual placemats that seem to change each time they're there, find them fun to read This week's placemat centered on superstitions

The Martins rate the Millstream a "good family place," where the waitresses are very polite "On the whole, we thoroughly enjoy going there," says Ruth

Roberta Fingerman, who lives in High Falls, would give Anzalone's in High Falls 10 stars for its pizza, if the Michelin Guide hadn't already established four stars as tops for any restaurant "It was fantastic," she raved, "really terrific, great, great, great!"

Because her children are very young, Roberta and her husband dined alone, ordered a large pizza for two for $4 50 After a small carafe of rose wine had been added, their bill came to $7 25

Of Anzalone's expertise with the pie, the Fingermans had nothing but good things to say "Absolutely great! Full of cheese and sausage and lots and lots of onions!"

They've tried pizza "all over the place," says Roberta, including dozens of parlors in New York City "And we've never found any as fantastic, as great or as good any where else," she enthuses "We enjoyed it very much — really superlative!"

And what about the ambiance at Anzalone's? "A very nice, cozy, family type restaurant with excellent service" (less than 15 minutes of waiting on a Thursday night Live band music is an added attraction on the weekends

Dot Ridgeway of Saugerties forsook all pizza parlors in the Saugerties area to drive to Rudy's in Glasco Leaving one son who had to work behind, Dot, her husband and another son opted for a 16 inch pizza for three at $4 70, found it more than ample So much so, in fact, they brought two pieces home for the working son who couldn't go

With strong individual pizza preferences, the Ridgeways found they could get everything they all wanted in one pie at Rudy's, by ordering a half-and-half — with a side dish For the son in attendance, the chef made half the pizza pepperoni And, for husband and wife, half was sausage, pepperoni and peppers And, since Dot is the only one who craves anchovies, she received a dish of those delectables on the side

"To us, Rudy's has the best pizza in the entire Saugerties area," says Dot "We've been to other pizza places here, but we always go back to Rudy's The staff is nice, the atmosphere and service is good, the price is also good, and the crust is THE BEST"

Doris Shultis of Ulster Park felt her family "didn't have much choice" in picking a neighborhood pizza parlor "There's not too many places in the Town of Esopus," she says "So we went to Jimbo's in Port Ewen, which is small and does more of a take out than a serve in business"

They ordered the family's favorite — a large cheese pizza with a thin crust, since none of them like the thick, Sicilian style The entire bill came to only $4 75 ($3 for the pie, plus "something to drink") Jimbo's does not serve beer, wine or similar beverages, specializes in "just pizza" and a few Italian sandwiches

For the Shultis family, that is more than sufficient "It's always hot," says Doris, "both the flavor and service is good (not only, not overloaded with either cheese or sauce — just a good mixture of both), and one of our favorite meals for a quick pick me up"

Kathy Carle and her family had a wide choice open to them As Kingstonians, the city was the limit Over the years, the Carles and daughters have tested many local pizza places, opted for panel judging purposes to try one they had never visited before — Pizza Hut, whose slogan, "Our People Make It Better," was strenuously challenged by the Carles

"If we're normal," suggests Kathy, "I don't think they get any return trade" Turned off immediately by the Hut's ambiance ('not a clean booth in the place, the waiter wiped the table up all over us"), the Carles were also unimpressed with the pizza Ordering the thin 'n crispy — as opposed to the thick 'n chewy — their reaction was "like having spaghetti sauce on a saltine cracker" Suggests Kathy "They must put the sauce on with a roller because there's no sauce and no cheese and you can't taste the sausage'

After waiting 30 minutes for their large pizza with sausage and a small cheese ('very small'), the Carles sent back the plates and asked for new ones after noting cooked on food clinging to the china Another customer they said, refused a 'burnt pizza with an absolutely black top

The bill came to $8 14 with soda for four, a price Kathy felt was 'kind of high," a feeling that changed to certainty when she found they'd been charged too much They had previously elected to bypass the salad bar feeling the 69 each extra for this was not warranted since it was 'mostly lettuce with no radishes olives or other enticements' Having settled for just the pie ('not hot by any means') and the soda ('extremely syrupy and sweet'), the Carles found their visit to Pizza Hut an 'awful unbelievable experience"

Summed up Kathy We are pizza lovers and fanciers and if you're a pizza lover when in Kingston we recommend Tony's and Perry's The pies are the best and the price for thick and thin crusts are the same At the Hut, thick is more

Four raves or near raves then and one adamant veto from our consumer testing panel this week as they took to the pizza circuit to help our readers decide for themselves

Pregnancy is great problem of teens

By Joanne Koch

What is three times as prevalent among teen-agers as veneral desease and twice as damaging?

What problem cripples the lives of one million teen-agers each year?

What is the greatest cause of suicide and school drop-outs among female teen-agers?

The answer to all three questions is pregnancy. Pregnancy among teen-agers, including those in the 11 to 14-age bracket, is increasing at an alarming rate. One of the primary causes of this problem is ignorance — ignorance about conception and contraception.

"If you tell young people about sex, they'll do it," claim many parents. According to Dr. Sol Gordon, founder of the Institute for Family Research at Syracuse University, and author of many texts for parents and teen-agers, teen-agers are engaging in sexual activity whether their parents like it or not (or tell them about it). Fifty per cent of the teen-agers will have had a sexual encounter by the time they finish high school, states Dr. Gordon. Less than 20 per cent of the teen-age girls who are sexually active use any form of reliable contraception. In fact, ignorance about sex is often a cause of premature sexual activity rather than a preventive measure.

Dr. Gordon believes parents should express their own values about sex to their teen-agers. If parents believe young people should wait until they are married before becoming sexually active, they should say so. If they believe, as Dr. Gordon does, that the best form of contraception is "No!" they should say so. But they should also provide information about how pregnancy comes about and how it can be prevented.

Most teen-agers are not psychologically prepared for sexual involvement, in Dr. Gordon's opinion, but ready or not, many of them are sexually involved, and their involvement is beginning at earlier ages — 12, 13, 14 and 15. Venéreal disease in that age group is up 150 per cent!

There are a number of causes for this sexual precocity. Young women begin to menstruate earlier now. One hundred years ago the average age of menarche, or onset of menstruation was 14-16; now the average age is 11-13. Young teens and pre-teens are bombarded daily with sexually loaded material from TV, films, commercials, rock music. And there is very little to offset this sexual pressure.

Whether parents are anti-abortion or pro-abortion, they rarely welcome a teen-age pregnancy. Of the 500,000 teen-age girls who decided to go through with their pregnancies last year, 50,000 were under 15. Low birth weight babies, child abuse, public assistance and more unwanted pregnancies are the grim predictions for the teen-age mother, particularly if she is not encouraged to finish high school and avoid another pregnancy.

Growing Older

What's in foods still a mystery

By Harold Blumenfeld

Shortly after Super Bowl X had ended the long, long pro football season I read that Red Dye No. 2 was being discarded.

At first I thought this was the code name for one of the offensive formations the Dallas Cowboys had found ineffective against the Pittsburgh Steelers. But as I read further, I learned Red Dye No. 2 was actually the coloring additive used in hundreds of food products we eat and drink, in some of the medicines we swallow, and in most of the cosmetics used by women, and some men.

The Food and Drug Administration ruled and the courts in mid-February finally upheld the ruling that Red Dye No. 2 (known generically as amaranth) can no longer be used in foods, drugs or cosmetics, because its study suggests it is a "weak carcinogen." Which, in plainer language, means it may be a cancer-causing agent.

Instead Red Dye No. 40 can be substituted to brighten our foods, drugs and cosmetics. This decision climaxes a 15-year controversy over this chemical which is taken into the human body in so many different ways.

Why the decision to scrap this dye play took so long is a mystery. And equally mystifying to us, the spectators in the bleachers, is the added news that manufacturers may not continue using the old dye except where it is already mixed with other ingredients. Now, what-in-the-hell are they talking about?

There's no way for us to know how many millions of products using Red Dye No. 2 are on store shelves and in warehouses. These still can be sold. And since we don't have the knowledge or the testing equipment when we buy a product at the supermarket or the drug store, we don't know whether this is a new play, or we are seeing an instant rerun of an old play.

For years we who are cholesterol-conscious have been helped down the path to incipient heart problems by the misleading labeling of foods with the catchall words "vegetable oil" as one of the ingredients. The American Heart Association, nutritionists, doctors and government agencies have maintained that coconut oil is one of the chief contributors of unneeded cholesterol in the human body but it too often has been camouflaged as a "vegetable fat" or "vegetable oil."

Under a new ruling by the Food and Drug administration the consumer now should know what kind of oil or fat is used in food products. The phrase "vegetable" won't be enough. The label will have to identify the oil or fat which is used. But, for some reason, which I also cannot understand, the new labeling won't be required for all products shipped in interstate commerce until after Jan. 1, 1978. Which may be too long a time for many of us to wait. And it will be a good idea to take along the eyeglasses when supermarketing because that new identification of the oil or shortening used may show up in very small print.

When we shop we look for the dry breakfast cereal with as few additives as possible. Then some of us who may be nutrition-conscious may add a couple of spoonsful of millers bran or wheat germ for necessary roughage.

Recently I read the box sides, and not the box tops, of a few dozen containers of dry cereal on my supermarket shelves. A few listed as many as 16 items added to the original grain product. The vitamins aren't only referred to as the simple letters of the alphabet as we know them but have tongue-twisting and confusing scientific names. Sugar, which older people try to use in limited quantities, is listed in some of the cereals. A few unashamedly confessed to using coconut oil or coconut flakes. Others covered up by listing "vegetable" oil and a coloring additive (maybe Red Dye No. 2). Many indicated BHA and BHT (but no explanation what these letters mean) are added to the ingredients to preserve packaging.

Are these additives in our food good or bad? Or were they just thrown into the box to turn a simple play to the cereal bowl into a complex sneak run?

We've often heard predictions that someday soon we might be getting our three daily meals out of bottles of pills which contain all the vitamins and other elements needed to sustain us. Well, if and when that happens, we will get all the necessary nutrition without the additives but minus the appetizing or delectable taste to tickle our taste buds.

That is, if we live so long on our current diets.

Dear Abby

Abby Resolves Not To Interrupt in 1976

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: It started out to be a blue holiday season until I saw you on the Dinah Shore show on New Year's Eve. Abby, just seeing you on that show changed my life. You announced to millions of people that you were making a New Year's resolution that you weren't going to interrupt anybody!

When I heard you say that I realized that had been my problem all my life. I always talked too much. I never let anybody finish a sentence.

I am a salesman, Abby, and I'm a good one, but my boss used to take me aside and suggest that I listen instead of talk so much. I never took him seriously. I don't know why it didn't hit home until I heard you say it.

Thanks for the best idea I've had in years!

L. IN LOS ALAMITOS

DEAR L.: Making a resolution is one thing—keeping it, another. So far, I've kept it, but it's not easy. Write to me in June and let me know how you're doing. And lotsa luck!

DEAR ABBY: I think I have the perfect way to shut off the flow of gossip from an older woman without being disrespectful.

An acquaintance used to bring me gossip I didn't care to hear, so when she'd tell me something, I would ask, "Are you praying for her?" (Or him, or them, as the case might be.)

She admitted that she was not. Then I would tell her that they needed a lot of prayers, and she should be praying for them every day.

A few instances of that, and she didn't bring me any more gossip.

C. S. IN LAKELAND, FLA.

DEAR C.: Beautiful. Your suggestion may inspire people who haven't prayed in years to resume praying.

DEAR ABBY: We are the parents of two adopted Oriental children, and we'd like to say a word on behalf of all adopted children of different ethnic backgrounds.

Strangers constantly stop us in public places and gush variations of the following: "Look at those dolls! Aren't they precious? Look at those eyes!" Then they ask, "Where did you get them? Are they Chinese, Korean, Vietnamese, Filipino or Japanese?" (They never guess correctly.)

Meanwhile, our children stand there wondering why their blood lines and ancestry are so all-fired important to these loud strangers who carry on as though the children are deaf. Such scenes have already made the little one painfully shy.

We adopted these children because we wanted to share our lives with them, not because of their doll-like cuteness.

Please tell people that if they want to gush, they should find a poodle to babble over. One man even picked up our little daughter and carried her off to "show his wife" in another part of the store. We were horrified when we discovered she was missing.

Next time I hope he picks up a Doberman to "show his wife."

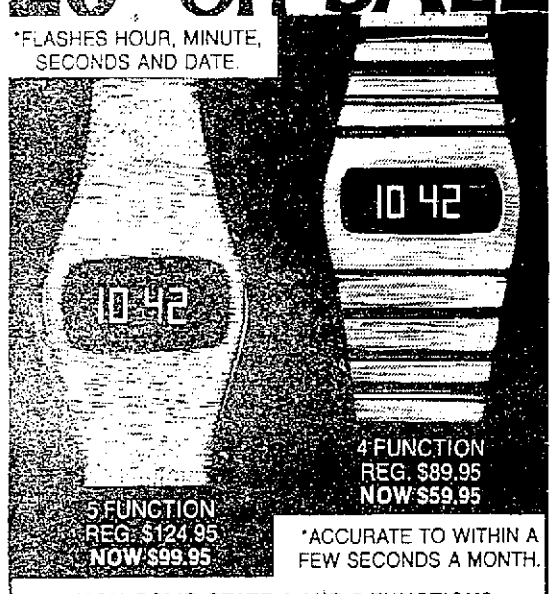

Please print this, Abby. It may make those who behave this way realize that we parents don't appreciate such compliments, and it only makes our children feel like freaks.

OREGON MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Here's your letter. I hope it helps.

London's Men's Clubs Face Ladies; Inflation

WASHINGTON

When women invaded London clubs a few years ago, appalled clubmen retreated deeper into their leather armchairs and grumbled into their vintage port

Some clubs coped with the invasion by allowing women to use their dining rooms at specified times or by setting up "ladies annexes" Others remained steadfastly male

Now the exclusive gentlemen's clubs are facing a more deadly onslaught inflation The high cost of everything from busboys' salaries to brass polish challenges club secretaries at Boodle's, Pratt's, Beefsteak, The Athenaeum, and other bastions of traditon

Guards Joins Cavalry

The Guards Club, founded in 1810, recently was forced to merge with the Cavalry Club, and auctioned off everything from chandeliers to linens, the National Geographic Society reports

Before World War II, about 120 clubs clustered around Pall Mall and St James's Street, now less than 40 survive Some trace their ancestry back to 18th century coffeehouses, others had racier origins

White's Club, founded in 1693, was originally a chocolate house, but it attracted heavy betting aristocratic gamblers who made it notorious One member lost 32,000 pounds at the card table during a memorable night back in 1755

Cards were not the only way to lose money The betting book at White's reveals that "Mr F Cavendish bets Mr H Brownrigg 2-1 that he does not kill a blue bottle fly before he goes to bed' The archive fails to disclose whether Brownrigg bagged his blue bottle

A pleasant stroll down St James's Street from White's is Boodle's Club Thought it was founded in 1763 by a manservant named Boodle, the club became a meeting place for peers, and anyone asking for Sir John quickly found himself surrounded by responding members

An 18th century duke enjoyed sitting in Boodle's elegant bow window on rainy days to watch "the damned people get wet"

Decent Coat Helps

Some of the 'people' then had their own establishments A club grandly called the House of Lords nevertheless was frequented, a historian relates, by the "more dissolute sort of barristers attorneys, and tradesmen of what were then called the better sort but no one who wore a decent coat was excluded"

By the 19th century, London clubs no longer were aristocratic preserves Newly rich industrialists built pretentious town houses for their clubs Other groups that shared similar wealth, tastes, or rank organized exclusive meeting places

At the Carlton, traditionally the only men put up for membership have been true-blue members of the Conservative Party, but the financial squeeze now is forcing the club to consider admitting non-Tories It may not be easy A Carlton member once brought a legal injunction against a chairman who wanted to admit Liberal Party members

White's, another haunt of Tories, cherishes its reputation as London's most arrogant club A Labour Party official who had the temerity to enter White's was kicked soundly in the seat of the pants by a member The kicker was forced to resign because "you can't have that sort of thing"

The Athenaeum, ranked as the club of the intelligentsia, shelters Anglican bishops, scientists, judges, men of letters, and the most distinguished people in government

The club's imposing membership list inspired a bit of verse "The very waiters answer 'Yes' with eloquence Socratical,/ And always place the knives and forks in order mathematical"

The food at London clubs often is not equal to the service One commentator mocked The Athenaeum "Where all the arts and sciences are understood except gastronomy" Carlton's records disclose that in 1881 Sir William Fraser "used threatening language to the steward about the asparagus"

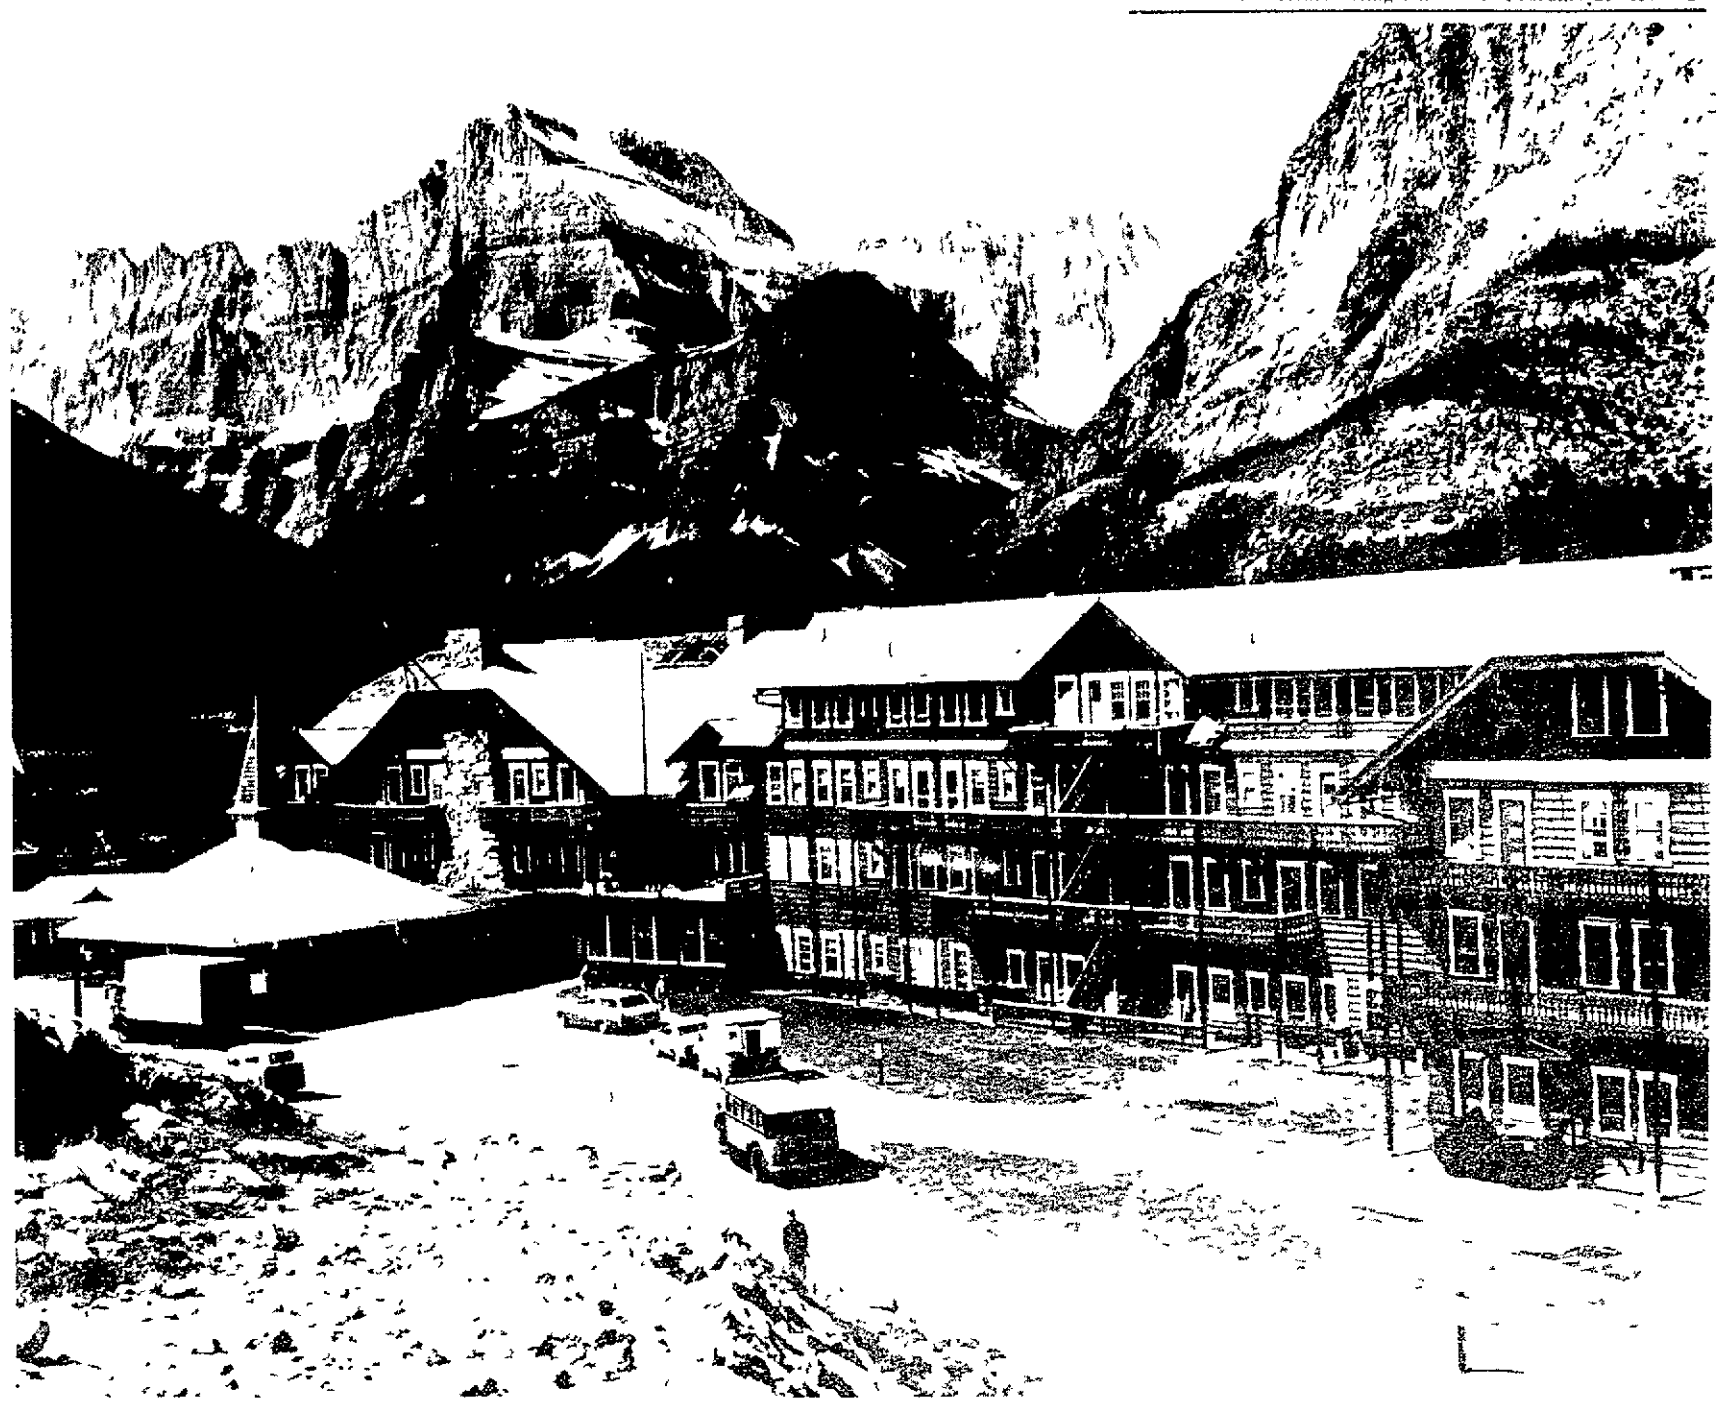

Waiter in Tears

The staffs of London clubs must often maintain stiff upper lips in the face of abuse At the Turf Club a guest thanked a waiter for his excellent service The waiter broke into tears, explaining after he composed himself I have been employed here man and boy for 40 years sir and that's the first kindly word I have ever heard'

Waiters sometimes must serve as volunteer firemen At the Oriental, founded for colonial civil servants one retired India hand fell asleep every night over his cigar and port He held the club record for setting his chair afire — 14 times in one year

Paying for fire damage aside London's men's clubs are not expensive by American country club standards Annual dues usually run about $240 a year But not everyone with the requisite money is admitted In many clubs just one blackball vetoes a proposed member

One famous club took in no members for two years The members were bewildered at the unwonted exclusiveness until it was discovered that one befuddled old gentleman always put his vote in the "No slot because he thought it meant 'No Objection

Travel

Beware of Booze and Bicycles When Driving Europe's By-ways

The welcome mat is out on autobahnen and calles, autostrada and boulevards, roundabouts and flyovers in Europe this year — but they do not carry carte blanche to drive exactly as you would on turnpikes and city streets at home

As a matter of fact, you probably would not want to drive the way you do on American highways and by-ways, according to the Department of Safety and Research of the Combined Life Insurance Company of New York

To help the swarms of Americans who are flying and driving their ways across Europe this year, Combined's safety experts are offering a few pointers for those unfamiliar with foreign motoring

Be alert to the fact that throughout Europe the fast cars go faster and the smaller ones go slower than American vehicles You have to watch out for both Horse drawn vehicles present a special hazard in Ireland Denmark has no speed limit, so drive with caution at all times

In Norway you can be arrested for smoking while driving through built-up areas Seat belts are required in some countries It is illegal to wash your car in public or on Sundays or religious holidays in Switzerland The Austrian police, as well as those in several other countries, can fine you on the spot for a minor infraction, call the nearest U S consulate for more serious problems

Horn honking, except in emergencies, is frowned on in Britain, France and Scandinavia "Le zigzag" (weaving) on highways is forbidden in France, while passing on open roads in Spain is legal only when the maneuver can be deftly completed within 200 yards or 15 seconds And before you pass, sound your horn or flash your lights

Most European countries have adopted common highway codes and use international signs that are reasonably simple to understand Driving practices are generally similar to those in the United States, for example traffic approaching from the right has the right of way and left lanes are for passing — except of course, in countries where one drives on the left In some countries no passing is allowed on the right on multiple lane superhighways, so check the rules before you venture into the fast moving traffic

The two greatest dangers confronting motorists in Europe, regardless of nationality, are bicycles and booze, according to Combined's travel safety research

While the number of bikes may be reaching epidemic proportions in the U S only now, bicycling is a well entrenched way of life in Europe, particularly in Holland, where the danger of collision between cycle and car is acute

The law in some places makes the cyclist king, giving him the right of way no matter what It is wise to operate on that assumption, in any case

As for alcohol, an American had better think twice before tooling along country roads, pausing for a leisurely lunch with a few glasses of wine or beer and then resuming his journey, Combined's safety advisers suggest Because of the high rate of alcoholism and accidents, drivers in some countries are forbidden to get behind the wheel after even a sip of beer And the penalties can be severe — revocation of license or even jail — for one who flunks the breatholator or blood test for alcohol

In Czecholovakia, for example, the authorities have decreed that a driver may not imbibe at all before or during a trip Bulgaria has a rule that it is illegal to drive for eight hours after drinking alcohol while in Norway abstinence must continue for six hours after a trip, just in case the authorities want to check your blood for alcohol

Scandinavia has the toughest anti-drinking laws One beer and one schnapps are the limit before driving in Norway, Denmark and Sweden No liquor is allowed to drivers in Finland

In case of an accident do what you would normally do at home Exchange information with the other party summon the police and seek first aid or medical treatment which in some countries is provided without charge

Although not required in most countries, it is advisable to have an International Drivers License, which you can obtain before leaving home This minimizes understandings by translating the information on your U S driver's permit into nine languages

You may also want to get a Green Card from your insurance agent attesting to the fact that you carry sufficient coverage for an accident Rental cars are equipped with the necessary documents but to be on the safe side make sure you are adequately covered before you leave home

European cars are usually also equipped with red triangles to be placed in the road a few yards behind disabled vehicles to warn oncoming traffic of a possible hazard

Tennessee Williams Speaks Out

By MARIAN CHRISTY

NEW YORK — Playwright Tennessee Williams, dressed in an impeccably gray Pierre Cardin suit, reaches for his white straw hat sitting atop the television set With a charming smile, he announces this is hello goodbye because he's got a doctor's appointent in a few minutes

"I'm overworked, sleeping badly and oh dear, the pressure is enormous," sighs Williams with a smile that suggests the drama taking place is staged Soon Williams, brilliant author of Cat On A Hot Tin Roof' and "A Street car Named Desire is sipping black coffee and talking about the outrageous peaks and valleys that have dogged his life, career and public image

About the aura of being a hypochondriac

It s possibly true I ve suffered a considerable amount of authentic illness Somehow I don t handle pressures well Did you know I once had a spectacular breakdown that was nationally advertised by my brother who held a press conference and announced I was being sent to an asylum indefinitely? But ha ha I was released in three months

About repeated bouts with alcohol

'For a long time I found liquor a necessary crutch It gave me a calm facade The image of being a drunk is regrettable but true I cannot do anything about it

On his well publicized capers at high society parties I m rarely invited anywhere these days — but that s understandable! For awhile I was an impossible guest People remember that I was never obnoxious but I'd say rather outrageous things

"Once a rich New York hostess invited me to meet Princess Alexandra Well I'd never heard of that princess But I went

Well, my dear, they put me in an alcove and said to wait because the Princess and other guests hadn t finished dinner! Well finally I was escorted to her majesty She was seated next to Danny Kaye you know — the comedian? Well I went right up to Danny and said please move I always sit next to royalty! The Princess a cousin of Queen Elizabeth was so horrified she fled from the room

I was preposterous don t you think? He giggles

Beleaguered Tennessee Williams 61 a celebrity from Columbus Miss who has been racked by controversy is even willing to talk about repeated reports that he has been operated on for breast cancer

Liver damage caused a swelling on my chest and it had to be removed I explained it all ver carefully to a journalist who promptly put into print I had breast cancer Why that would be very odd for a man!

(Editors Note Actually doctors say breast cancer in men is more common than many would suspect)

The man talks about finally coming to grips with himself learning how to cope with the realities of living Less and less does he allow feelings of anger and nervousness to overtake him Lately he s been laughing a lot The other day while lunching at Sardi s he laughed so hard that he fell off his chair and sprained his hand

You know he says I was having a picnic recently in the park a perfect

Live Day-to-Day . . . But Buy Your Clothes

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — Several weeks ago Oscar de la Renta decided to go to Europe My menswear is made in Korea so I went shopping in the stores for a winter suit and I could only find one suit I had designed in one store and it was not my size

He didn t go to Europe

Granted there were probably other reasons Still it s rather comforting to know that the man or woman on the street isn t the only one having trouble finding what he or she needs — when it s needed

I know Americans like to plan ahead de la Renta says but I don t like to buy in June what I ll wear in September I like to live day to-day and I d like to see merchandise in the stores for late buyers But stores have inventories and they have to move merchandise it s the retailer who wants the merchandise early

You bet I want the merchandise early the retailer is likely to respond I can t risk not having it on hand In fact I keep wanting it earlier and earlier

The retailer s story continues The manufacturer accuses me of forcing him to move his production schedules back but he and I are really victims of a set of vexations that are enough to make you want to give up the store

First there are quota problems limiting just how much can be imported And there s no getting around them because we all know it s cheaper to have goods produced over there than here

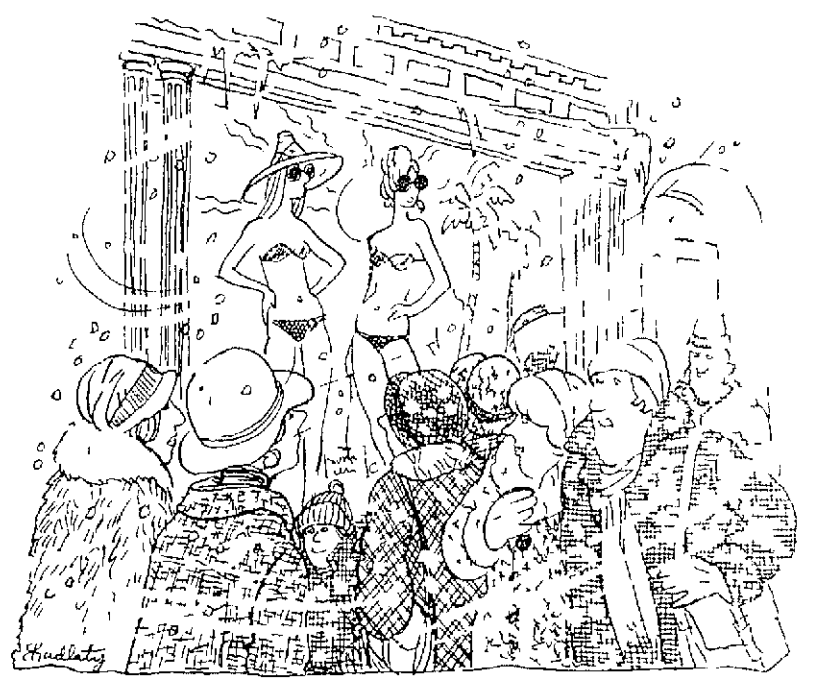

Then there are fabric and dye shortages real or enforced to raise prices Now if I don t place my commitments months ahead with the manufacturer I risk not getting what I want And he has to have time to place his orders with the mills Then I have to contend with items ordered that are dropped from a line and late or wrong deliveries

Next the customer comes in on Friday and complains that the skirt she saw on Tuesday and has returned to buy is gone Well these days I d rather be understocked than buried under piles of garments I can t sell You don t hear her complaining about my sales though which I m running earlier and earlier each season

The point in retailing is to move the merchandise Bring in the new stuff quick don t let them lose interest I m accused or not letting merchandise stand long enough for the customer to discover her need for it Well I ve been in business a long time and it seems to me

And so it goes [illegible] and round the garment [illegible] maypole The [illegible] this You may [illegible] day at a time [illegible] to be clothed [illegible] going to have [illegible] weeks in advance

The Master Bedroom

The decor today is softer than in bygone years. There's a touch of yesterday in even a modern setting. The floral print quilted spread and the many pictures create a interesting, patterned bedroom. Lush, cascading plants blend right angles into arcs. This is the master bedroom of the Tolbert Townhouse in New York City. The rug and the photo are from Gulistan, "Fervor," by name, of Trivera Star Polyester.

It's Your Landscape

Bring Spring Inside

Late winter and early spring is a good time to cut branches from trees and shrubs for forcing into bloom indoors. Actually, you can do this as early as January, but the closer a shrub comes to its natural blooming period the easier it is to force in into bloom.

Some shrubs and trees are stubborn about producing their flowers before their normal time. Others, such as those shown here, are less reluctant.

One of the easiest to force is forsythia (A). If brought inside and placed in warm water, its buds will unfold in about a week Its cheerful yellow flowers will remain in good condition for an equal length of time.

Pussy willows (B), always favorites in spring flower arrangements, are also easy to force and they last for a long time. The French-type pussy willow is the largest and most attractive for this purpose.

Silver Bell (C), aptly named because of the shape of its flowers, can be forced into bloom in about two weeks. Its blossoms will last a week or so.

Japanese quince (D), of which there are many fine varieties, will burst forth into bloom after 14 days in water indoors The flowers resemble those of apple trees They will keep in good condition for six or seven days.

The fringe tree (E) is a large shrub that bears curious white flowers with long ribbon-like petals. These open in about 16 days when forced They will last approximately a week

This by no means exhausts the list of shrubs and trees that may be forced. Cornelian cherry, Japanese barberry, winter honeysuckle, crab apples, pears, plums, sycamore and Norway naples are several others.

In selecting branches for forcing choose those which will fit your containers or that can be trimmed to fit them. Choose also those which are manageable. Some branches, especially those of forsythia, can be so contorted that arranging them becomes extremely difficult.

To force a branch into bloom, all you need do is to place it in room temperature water and give it a little sunlight. To hasten the blooming, soak complete branches in warm water for 15 minutes after bringing them into the house.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate

Should Bank Appraiser Tell?

Is the mortgage lender obligated to tell the borrower what is wrong with the property? Readers continually complain that they have been allowed to buy obviously unsatisfactory properties without a word of caution from the bank or mortgage lender. This misunderstanding arises because of ignorance as to the role of the mortgage lender.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: The asking price for the property was $40,000. I paid my bank $60 to have it appraised. They told me that $40,000 was a fair price, and that they were willing to give me a $30,000 mortgage. So I signed the agreement and made settlement.

After I moved in I discovered that the house was in terrible condition The basement floods periodically, the water pressure is low, the heater has two large cracks, about a dozen floor joists are eaten away by termites, and the electrical system is inadequate. I could go on an name a dozen other things that are wrong. The repairs will cost over $9,000. I don't have the money.

My real complaint, however, is with the bank. I had occasion to examine the appraisal. The appraisers listed most of the items I found to be wrong with the house . I feel the bank should have informed me of the defects.

In fact, I became so angry that I wrote a letter to the president of the bank, advising that I was going to stop making mortgage payments. He replied that they would foreclose.

Don't you think the bank was negligent in not letting me know the poor condition of the house. — I'VE BEEN TAKEN.

This kind of complaint is common. It is constantly being leveled against banks and mortgage companies. It arises because there is a misunderstanding as to the role of the mortgage lender.

A mortgage lender inspects and appraises a property to make certain that the value represents adequate security for the loan. It is not done for the purpose of determining whether the property meets the needs of the buyer

The mortgage lender is a third party to the real estate transaction He is not supposed to be on the buyer's side or the seller's side. A buyer must do his own investigating He cannot expect the lender to assume the burden for him.

For example, suppose a lender were to advise someone not to purchase a property Can you imagine the cry of outrage and the possible lawsuit from the seller and the selling broker? Also, as a practical matter, the mortgage lender would quickly learn that few brokers would care to do business with that kind of bank.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I am quite happy with the house we just bought. There is one problem, however — cooking odors coming from the kitchen. The only way I can prevent these odors from penetrating the rest of the house is to close the kitchen door There must be a better way. — SENSITIVE NOSE

Your problem can be solved easily. Your kitchen exhaust fan is of inadequate capacity You should install one capable of changing the air every three minutes. Here's how you calculate the size of exhaust fan to install.

Multiply your kitchen length (in feet) by its width, and then by its height. You will now have the cubic contents of your kitchen

Divide the answer by three This will give you the capacity of the fan needed, expressed in cubic feet per minute This is the way exhaust fans are rated.

DEAR MR. MELTZER My husband likes a cocktail before dinner I don't mind his drinking, but I am really discouraged by the rings left on the furniture where he carelessly leaves his glass.

After 20 years I know I can't change my husband's sloppy habits. So pleas tell me what to do to eliminate these rings — I, TOO, LIKE A DRINK

The best way if you have the energy and patience, would be to follow your husband around, immediately wiping up the spill This method may be impractical so here's an alternative recommended and used by a furniture refinisher

Make a paste consisting of lemon oil and rotten stone (available at hardware stores). The technique is to rub the paste into the stain and then wipe clean with a polishing cloth. Usually one application is all that is necessary to make the ring disappear In stubborn cases, follow with a second application

DEAR MR MELTZER I have been deducting real estate and school taxes each year when I file my income tax return It represents quite a savings.

This year I had to pay out $3,800 because sewers were installed Will I be allowed to deduct this tax when I file this year? - EVERYLITTLE BIT HELPS

Sorry, but you cannot deduct your sewer assessment The reason is that it is not a tax, but an assessment for improvements.

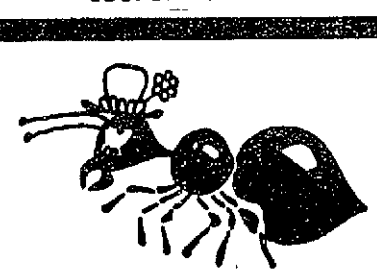

Uncle Sam says your house is now worth more because of this capital improvement It's added on to the price you paid

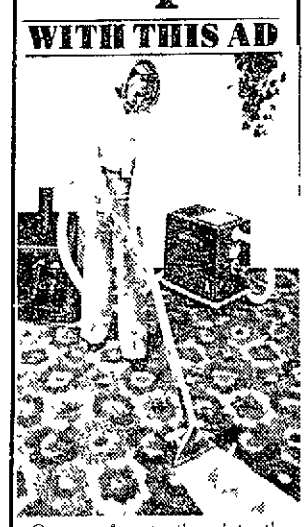

Then, when you sell (assuming you sell at a profit), the amount the sewer cost you gives a new base from which you figure your capital gains tax which you owe Uncle Sam

Redemptorist Oblate Rites

ESOPUS

In special rites, Frank Sessler was made an oblate of the Redemptorist Order recently at Mt. St. Alphonsus Seminary

Unlike a priest, brother or seminarian, an oblate is a co-worker, a co-member of the Order. He is so honored because of his contribution to the Order.

A lifelong resident of the Kingston area, he has worked for nearly 20 years at the Mount as an assistant maintenance man. Always ready and willing to perform any service, he was made an oblate of the Redemptorist Order for his outstanding and unselfish work.

Sessler and his family were honored at a Mass during which he received a diploma. A dinner for Sessler, his family, the seminarians and staff was held in the dining hall after Mass.

Participating in the presentation were the Rev. Daniel L. Lowery, CSSR, president-rector of Mt. St. Alphonsus, the Rev. Eugene J. Grohe, CSSR, Brother Raphael Rock.

The son of Mrs. Anna Sessler of Kingston and the late Joseph Sessler, the oblate is married to the former Catherine Brazee. They have two sons, Frank J. and Vincent P., both of Kingston and a daughter, Mrs. Donna Perry of Portsmouth, Va., and five grandchildren. They reside at Mt. St. Alphonsus.

3 in Family Enter Ministry

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — William Hare, his wife and children did not plan to become a family of Methodist ministers, but one by one they seem to be making the same choice.

"It's something the Lord has just led us into," said Mary Ellen Hare, whose husband spent 20 years in management and sales at General Electric before becoming a United Methodist minister a few years ago.

Now, Mrs. Hare has decided to earn her local minister's license. She is taking correspondence courses supervised by theology professors at Methodist church schools.

Their son, Kevin, 21, in the navy at San Diego, Calif., also wants to become a minister. He has started his studies with the hope of attending Oklahoma City University, affiliated with the Methodist church, and then entering a seminary.

"My local preacher's license will help me in 11 phases of my church work, in life as a person, and when my husband needs to call on me," Mrs. Hare said.

"I really haven't decided whether I want to do a lot of preaching or not. I just want to be there when needed, be prepared with the appropriate tools to step in and help in any way I can."

She said she will be able to assist in communion with the presence of a church elder, but she believes most of her work will be in Christian education and working with Methodist women's organizations.

Hare, 48, is associate minister at Grace United Methodist Church. He previously served Oklahoma churches at Crescent and Marshall.

Mrs. Hare, also 48, recalled how they told their three children five years ago that Hare wanted to leave his company and become a minister.

"When he decided to go to the seminary we sat the three kids down in 1970 and said, 'Okay, this is what we want to do. What do you say about it?'

"Our older son said, 'I think it's great. I'm going in the Navy, so it's up to the younger ones.'"

Kevin, a high school junior, and their daughter, an eighth grader, approved.

"The kids have been very helpful and very supportive of everything we've done. Most teen-agers think of going out and having a good time and spending a lot of money. We had to curtail expenses in high school," she said. "I think this helped with Kevin's decision. He saw how God worked in our lives to help other people."

Mrs. Hare said women have full rights in the United Methodist Church.

"In the Methodist Church women can do anything they want. In October, 1973, we had a United Methodist Women's Conference in Cincinnati. At a communion service there were only women Methodist ministers, 36 of them," she said. "This is something I like about the Methodist church. They do listen to us."

She said the family's life had undergone a deep spiritual change.

"We're just head and shoulders above when we were lay people," she said. "It's just a fascinating experience."

Dr. Joyce Brothers Discards Puritan Ethic

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dr. Joyce Brothers, television's best known psychologist and author of four books, has shed her puritanism to give a green light to infidelity for married women.

Only a year ago the diminutive Dr. Brothers warned wives to stick to the homefires and avoid extramarital affairs at all costs.

It was right there in black and white in her book, "The Brothers' System of Liberated Love and Marriage."

Well, she's got a fresh book in the stalls titled "Better Than Ever" in which she really liberates married women of all ages.

The new tome encourages females over 40 to enjoy the second halves of their lives.

"Why throw away the next 30 or 40 years?" she said during a Hollywood stop on a promotion-al tour. "The best is yet to come. I don't begin to suggest that all married women should have affairs.

"But for those who feel unappreciated or unloved, sometimes that's the answer. It strengthens their marriages, makes them better wives and often results in them becoming more appreciative of their husbands."

These are strong words for the tiny (5-foot-1) blonde. And a complete about face from her pristine advice of the past.

"It was difficult for me to write about extramarital sex for women," she said. "I thought I would be in for a hard time from some of the readers.

"But as it turns out I apparently hit a wellspring of women who agree and have believed for a long time in affairs outside their marriage but have never spoken up about it.

"I changed my mind on the subject after listening to women all over the country. I give about two lectures a week in small towns and cities followed by question and answer sessions.

"After that I hold a rap session for those who are interested. Over and over again wives told me that affairs have improved their marriages and that their husbands were more interested in them afterwards.

"They said I was wrong about infidelity being destructive to marriages. With so many women — and I mean hundreds of them — objecting to my previous stand, it was necessary for me to re-think the theory."

"An affair would be wrong for most women, I think," she added. "But for those who find it is an answer to solving their marital problems it could be a healthy and rewarding ex-perience."

According to the best statistics she can find, somewhat fewer than half the married women in the country are cheating or have cheated on their husbands.

"It's still a smaller percentage than the men who have extracurricu lar affairs," she said. "Between 50 and 60 per cent of married men have had outside affairs at some time in their lives.

"None of the statistics is absolutely correct, of course, but it is estimated between 30 and 45 per cent of married women have had at least one extramarital affair.

"Now more older women are experiencing infidelity without telling their husbands. They are smarter about such things than young married women.

"The young ones use their affairs as a punishment by unconsciously making sure their husands find out about them."

Dr. Brothers was at a loss to determine when an affair (or affairs) becomes philandering. Neither is she sure how or when the word promiscuity applies.

It is her contention, however, that if more than half the married male population is involved in such clandestine activities, not all the women involved are necessarily single.

Personally, she has been married to New York physician Milton Brothers for 26 years. Dr. Brothers is quick to say she is happily married and hasn't fooled around herself. Nor, she said, is it likely she will do so in the future. ———

Theater World

Off Broadway; Something For Everyone

NEW YORK (UPI) — Theat-er-going off Broadway is like skiing on an unknown moun-tain: you may get the thrill of your life, but you also risk life and limb.

"Cracks," which opened Feb. 10 at the Theatre de Lys, was downhill suicide. It was 90 minutes of sick sex jokes combined with a murder mystery which had no possible solution. It cheated the audien-ce, had no possible future, and closed the same night. One wonders what producer Adela Holzer saw in it — and what director Tony Giordano did to the original script.

Lovely Diane Keaton wiped out in something called "The Primary English Class," which opened at the Circle in the Square (downtown) Feb. 16. It concerns the first night of a class in English for foreign students and is based on two jokes (?): six characters of different nationalities bear the name Waste Basket in their own languages; and the total lack of communication where there is no common language. Prolific playwright Israel Horo-witz conceivably could have made it a valid comedy, but he seems to have lost interest and just made a snowman of all the obvious cliches in the situation.

Miss Keaton and Richard Libertini as the Italian student provided what entertainment the evening offered, but even Miss Keaton as the reluctant teacher was obviously embarrassed by an irrelevant tear-jerk retelling of the time she got raped in the park. Small mercy: like "Cracks," it only lasted an hour and a half, without intermission.

Another one-acter was "Apple Pie," a musical work by Myrna Lamb and Nicholas Meyers which opened Feb. 12 at the Anspacher Theater in The New York Shakespeare Festival's Public Theater complex.

"Apple Pie" deals with the experiences of Lise, a part-Jewish German girl who spurns her mother's advice to sublimate her sensuality and instead submits willingly to masculine brutalization in both Nazi Germany and post-war Ameri-ca. There is one particularly nasty scene in which her blood-smeared abortionist becomes yet another victimizer. "Apple Pie" is said to be an antifeminist feminist play. It really is bad Brecht and worse Weill.

A couple of entertaining off-Broadway one-acters should be mentioned here, to balance the picture.

"The Lost Ones," the dramat-ization of a Samuel Beckett story presented in the Little Theater at the Public Theater by the Mabou Mines group, is an experience you may not enjoy but which fascinates. For want of a better description, it is a Theater of Miniature. The story is narrated in a beautiful Irish voice by David Warrilow, and played out with miniature scenery and microscopic human figurines manipulated by Warrilow.

The theme is of a Kafkaesque tower inhabited by human beings who cannot escape their destiny and who succumb eventually either to catatonia or to dispassionate desiccated sex. The play is sometimes frightening, always hypnotic, supremely theatrical.

Then there's the joyous musical comedy "Boy Meets Boy" at the Actors Playhouse. It is an entertaining parody of Cole Porter, in which the boy-meets-girl, boy-loses-girl theme is switched innocently to boy-meets-boy, boy-loses-boy. The dialogue and music are dead on target, the homosexuality is unobjectionable, and if the production is straw-hat league, that only adds to the fun. ———

By far the most interesting of the new works off-Broadway is "Every Night When the Sun Goes Down," a black drama which opened Feb. 15 at the American Place Theatre.

Philip Hayes Dean's play is set in a sleazy hotel-cum-nightclub in a black Detroit suburb, to which returns Blood, the former owner and local minor racketeer. Blood has served a prison term for the murder of his retarded daught-er, who actually was killed by his wife. He has been radical-ized in prison, and persuades the corrupted inhabitants of the hotel to join him in burning down their environment in order to cut loose from the influence of The Other Man, the white source of their corruption and degradation.

The anger and the violence do not ring true, and the play is loaded with heavy-handed sym-bolism. But the hard-edged street dialogue and much of the characterization are the work of a born dramatist. The naturalist three-level set by Kert Lundell is superb. Among the cast must be mentioned Marge Eliot as a streetwalker, Roscoe Orman as her fancy man, and Joe Seneca as the worn-out handyman.

The latest Bicentennial revival by the uptown Equity Library Theatre was E.B. Ginty's minor play about Jesse James, "Missouri Legend," which had a brief Broadway run in 1938. The play, running Feb. 12-22, is a straight factual dramatization of the last eight days of the famous outlaw, leading up to his assassination by Bobby Ford. Ginty would have done better to use his imagination more, as the middle half of the play is unbelievably mawkish, but the ELT "Missouri Legend" had its moments and some of the acting, notably Earl Wentz as the idealistic Ozark boy Bill Gashade, was well worth seeing.

It is fascinating to compare "Missouri Legend" with anoth-er contemporary play about Jesse James, David Freeman's "Jesse and the Bandit Queen." The two-character Freeman version is yet another Public Theater presentation, this one appearing on The Other Stage.

"Jesse," now starring Barry Primus and Dixie Carter, is an episodic work which plays hob with time and its characters and basically has little to say, though much is intimated. However, it is far more entertaining and thought-pro-vok-ing than the naturalistic "Missouri Legend," is more penetrative of character when acted as well as by Primus and Miss Carter, and shows how far the theater has come since those far-off days before World War II. ———

STAMFORD, Conn. (UPI) — The only resemblance of the Hartman Theatre musical "Tom Jones" to the Fielding novel and movie was in the name. It was a whole new ball game — and a good one — running Jan. 27-Feb. 22.

The enthusiasm of the cast and the gaiety of the adaptation by Larry Arrick (who also directed) and the music of Barbara Damashek were infectious. The locale and time were unchanged from the book, but there was no attempt to make the cast sound British, and the result was as natural and unforced as anyone would wish.

A highlight was the "Song of the Hunt" ballet, in which the entire cast took part as horses in the memorable hunt scene.

James Naughton made an ideal Tom, with the good looks and small-boy insouciance to make his conquests believable, to say nothing of a deft comic touch and an excellent singing voice. Jill Eikenberry as Sophia and Teri Ralston in three different roles were fine ac-tresses and singers. Akita Yoshimura's sets were tasteful and apposite.

This was the fourth version of Arrick's "Tom Jones." It started as a student production at the National Theatre Insti-tute in Waterford, Conn., moved on to the Trinity Square Repertory Theatre in Providen-ce, R.I., and then to the Loretto-Hilton in St. Louis, Mo., with many changes along the way. With luck, there'll be more, to the benefit of other audiences. ———

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For all the gleaming Shavian wit and the delightful, innovative twists of relationships among characters, there is a remarka-ble Chekhovian feeling to George Bernard Shaw's "Heart-break House" in its counter-point of static decadence and brilliant polemics.

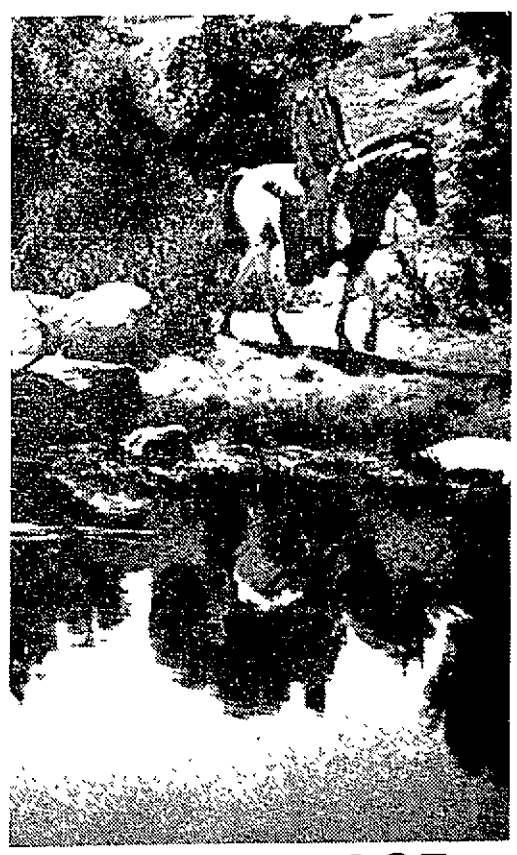

In a production that opened at Washington's Arena Stage Feb. 11, the ambiance of an English country house and the machinations of its occupants were beautifully captured in many ways — in the period costumes by Marjorie Slaiman, the lighting by William Mintzer, and the simple and effective sets by Santo Loquasto.

The play was crisply directed by John Pasquin with an ease of interaction among the players working in the round. The acting varied, the best being Barbara Caruso as Lady Utterword, Jeffrey Jones as her husband, Randall, and Jack Ryland as Hector Hushabye. On balance, there was an absence of the bittersweet poignancy that can be "Heart-break House" in Arena's offering.

ROLLING STONE Review

By Dave Marsh

LYNYRD SKYNYRD: "Gimme Back My Bullets" (MCA 2170).

Lynyrd Skynyrd is the best of the Allman Brothers-influenced, southern-guitar-rock bands, principally because they have never sacrificed melody for power. But they still build their songs around riffs, rather than their riffs around songs, and that is bound to tell. On their fourth album, it has, leading them into the predictable dead end of all the heavy rock groups. The guitar lines are now turgid, and lead singer Ronnie Van Zant's limitations show up too strongly when they aren't protected by interesting instrumental devices. The writing lacks imagination, except for a few brief moments in the title song and on the one song that is worthy of their earlier records, 'Searching.' Even a number by the usually formidable J.J. Cale, 'I Got the Same Old Blues,' falls into the crashing, headachey formula. "Gimme Back My Bullets" could have been made by any number of the genre's lesser lights and, if it had been, it might have worked. But from the leading band in the form, this album is a real disappointment.

NATIONAL LAMPOON: "Good-bye Pop 1952-1976" (Epic PE 33956).

Even those of us who find the parent magazine tasteless, sophomoric and stupid are forced to admit that the Lampoon repertory company's record albums are often hysterically accurate attacks on the rock music scene. "Good-bye Pop," despite an overt hostility to rock, manages to add first-rate and often truly devastating satires of Neil Young, Helen Reddy, FM radio pomposity and record company promotion men to its earliest classics (Bob Dylan, Joan Baez, John Lennon). The Young bit demonstrates that the group has learned something about music — it's hard to tell the real thing and the copy apart, except for the vocals — while the 'Art Rock Suite' is just as boring as it ought to be. The only real problem with the record, in fact, is the commentary on black music (reggae and soul), which is both borderline racist and generally mean-spirited. However, it is probably too much to expect the recording group to completely outgrow the inanities of its source.

* * *

DOBIE GRAY: "New Ray of Sunshine" (Capricorn CP 0163).

Dobie Gray hasn't found a second 'Drift Away' yet, but maybe that's fortunate. Even without a blockbuster track, his first Capricorn album is obviously a superior country-soul item. The big ballads are the best — particularly 'Easy Come, Easy Go' — but he also handles harder-driving material like 'Harold and the Swinging Rocks' and the title song well. If a few of the arrangements did not seem to owe more to the Capricorn formula than to Gray's personality, this could have been a really monumental disc. As it is, "New Ray of Sunshine" is simply further proof that the spirit of 'The In Crowd' lives, and will continue.

Teen Scene: Mahogany Gold

By Lei

A lot of people out there have got to like Diana Ross. She's been in there performing for fifteen of her thirty years, and she's yet to turn out a genuine-grade-A failure — or anything even faintly approximating one. Her latest success is a film called "Mahogany," which, in relatively quiet and unnoticed way, is making a heck of a lot of money. Almost everything Diana Ross is connected with does make money.

Diana Ross seems to have taken all the big gambles and made them all pay off. She started gambling by being a black chick in Detroit at a time when being a black chick in Detroit was not a very hopeful thing to be. Quite a few of the kids who went to high school with Diana Ross are dead now, including Florence Ballard who died last week.

Diana Ross wanted to be a singer. She had two friends, Mary Wilson and Florence and the three of them called themselves the Primettes. They did some performing as a sister group of a group of male singers called the Primes. The Primettes had the nerve to keep bugging the head of Motown Records, Berry Gordy, for a job. Eventually, he gave them one — clapping hands on the background of someone else's record. They kept coming back for more. They'd met Smokey Robinson at some gigs and he put a good word in for them with Gordy . . . About that time the Primes changed their name to the Temptations, so the Primettes changed their name to the Supremes, and the Supremes cut a record called "Where Did Our Love Go?" It went up to numero uno, that's where it went.

Detroit has raised the assembly-line to a fine art, and if it worked with cars, it ought to work with recording groups. Motown kept rolling out the new models, all slick, glossy, and in tune. The new Supremes were not only taking singing lessons, they were also taking grooming lessons, charm school, and the rudiments of acting. They learned how to keep in step dancing on stage, how to say "no" like they didn't mean it, how to say "no" like they did mean it, how to sit gracefully, smile perpetually, and get into a maraboutrimmed gown without messing one hair on their wigs or snagging their four-inch heels. The assembly-line turned the Supremes into three chocolate-brown Barbie Dolls.

Diana Ross was the first of the Supremes to step up front, to add a few more sequins and a little more mascara. It was a gamble to become "Diana Ross and the Supremes." And, it was a bigger gamble, after ten years, eleven gold records, six gold albums, several platinum records, for Diana Ross to go solo. She emerged, smooth and glittering and groomed into a world peopled by Angela Davis and Nina Simone and Miriam Makeba. And won the gamble again. Amidst the mutterings about "plastic soul" her gold record could be heard loud and clear.

When she got the role of Billie Holliday in "Lady Sings The Blues," the protests grew even noisier, but Diana Ross, no matter what her detractors thought, did know what the blues were. She had been one of six kids in a one-room apartment, and she knew the desperation of hunger, and lonliness and crime. She has admitted that if some pimp had gotten to her before Berry Gordy did, she could — just maybe – have turned into another burned-out life like Billie Holliday. She took a gamble when she made the film, and she won big — she came away with the reputation of being a surprisingly good actress and a better singer than anyone had ever suspected.

Now, with "Mahogany," she's won again. The picture's starting to come in with awards, and the theme song is rearranging the charts. Diana Ross may not be as thin as Cher, or as pretty as David Bowie, or as flamboyant as LaBelle, but she has an uncanny ability to make all the right choices in a profession that has destroyed hundreds far more talented than she.

That, in fact, is the final irony of the Diana Ross story. She's sung all the right songs, married the right people, given the right interviews, said all the right things. Yet sometimes, she gets to wondering just who Diana Ross is. Is she still the same girl she was in Detroit with the Primettes and a dream? Or did they, somewhere, take out her heart and substitute a Berry-Gordy-wind-up-engine? The new black consciousness, the emphasis on women's lib, is challenging much of the foundation on which the Diana Ross legend is founded.

. . . It almost seems like it's time for another gamble . . .

Ulster Again Cracks 100 in Beating Oneonta JV

STONE RIDGE

Cracking the century mark for the third consecutive game, Ulster County Community College got prolific scoring from three players and roared past a visiting Oneonta State junior varsity Saturday for a 101-77 victory.

Joe McCall and Ray Younger, UCCC's Mutt and Jeff act, each dumped in 28 points, and Guard Bill Bellamy added 26 more to help Ulster improve to 15-10. The winners substituted freely in the first half and pulled to a 42-37 advantage. They then blew the game wide open with a 17-2 spurt in the second half that turned a 58-53 contest into a 75-55 rout.

Oneonta lost by eight points in the first meeting of the teams, but even a 37 point effort by Dave Ross couldn't make this game resemble that previous encounter. Ross had 27 of his points in the second half, but Ulster still outscored the losers by 19 in the final 20 minutes.

McCall, Ulster's 6-7 center, was recently given honorable mention recognition on the Region XV all star team. He carried a 17.9 scoring average going into the contest with 186 field goals and 59 free throws in 24 games, and he was averaging 14 rebounds per contest

Ulster coach Mike Perry called his pivotman an "underrated player," and said, "I am extremely disappointed that he wasn't at least on the second team, preferably the first team in the region."

Younger, a 5-8 guard from Ellenville, racked up 16 assists against Oneonta while his former high school teammate Leon Ware led the Senators with 13 rebounds.

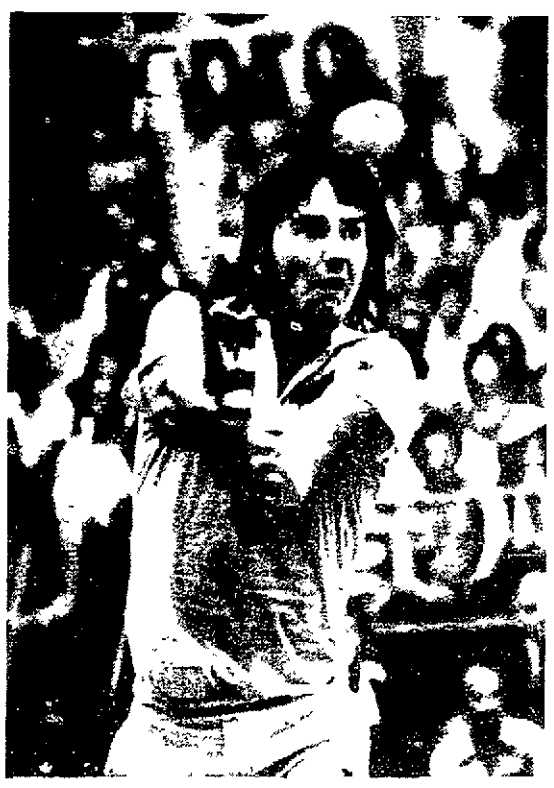

FILLIBUSTERS . . . McCall will represent Ulster in the region's all star game which will precede the finals of the Region XV tournament Saturday night in the Senate Gym . . . UCCC drew seventh seed and will face the No. 2 club in the opening round of the tourney Thursday . . . That opponent will be the winner of last night's Staten Island-Farmingdale contest.

JIMMY CONNORS FLASHES BACKHAND (L) AND WINNING CHECK

Connors Breezes Past Orantes

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — "The way I played today is the way I'd like to play forever."

That's how Jimmy Connors summed up his straight set victory over Manuel Orantes for a $250,000 winner-take-all cash prize and a large measure of vengeance for the defeat he suffered at the hands of the Spaniard last year in the U.S. Open.

This time Connors poured it on against the sometimes helpless Orantes. Connors dashed repeatedly to the net to retrieve drop shots and scored on backhand and forehand smashes to win easily, 6-2, 6-1, 6-0. He took the last 12 games in a row in a non-thriller that had the crowd at Caesars Palace Tennis Pavilion yawning.

Despite the sweet revenge of the victory, Connors was gracious toward his opponent.

"I played the way Manuel played when he beat me at Forest Hills," Connors said.

Orantes, in halting English, said "I was embarrassed. I did not play good."

Orantes did show a fine service, acing Connors five times but that was not enough. Connors aced Orantes only once but his high bouncing serve was very difficult to handle and permitted him to put away easy returns when he came to the net.

Orantes hurt his own game with frequent errors, missing easy volleys at the net. He did not look like the player who beat Connors at Forest Hills last year.

Connors looked like he had completely recovered form an attack of the flu last week. He showed all his old speed afoot and rushed the net effectively to pick up the soft drop shots and slices for which Orantes is famous

Connors kept the game going at a fast pace but there was no suspense. The crowd of several hundred less than the 3,500 capacity of Caesars Palace tennis pavilion were quiet for most of the match except to applaud a few spirited rallies.

The match was over in less than an hour and a half.

Connors, four years younger than the 27-year-old Spaniard, started off with a bang, breaking service to win the opening game, 40-15. Orantes took the third game and the seventh game of the first set but then Connors finished it out 6-2 with a love game, acing his opponent for the final point.

In the second set they each held service until the third game when Connors broke and ran it out 6-1, going to the net frequently and catching Orantes flat-footed with his overheads and backhand volleys.

The third set was a ho-hum affair Only two games went to deuce in the third set and Connors won the third game by love. He finished the match with an overhead smash that Orantes could not reach.

This was billed as the third challenge in the "Heavyweight Championship of Tennis," but Orantes did not put up much of a challenge. This was the first time Connors has won in straight sets. On Feb 2, 1975, Connors opened the series by beating Rod Laver, 6-4, 6 2, 3-6, 7-5, then on April 26, turned back John Newcombe, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4 He also teamed in the same arena in December with Chris Evert to beat Marty Riessen and Billie Jean King 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 7-5.

The match with Orantes was billed as winner-take-all for $250,000, but both players got a cut of the television money

Marquette Outlasts Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Marquette was consistent and Notre Dame wasn't, so the Warriors were hardly pressed to show they deserve at least their No. 2 ranking among the nation's college basketball teams.

The Warriors shot 50 per cent from the field in the first half and 58.3 per cent for the game in racking up their 19th straight victory and handing the Fighting Irish their first loss in 10 games and their fifth in 26 games this season, 81-75, on national television

"The difference was their shots weren't going in and ours' were," Marquette Coach Al McGuire said. "I don't know whether it was our good shooting or their bad shooting."

Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps conceded that "Marquette is an excellent team, and I mean as a team You worry about (Earl) Tatum and then Butch Lee and Lloyd Walton take control of the game and score a lot of points, especially in the clutch.

"Shootingwise, we can't shoot 28 per cent like we did in the first half and expect to do the things you've got to do to beat Marquette. We had good shots and in the first half we missed, and in the second half, we hit them."

Marquette used a "box" on Notre Dame's star, Adrian Dantley, and in the first half the Irish supershooter got only six points. But in the second half, the Irish opened up on the court across from Dantley giving him an opportunity to pass off and Duck Williams blasted 16 points.

With Williams applying some pressure, Dantley came through with 19 points for a game high total of 25. But Lee and Walton combined for 35 to lead the Warriors.

"Walton shot the best he has shot all year," McGuire said. "He was hitting those outside, turn around jumpers and being just what I want him to be."

Marquette trailed only in the opening minutes when Dantley hit two free throws for a 2-0 Irish lead but the Warriors' Jerome Whitehead tied it and Tatum got the first of his eight baskets to put the Warriors ahead to stay.

Still, Marquette had to stave off a strong Notre Dame rally in the final six minutes to hang on to the decision. Trialing by 10 points with 6.34 to go, the Irish hit seven straight points and after Marquette's Tatum hit two buckets, Dantley connected on two straight to cut the Warriors lead to 74-73 with 75 seconds to play

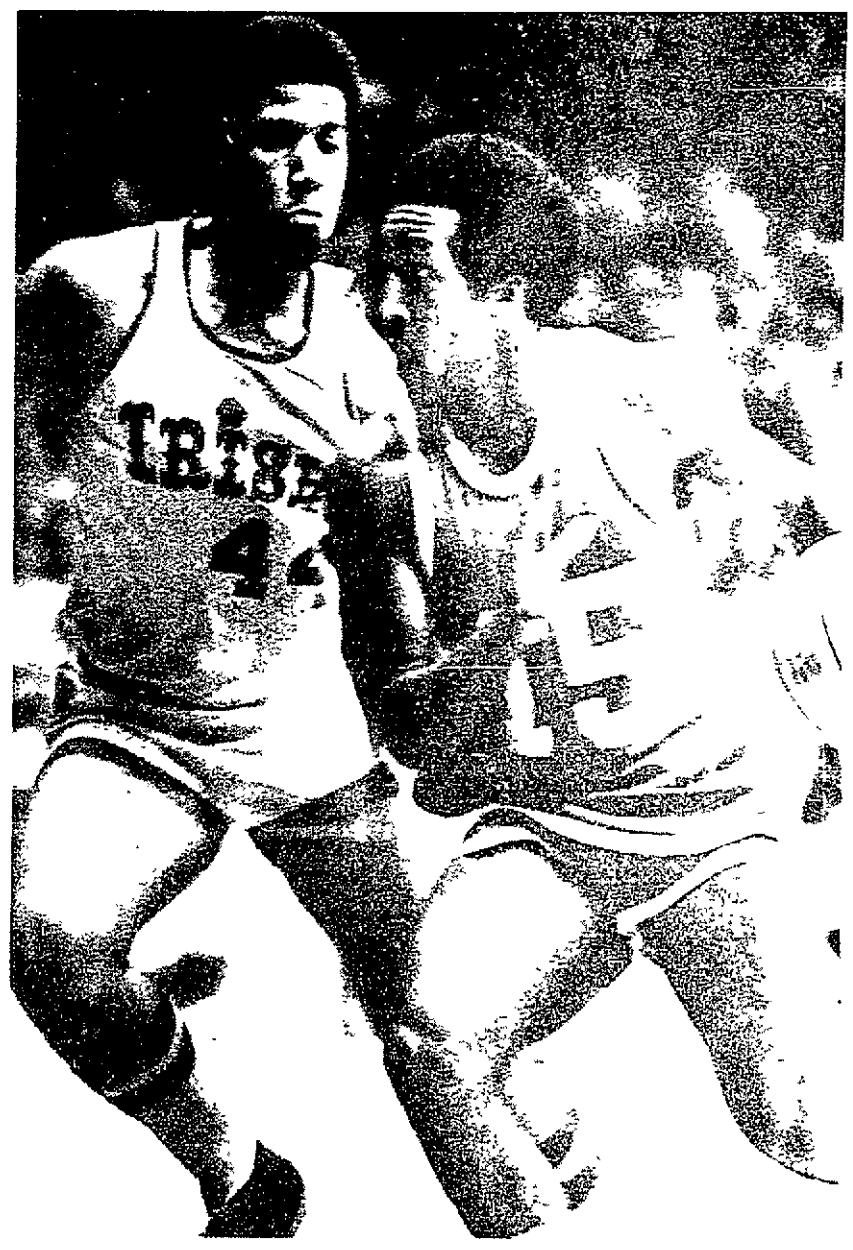

The Warriors went into a "spread" offense to stall the game. Lee connected on a three point play and Walton on two free throws to give Marquette a 79-73 edge and take the Warriors out of trouble.

Twice in the first half Marquette had 12 point leads and boasted a 34-24 margin at the half. But Notre Dame closed the gap to five points after five minutes of play in the second half and stayed close enough to be dangerous until their final rally fell short.

The defeat was the fifth in 26 games for the Irish and their second home loss in 16 games.

Marquette's tenacious manfor-man and zone defense in the first half established the victory pattern. Dantley, who entered the game as the fourth leading scorer in the nation with a 28.5 average, was held to only six points in the first half with both Walton and Tatum taking turns playing defense against the Irish star.

The Warriors defense also forced many bad shots by the Irish and Notre Dame hit only 27.5 per cent on field goals in the opening 20 minutes while Marquette connected for 50 per cent.

Honest Pleasure Romps

HIALEAH, Fla. (UPI) — Bertram R Firestone's Honest Pleasure, winner of the Eclipse Award as the outstanding 2-year-old of 1975, cemented his stature as the advance favorite for the Kentucky Derby Saturday with an easy 11-length victory in the $100,000-added Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah Park

Bet down to 1-5 favorite by the crowd of 22,910, Honest Pleasure paid $2.60, $2.40 and $2.10 across the board as he took the year's first major 3-year-old stakes that lead up to the Triple Crown of the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes

C.R. Jarrell's Inca Roca, a 17-1 shot, finished second, a nose in front of Togus, longest shot in the field at 50-1. However, Togus was disqualified and placed fourth when the stewards upheld a foul claim by jockey Heliodoro Gustines, rider of the original fourth place finisher, Johnny Appleseed.

Inca Roca paid $6.40 and $2.40 while Johnny Appleseed, moved up a notch on the disqualification, paid $3 to show

Under strong restraint from jockey Braulio Baeza throughout the 1⅛-mile race, Honest Pleasure was timed in 1.46 4-5, a record for the Flamingo The previous best was 1.47 run by Bold Ruler in taking the 1957 race.

Had Honest Pleasure been extended in the least, there's little doubt it would have shattered the track record of 1 46 2-5 set by His Majesty under 119 pounds in 1973 All of the starters in the 47th renewal of the Flamingo carried 122 pounds

Baeza said trainer Leroy Jolley told him to try to rate Honest Pleasure

"However, when we broke from the gate, I saw there was no speed," Baeza said ' He went to the front on his own I clucked to him a couple of times just to keep his mind on his business '

Honest Pleasure is the Florida-bred son of What A Pleasure, who sired Foolish Pleasure, the 1975 Kentucky Derby champion

Proud Birdie, winner of the Bahamas and Everglades Stakes, was fifth at 4-1, the second betting choice Hang Ten was sixth and Rule the Ridge was seventh

The eighth starter, Mount Sterling, tossed jockey Eddie Maple coming out of the gate. Elocutionist, who was expected to pose the early challenge to Honest Pleasure, injured himself in his stall Saturday morning and was scratched

Jolley said he would rest Honest Pleasure for a week, then send him back to work, pointing him for the Florida Derby April 5 at Gulfstream Park

HONEST PLEASURE IS WELL AHEAD OF PACK

Another WHA Team Goes Under

ST. PAUL, MINN. (UPI) — The financially troubled Minnesota Fighting Saints finally gave up the fight for funds Saturday and went out of business—the second World Hockey Association team to fold this season.

"It's over," Acting President Wayne Belisle said when the end came after weeks of trying to keep the team alive. "I'm disappointed but I'm also relieved."

The Saints did not make the trip to Cincinnati for a scheduled game Saturday night and the schedule was revised for Cincinnati to play Houston instead.

Jock Irvine, who owns the rights to the club, was reported to be negotiating to sell the franchise, possibly to a Miami, Fla , group

The Denver-Ottawa team in the WHA folded earlier this season. Two WHA teams—the Baltimore Blades and Chicago Cougers—folded last season.

Irvine turned down a late offer from a prospect who wanted to buy the Saints club and keep it in St Paul but not assume back debts or pay back salaries for a month and a half and who wanted to renegotiate players' salaries, apparently to cut them, a club spokesman said.

Fourteen players showed up at the Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport to talk with Belisle and possibly make the trip to Cincinnati for the game Saturday night. Saints General Manager Glen Sonmor also was prepared to call in some players from the Johnstown farm club if necessary to have an adequate roster.

The group of players and Belisle conferred in the airport lobby and Belisle said he had enough money to get the team through the weekend. But when the players learned Irvine had rejected the latest offer to buy the club they decided not to go.

"I don't blame the players one bit," Belisle said.

Wayne Connelly, right winger and one of the original Saints in the 1972-73 season, said, "It's definitely over."

Seaver Cites 'Good Progress'

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — Baseball's labor picture is not as gloomy as it is painted, New York Mets' pitching star Tom Seaver said Saturday.

"Good progress has been made," Seaver said and anticipates major league spring training camps will open within a week.

"I know for a fact from a phone call Friday night that good progress was made at that day's meeting in New York," Seaver said. "The owners said they would open the camps as soon as progress is made and progress was made."

Seaver refused to admit it was Marvin Miller who advised him of the progress. However, Seaver is the Mets' player representative and is in constant contact with Miller.

In fact, Seaver said he is closing down the mini-camp he has been running here so players can fly to Miami Tuesday for a meeting with Miller.

"About 20 of us are flying over. We'll call off the camp for that day," he explained

Seaver's camp at Eckerd College has been open to all major league players in the area. About 25 work out daily

Seaver believes the reason there was no announcement by the owners following a Friday meeting on the baseball stalemate is that the committee which met with Miller must first report back to the Player Relations Committee He also feels the owners are awaiting a court decision on their appeal of the Andy Messersmith case.

Yankees' Boss Raps Miller

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — New York Yankee president Gabe Paul lashed out at Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, Saturday, charging that the reason a settlement has not been reached in the baseball squabble is that there has been "no give on the part of the association to resolve it."

"The owners made a drastic change in philosophy when they agreed to some modification of the reserve system. But, I have seen no give from the players."

Paul added "I respect Marvin Miller. He is a very, very able negotiator. He has done a lot for the Players Association, but his past successes are dimming his perspective."

The Yankee prexy said he was pessimistic about a quick resolution to the problem, "because I don't see the progress there should be. I'm sick and tired of one man making all the statements. Nobody can be right 100 per cent of the time. Marvin's definition of an SOB is anybody who disagrees with him."

★★★

NEW YORK (UPI) — The first official business in the remodeled Yankee Stadium will be transacted Monday when the advance ticket windows open for the sale of April 15 Opening Day tickets only, the Yankees said Saturday.

The team said the Yankee Stadium ticket office and Ticketron outlets will have ducats for all home games available after March 8 but a large demand for Opening Day at which the Yankees will host the Minnesota Twins prompted the early opening of the advance ticket office.

Providence Stops Redmen

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Bob Misevicius scored 26 points Saturday as Providence used a tenacious zone defense to upset nationally ranked St. Johns 67-53.

Misevicius, playing with a badly bruised knee, scored his first basket to give the Friars a 10-7 lead at 4:05 in the first half. Providence never lost that advantage. After a bucket by George Johnson made the score 10-9, Misevicius, Bruce Campbell and Joe Hassett scored successive baskets to give Providence a 16-9 lead.

Five straight points by Misevicius boosted Providence's leade to 21-11 midway in the half, and the Friars stretched that to a 36-21 advantage at halftime as a frigid 25 per cent shooting kept the Redmen from closing the margin.

Relying on a basic two-three zone, the Friars held off St. Johns in the second half. The 14th ranked Redmen closed the gap to 40-30 at 2:49 in the last stanza. However, Steve Strother and Misevicius went to work to keep the Friars on top comfortably, with late hoops by David Frye and Billy Eason holding the Redmen at bay.

Providence, 17-6, will be playing the ECAC New England Playoffs Thursday night while St. Johns, 21-4, will be in the Metropolitan championships.

Rutgers Whips Long Island U.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Freshman James Bailey scored 17 points, grabbed 14 rebounds and blocked five shots Saturday as unbeaten and fourth-ranked Rutgers defeated Long Island University, 103-87, for its 25th victory.

A triumph over St. Bonaventure Monday night would make the Scarlet Knights only the 19th major college team since 1939 to finish the regular season with a perfect season.

Rutgers, which went over 100 points for the ninth time this year, had six players in double figures in a game marred by 56 fouls.

Mike Dabney led the Knights with 18 points.

The Blackbirds, 16-10, trailed by 17 points at the half but rallied to cut the lead to 84-78 when Ernie Douse made two of his game-high 29 points.

The Scarlet Knights then ran off eight straight points to put the game out of reach.

North Carolina Downs Duke

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — Phil Ford scored 25 points, 26 of them in the second half, Saturday to lead third-ranked North Carolina to a 91-77 win over Duke in the final regular season game for the Atlantic Coast Conference teams.

Duke, which finishes the season 15-11 and 5-9 in the ACC, took a 34-33 lead into the locker room at halftime, but North Carolina came back in the second half to outscore the Blue Devils 58-37.

North Carolina, the regular season ACC champs with an 11-1 league record and 24-2 overall, was led in scoring by Mitch Kupchak with 19 points, and Tommy LaGarde with 15.

Duke junior guard Tate Armstrong led all scorers with 28 points, while Mark Crow contributed 14 points and Willie Hodge 10.

Alabama Edges Tennessee

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (UPI) — Center Rickey Brown cut a short jumper with one second left in the second overtime Saturday to send Alabama ahead as the Crimson Tide edged Tennessee 89-87 in a showdown for the Southeastern Conference lead.

Sophomore guard Greg McElveen then added a pair of free throws, one on a technical foul and another on a deliberate foul on Tennessee's Johnny Darden, at the buzzer.

The victory in the regionally-televised game gave the Crimson Tide, 20-5 overall, a 13-2 SEC record and a game and a half lead over Tennessee. The Vols are 12-4 in the conference and 19-9 on the year.

Wake Forest Beats N.C. State

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — Skip Brown scored 26 points and Rod Griffin 24 Saturday to lead Wake Forest to a 98-96 Atlantic Coast Conference upset of 16th ranked North Carolina State.

Wake Forest, which finished regular season play with a 5-7 league record and 17-9 overall, went into the four corners offense with 5:30 left to secure the victory. The Deacons also got 23 points from Jerry Schellenberg.

Al Green and Glen Suchop had 21 points each as N.C. State ended regular season play with a 7-5 ACC record and a 19-7 overall mark. Kenny Carr added 16 points, Steve Walker 11 and Phil Spence 10.

Carr, the Wolfpack's top scorer, picked up his fourth foul with 10:06 left in the second half, while Spence had his fourth with 9:40 showing. They both fouled out before the end of the game. The Deacons put the game away in the later stages from the free throw line.

Cincy Nips San Francisco

CINCINNATI (UPI) — "I thought we had lost the ball and so I started to go on defense," Cincinnati's Pat Cummings recalled of those frantic closing seconds in overtime before he got off his gamewinning shot against San Francisco Saturday.

"Then I saw the ball coming my way, I grabbed it, turned toward the basket and shot," said the 6-9 sophomore.

Cummings' 12-foot jumper with just five seconds left in overtime swished through to boost the 19th ranked Bearcats to a 89-88 victory over scrappy San Francisco in a nationally televised game.

Down by one point, Cincinnati almost failed to get off a final shot when San Francisco deflected a pass before the ball bounced to Cummings.

Washington Is Beaten, 73-64

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Oregon State, playing without star Lonnie Shelton, upset ninth-ranked Washington 73-64 Saturday to move into second place of the Pacific-8 Conference.

The Beavers, leading only 63-60 with 3:50 to go, saw the Huskies lose their poise as Ken Stewart and Ken Lombard each went out on five fouls in the final 2½ minutes.

Rocky Smith sank six straight free throws in the final three minutes for OSU and Don Smith and Rickey Lee each scored a field goal to finish the Beaver scoring. Washington, in the final three minutes, could manage only four points on baskets by James Edwards and Chester Dorsey.

Earlier this week Shelton was declared ineligible by a three-judge panel for signing an American Basketball Association contract. However, he never played in the pros.

The Beavers are now 10-3 while the Huskies slipped to 9-4.

Florida Gains 20th Win

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Sophomore Harry Davis led a red-hot Florida State attack with 23 points Saturday night to pace the 17th-ranked Seminoles to their 20th win of the season, a 90-76 triumph over Mercer.

Davis, a 6-7 forward, connected on 10 of 14 shots to key a Florida State effort that saw the Seminoles hit on 70 per cent of their shots from the floor and keep their NCAA postseason tournament hopes alive.

David Thompson added 16 points for the Seminoles, who now have their best record since 1971-72 when they lost to UCLA in the national finals. Jerry Thurston had 23 points and Steve Hendrickson added 16 for Mercer, which fell to 15-10.

Maryland Upends Virginia

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI) — Senior Mo Howard came off the bench and out from the shadow of All-America backcourt mate John Lucas Saturday night to score 24 points and lead Maryland to an 81-73 victory over Virginia.

Lucas, Maryland's all-time scoring leader with 1,988 points, couldn't find his range and the Terps fell behind early. But after only eight minutes, Coach Lefty Driesell put in Howard and went to his three-guard alignment to replace a taller front line and the Terps rolled to victory.

New Paltz State Sets School Record By Scoring 118 Points Against Cathedral

NEW PALTZ

New Paltz State's basketball team gained a split of its two game weekend stand Saturday night in grand style. The Hawks scored an all time school record 118 points in whipping Cathedral, 118-95.

Friday New Paltz dropped a 76-57 battle to Binghamton.

New Paltz shot a blistering 60 per cent with seven players in double figures against outgunned Cathedral. Another New Paltz record, a total of 74 team rebounds, helped the winners built to a 62-32 halftime lead and coast in to their 10th victory in 25 outings.

Gary Fisher was the high scorer for New Paltz with 19 points on a nine of 12 night from the floor. Other deadeyes included Ron Campbell who was six of eight from the field, and Bob Irish who hit six of nine attempts. Campbell finished with 16 markers, and Irish, playing his last game, totalled 14, all in the first half.

Ron Monroe led the rebounders with 19 caroms, and Keith Yizar grabbed 15 bounds to go along with his 18 points.

Cathedral was just never in the game despite 29 points from Frank McQuade and 27 more from Rich Grant.

The Binghamton battle was just that . . . a fray marred by a total of 11 technical fouls. The game was close until the last five minutes, then a fight erupted and Binghamton used their freebies to open up a lead the Hawks couldn't overcome.

Hawks scorer Tom Martin drew three T's himself at the start of the contest for failing to check in the starting lineup properly.

Glenn McIver led the winners out to a 33-28 advantage at the half, and he went on to finish with a game high 20 points. Irish canned 17, and Yizar drilled 14 to lead New Paltz.

The Hawks are on the road to Oswego Tuesday.

GLENN RESCH FANS ON SHOT

Parise Sparks Islanders To 4-1 Win Over Chicago

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — J.P. Parise's two third period goals helped lift the New York Islanders to a 4-1 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks Saturday afternoon.

It was the Islanders first home victory this month in six outings.

Parise broke a 1-1 tie at 7:04 of the third period when his 40-foot shot from the left circle beat Chicago goaltender Gilles Villemure. At 15:20, Bobby Nystrom gave New York a 3-1 lead by scoring with a whistling shot from the right boards. Parise counted his second goal in the last minute of play in front of Villemure on a pass from Bert Marshall.

The Hawks opened the scoring at 4:19 of the first period when Ivan Boldirev beat New York netminder Glenn Resch with a 35-footer.

The Islanders tied the score at 13:33 of the first period on Billy Harris' 25th goal of the year on a pass from Clark Gillies.

The tight-checking Islanders held Chicago to only 14 shots on goal before 14,511, the first non-sellout since Dec. 4.

Flyers, Blues Tie

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Garry Unger's second goal of the game on a power play gave the St. Louis Blues a 2-2 tie Saturday night with the Philadelphia Flyers.

Bernie Parent started his second game of the season in the Philadelphia net and allowed Unger's first goal in the second period on a power play. Parent left the game with 1:59 remaining in the second period and was replaced by Wayne Stephenson.

Unger scored his 33rd goal of the season with one second left in a penalty to Larry Goodenough for tripping Floyd Thomson. Unger took the puck from Bob MacMillan and slid it past Stephenson at 11:58 of the last period.

Gary Dornhoefer and Reggie Leach had given the Flyers a 2-0 lead. Dornhoefer scored on a power play in the first period on a 25 foot shot past Eddie Johnston. Leach scored his 46th goal of the season on a 15 foot shot directly in front of the net.

Leafs Win

TORONTO (UPI) — Pat Boutette and Lanny McDonald scored second period goals 12 seconds apart to break a 1-1 tie and lead the Toronto Maple Leafs to a 4-2 victory over the California Seals Saturday night.

Rookie Boutette slid a long shot past goalie Gary Simmons at 8:37 of the period while McDonald capitalized on a defensive miscue and snapped a high wrist shot into the left corner at 8:49 for a 3-1 Toronto lead.

California center Dave Gardner opened at 12:01 but Stan Weir tied with 20 seconds remaining in the first period.

Kings Clip Wings

DETROIT (UPI) — Marcel Dionne fired home his first short-handed goal of the season in the opening period Saturday night to start the Los Angeles Kings toward a 3-1 victory over the skidding Detroit Red Wings.

With just their fifth win in the last 11 starts, the Kings remained a distant second behind Montreal in the Norris Division standings. The defeat was Detroit's eighth in its last 11 outings and kept them well behind third-place Pittsburgh in the same division.

Knicks Turn Back Bulls, 93 to 85

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Gianelli and Walt Frazier each scored 19 points to pace the New York Knicks to a 93-85 victory over the Chicago Bulls Saturday night.

It marked the first time this season that Gianelli shared game-high scoring honors for the Knicks.

Butch Beard, starting in place of the injured Earl Monroe (sore foot), grabbed 14 rebounds, a career high for him.

Spencer Haywood scored eight straight Knick points in a little under three minutes to enable New York to take a 74-69 lead in the last period.

With New York leading 88-85 and a half-minute to play, Beard scored four points in 11 seconds to clinch the game.

Jack Marin had 18 Chicago tallies while Haywood had 15 for the Knicks, who led at halftime 41-37.

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — Elvin Hayes scored 13 of his game-high 30 points in the final period Saturday night, including a free throw and long jump shot in the waning seconds, to give the Washington Bullets a 92-89 National Basketball Association victory over the Phoenix Suns.

The Suns held a 78-66 lead after three periods but Hayes canned the first six points of the final period to narrow the deficit to one. Later, Dave Bing scored six points and Len Robinson five during a 9-2 spurt that gave the Bullets an 89-79 lead with 3:08 remaining.

Paul Westphal, who led Phoenix with 23 points, ignited a 10-point Sun rally with two jump shots and a pair of free throws to tie game at 89-all with 37 seconds remaining.

Hayes hit one of two foul shots with 45 seconds left, then, after Westphal missed a short jumper, dribbled the length of the court and hit a baseline jumper with 10 seconds remaining to secure the victory.

Bing finished with 17 points and Phil Chenier 14 for Washington. Ricky Fobers had 13 and Dennis Autrey 12 for the Suns.

Chris, Evonne Advance To Tournament Final

SARASOTA, Fla. (UPI) — Top-seeded Evonne Goolegong and No. 2-ranked Chris Evert won lackluster semifinal matches Saturday night to move into the finals of the $75,000 Virginia Slims tennis tournament.

Goolegong, winner of her last two tournaments on the women's tour, took less than an hour to dispose of third-seeded Martina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia, 6-4, 6-2. Evert took even less time to overwhelm fourth-seeded Rosie Casals of San Francisco, 6-0, 6-4.

Goolagong never allowed Navratilova to get anything going in their match.

"I felt confident; I have all year," the Australian star said. "I felt I could try a few things against Martina. You have to do something to keep her from getting control, which she can do easily."

Likewise, Evert dominated her match, mixing her driving baseline game with several perfectly placed drop shots.

Hawks Split Pair Of Volleyball Matches

WEST POINT

New Paltz State's varsity volleyball team remained in second place in its division of the Eastern Intercollegiate League Saturday by splitting a pair of matches at the United States Military Academy gym.

Coach Bill Odeneal's Hawks dropped a 15-8, 15-8, decision to first place Army, and defeated Queens College, 15-4, 15-7. In another match, New Paltz downed the Army "B" team, 15-10, 15-2.

The match with Army's first team was between "two powerful forces," said coach Odeneal. "It was a very tough fought game and we played very well defensively, but we didn't have enough spiking power. They had three players six-feet-five."

Odeneal praised the efforts of Hawks Bill Zdniak, Ahmadi Raza, and Dennis Ponte in the win over Queens.

The Hawks play at Queens next Saturday against the host school and New Jersey Institute of Technology.

Was it Sam Goldwyn who once quipped that a verbal agreement that caused him great anguish wasn't worth the paper it was written on? Looking back in retrospect, we came away from two hours of watching that Muhammad Ali-Coopman heavyweight horror with the same feeling. CBS had proclaimed verbally and through the written message that this "world heavyweight championship fight" would be offered free on the home screens.

Even for free it was a bad bargain. It was preceded by a full hour buildup that was totally preposterous to the point of offending common decency. The viewing public was led to believe that this was the greatest boxing spectacle since Joe Louis proved to Max Schmeling and Adolf Hitler and the world that herrenvolk wasn't all that mighty.

Coopman, the Cowardly Lion of Flanders, should have been arrested for impersonating a professional boxer. Muhammad should have been indicted for aiding and abetting a puglistic crime. Instead, Jean Pierre humbly accepted his $100,000 and Muhammad lapped up his million dollar ripoff.

Now we hear tell that Muhammad is toying with the idea of engaging in a match against a sumo wrestler to decide the world championship of Never-Never Land.

We hope Ali switches to the world heavyweight karate champion. That would be more interesting. Muhammad at least would be spared the danger of being crushed to death.

So, Muhammad Ali goes on his merry way, racking up millions while making a charade of the greatest title in all sports. He'll make more money than all of the other great heavyweight champions put together—even another $20 million more before he retires to count his money But when it's over, he will have bequeathed the heavyweight championship not a shred of the dignity men like Louis, Dempsey, Marciano, Tunney and Walcott gave it.

Legend has it that Adlai Stevenson's grandfather, in a fit of exasperation, once described the Illinois state legislature as the only institution he knew that was run by the inmates.

The men who direct the athletic destinies of the Dutchess County Scholastic League (DCSL) certainly don't fall in that category. They are by and large responsible, dedicated people in a field where dedication is a must.

But from the standpoint of public relations and rapport with the press, however, the DCSL brass draws a complete blank. It's PR setup is virtually non-existent.

Just to keep things even, the Ulster County Athletic League (UCAL) isn't much better.

Take that brouhaha this past week about who is the DCSL wrestling champion. Saugerties High partisans screamed when a Daily Freeman headline declared Kingston High the champion on the basis of winning the league tournament.

Not so, sia said the Sawyer fans, and rightfully so. Kingston was only the co-champion with Saugerties because the teams tied for first place in their DCSL division. And that's where the championship is decided. The Kingston victory gave them the "tournament championship."

But did anybody in the DCSL bother to notify the newspapers about the change in policy? Of couse not. Is it just a coincidence that both the Freeman and the Poughkeepsie Journal, the two principal papers in the DCSL orbit, both treated the story in the same manner—declaring Kingston the champion?

Several years ago, we were encouraged by reports that the DCSL was about to create a public relations bureau, with coaches assigned to handle their respective sports.

The bureau would furnish standings, statistics all star teams and other assorted information. Such a setup would have been of tremendous assistance to sports departments. Whatever happened to that beautiful dream in the DCSL. Isn't it time to revive that plan for real?

A Few Short Takes:

Rain Forces Postponement of TPC's Third Round

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (UPI) — The rain that has plagued south Florida the past four days Saturday forced postponement of the third round of the $300,000 Tournament Players golf Championship.

Play was suspended after little more than an hour, then called off for the day less than two hours later when the Inverrary course became unplayable for the second time this week.

Tournament director Jack Tuthill said the third round would begin at 10:46 a.m. EST today, "conditions permitting," and the fourth round is scheduled for Monday.

"The weather forecast is not good," said Tuthill. "But, we can extend play through Tuesday, if we have to."

TPD Commissioner Deane Beman said if the tournament failed to go beyond the 36 holes already played, the purse would be cut in half —giving current leader Don January $30,000 instead of the $60,000 which goes to the winner if the weather permits play to continue.

The 36-hole leaders never got off the first tee Saturday. January, standing at nine-under-par 135, holds a one-stroke lead over Jack Nicklaus and J.C. Snead and is two strokes ahead of Tom Watson and Jim Masserio.

"All this means is that we have to play Monday," said Nicklaus with a shrug.

"Sure, the course is going to be waterlogged. But all of us at the top of the leader board must be mudders or we wouldn't be where we are.

"The fellows who play good in good weather also play good in bad weather or they wouldn't be here."

Nicklaus, favored to make the TPC his first win in three starts this year, said he was surprised that there were 10 golfers within four strokes of the leader.

"I thought the field would be more spread out than this," he said. "But there have been a lot lower scores than I expected. Someone will jump out of the pack tomorrow."

This year's TPC has had more than its share of weather problems. Wednesday's pro-am was washed out and a rain delay of more than an hour on Thursday forced first-round play to be suspended because of darkness with 13 of the 144-player starting field still on the course

One of those was Nicklaus who was a stroke behind then-leading Fred Marti (who shot a first-round 66) with two holes to go when play was halted. Nicklaus picked up that stroke early Friday morning to move into a tie for the lead, but dropped back into a tie for second in the second round when he shot an erratic 70.

"It's too wet out there to practice," said Nicklaus, even though the rain stopped about 45 minutes after the round was postponed. "I'll go home (50 miles north of here) and try to get in some practice there. If it's raining at home, I guess I'll take the kids to a movie."

Tuthill said there was "no way" the course could be gotten into good enough shape to permit 36 holes to be played today, "even if it doesn't rain anymore

"We couldn't count on that anyway. The weatherman says the prevailing conditions are expected to last anouther 24 hours."

Saturday's round started earlier than usual because it was scheduled to be nationally televised from 2 p.m to 3:30 p.m.

All-American Tennis Final In Holland

ROTTERDAM (UPI) — Arthur Ashe set up an all-America final in the WCT pro tennis tournament when he rallied Saturday to defeat Australia's Rod Laver 5-7, 7-5, 6-2.

Today's final pits Ashe against Bob Lutz, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 upset winner over second-seeded Tom Okker of Holland in the other semifinal match The winner will pocket $10,000 and the loser $7,000.

Ashe, the top seed, and third seeded Laver marked their 25th encounter with a 107 minute match. It marked only the third time that the American has beaten the Aussie. Ashe's superior stamina and power shots were responsible for his success this time.

The match started slowly. In the first eight games, both lost their service three times. Laver was the first to break the sequence and went on to win the set after Ashe lost his service for the fourth time.

In the second set Laver, despite his great backhand, was unable to maintain the momentum He surged to a 4-1 advantage, but Ashe fought back to equalize at at 4-4 and, obviously in a winning mood, finally took the set.

The final set was short, Laver no longer being a match for Ashe's preciseness. Both players were forced to slow down and as a result the Australian began making more mistakes. He lost his service in the first and fifth games, and Ashe served the set and match for 6-2.

The Lutz-Okker match was close all the way In the opening set, Okker had numerous chances to break Lutz services, but the American proved to be a real breakpoint killer. He kept the set level until 3-3, then broke through the Dutchman's service and won the set. He won his final service game for 6-4 at love.

Okker trailed 0-4 in the second set, then staged a brilliant comeback after being down 0-40 in the fifth game on his own service. He won the next six games to even the match.

Anthony Misses Prize, 'Settles' for $14,000

WINDSOR LOCKS, Conn. — Earl Anthony won the $14,000 first prize in the Midas Open Bowling Tournament Saturday at Bradley Bowl. For awhile, it appeared he might win much more.

Anthony defeated Johnny Petraglia, Staten Island, N.Y., 236-214, in the championship match to capture the first prize, 21st of his career, and first title of the season for the Tacoma, Wash., pro after three seconds.

For awhile, Anthony and Petraglia were locked in a duel headed toward the richest prize in pro bowling history. Midas-International had offered $200,000 if anyone could bowl a perfect game in the championship match. And ABC-TV added $10,000, for any 300 on the show.

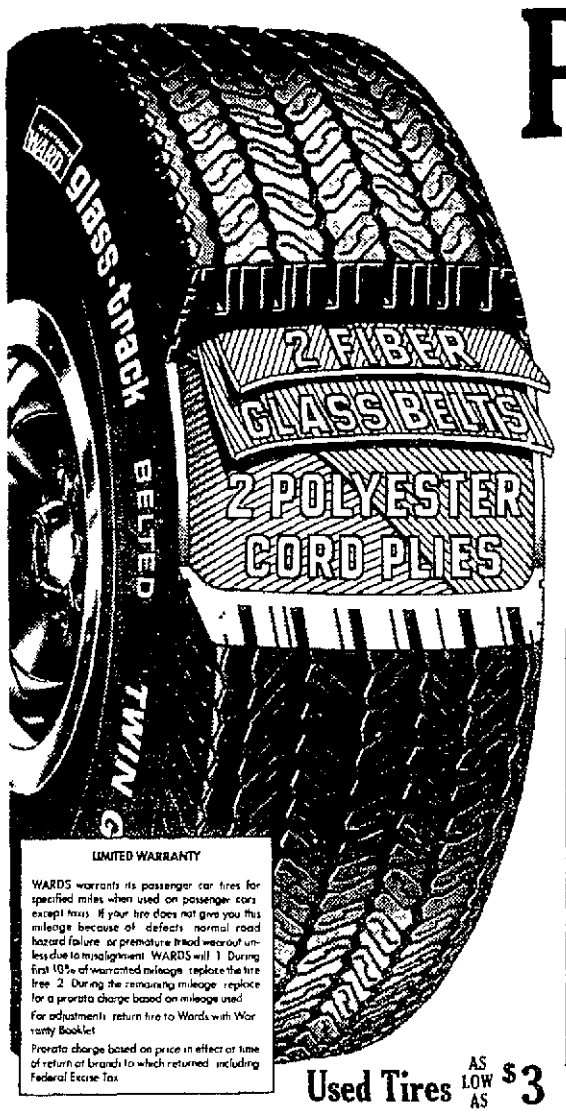

Anthony and Petraglia matched strikes through the fourth frame before Petraglia left the eight-pin for a spare in the fifth.

But Anthony continued on, through two more frames, until the 10-pin refused to budge in the seventh.

"I thought it was a good shot," Anthony said of the dream-shatter. 10-pin. "It was a little wide, perhaps, but I feel it it had m lf a turn more, it would have ta the 10-pin."

Anthony ck upped his 1976 earnings to $ 100, tops on the tour.

American Skater Wins At Championship Event

HEERENVEEN, The Netherlands (UPI) — Eric Heiden of Madison, Wis., won the 500meters sprint and was in fourth position overall after two events Saturday at the halfway mark of the men's All-Around Speedskating Championship.

Hans van Helden, who won three bronze medals at the Winter Olympics in Innsbruck, was on top with 82.672 points after two of the four events. Runner-up was another Dutchman, Piet Kleine, with 83.532.

Kay-Arne Stensjhemmet of Norway was in third place with 83.827 and Heiden had 83.974 points.

Holland's 1975 world champion, Harm Kuipers, did not defend his title. He gave up competitive skating at the end of last season.

Heiden capture the 500-meters in 39.11 seconds, followed by Stensjhemmet in 39.65 and Gaitan Boucher of Canada in 39.68. Van Helden placed fourth in 39.80 and Keline 12th at 40.60.

Van Helden won the 5,000 meters in 7 minutes 8.72 seconds, less than a second away from his own world record of 7:07.82. Klein, who won the 10,000 meters at Innsbruck and took the silver medal in the 5,000 meters, was runner up in 7:09.32. Norway's Sten Stensen, who took the gold medal in the Olympics 5,000 meters, came in third at 7:16.11.

Heiden did not fare so well in the 5,000, finishing in 11th place with a time of 84.822.

Dan Carroll of St. Louis was in ninth place overall with 84.822 points. Carroll placed eighth in the 500 with a time of 40.470 and 10th in the 5,000 with 7:23.52.

The championship, with 32 participants from 18 nations, finishes Sunday with the 1,500-meter and 10,000-meter events.

Files Suit Against NBA

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A Baton Rouge man who said he was roughed up by basketball officials during a New Orleans Jazz game last year has filed a $300,000 damage suit against the National Basketball Association.

Hugh W. Smith said two game officials cursed and assaulted him, causing multiple injuries, after he accidentally bumped one of the men as he returned to his seat.

The incident allegedly occurred during a game between the Jazz and the Philadelphia 76ers Feb. 18, 1975, at the Municipal Auditorium.

The suit identifies the officials as Joseph Gushue and Jerry Loeber.

Smith said he accidentally bumped Gushue, who reacted by cursing and pushing him. Smith said Loeber then assaulted him, knocking him into the stands, and both officials attacked him again.

KHS Over RCK: It Wasn't Pretty but It Counts

By Ira Fusfeld

KINGSTON

The good teams — sport sages like to tell us — are able to turn it on and off against a weaker opponent and still manage to come away with a necessary, if not artistically superior, victory.

Being the good team that it is, Kingston High's varsity basketball squad did just that Friday night at the Field House by downing a game but overmatched Ketcham club, 77-50.

Most of the time Kingston was pretty mediocre — for Kingston, that is — but at other times the Tigers were just brilliant enough to leave the visiting Indians in the dust and allow the vocal home rooters to prance out into the night with a smile on their faces and echos of "We're No. 1" in their ears.

And Kingston is No. 1, at least partially so, since Beacon kept pace with the Tigers by getting past Spackenkill, 78-61. That means the two remain in a tie for first place, each with a game to go. KHS hosts Lourdes Monday night while Beacon must travel to Poughkeepsie.

It's a schedule KHS coach Mike Rienzo is more than happy to accept. The possibility of Kingston winning the title outright is certainly there, and even if the Tigers playoff with Beacon for all the marbles, Rienzo will take his chances. But first Kingston had to cope with Ketcham and with that successfully out of the way the Tiger coach could breath a temporary sigh of relief.

"We were sloppy out there," he conceded. "I didn't think our man-to-man defense was all that good even though we held them to 50 points. The zone turned it for us. And I'm surprised Greg (Glass) scored as much as he did. I was on him all night."

There may have been a time early in the second quarter when some of the local faithful, maybe even Rienzo himself, wondered if Ketcham was going to throw a gigantic monkey wrench into the DCSL title picture. That was when the Indians, led by center Bob Blake, had taken the lead, first 16-15, later 18-17.

Even when Kingston's Larry Carpenter helped power the Tigers to 10 straight points and a 27-18 advantage, RCK managed to counter with a quick eight points (six by Blake) to draw within one. And at the half Kingston was ahead by only five, 31-26.

But just as he's done all season, Donnie Timbrouck helped save KHS from embarrassment by scoring 10 of his 14 points in the third period as Kingston pulled away to a 56-42 lead. And in the final quarter, the Tigers put 14 of the first 18 points on the board and the Indians' uprising had been sufficiently squashed.

Glass was Kingston's high point man with 19 to go along with 13 rebounds. Carpenter, still bothered by a foot injury, scored 16 and Timbrouck had his 14.

"Larry's problem is with an injury between the toe and instep," Rienzo explained. "He'll have to play hurt the rest of the year. Only rest can help it."

Blake scored 18 points to top Ketcham, a young team looking towards next season.

Ketcham out of the way, Rienzo and Co. now await Lourdes for the regular season finale. "They'll be a scrappy team and we'll have our hands full," Rienzo warned. "We can't let up."

That second straight DCSL championship is this close.

REBOUNDS — Kingston JV's upped their record to 15-2 with a convincing 87-51 win. Ron Mapes scored 23 points, Bob Easter had 18, and Larry Walkowski flipped in 15 points and grabbed 18 rebounds . . . KHS varsity has won 16 straight at home . . . Lourdes, Monday's foe, was last team to beat Kingston in Field House . . . Crowd fell short of capacity . . .

If Race Ends in Tie

There Will Be a Playoff

KINGSTON

There may be a playoff yet to decide the basketball champion of the Dutchess County Scholastic League. League officials have finally decided to hold a playoff if one becomes necessary, and the possibility of such an occurance increased Friday night when Beacon rushed past Spackenkill, 78-61 to remain tied with Kingston at 14-3 with one game in the regular campaign left to play.

Actually four teams are still mathematically alive. Poughkeepsie, just one game off the pace, downed host Saugerties, 87-62, and the other second place club, Roosevelt, bombed John Jay, 98-73. A three or even a four way tie may yet occur.

In a game not involving contenders, Arlington assured itself of a .500 year with a 78-54 win over Lourdes.

Beacon began slowly, perhaps a factor influenced by the Spartans' 5-11 mark going into the game, but all star George Hughes ignited the Bulldog attack in the second half. Hughes poured in 28 points and three of his teammates made it to double figures as the winners pulled away from a slim four point halftime edge to an easy victory.

Rick Newton had 13 and the backcourt duo of Clyde and Cliff McKinney shared 21 for Beacon. Spackenkill's Eric Meyer led the home team with 17.

An all senior lineup was Sawyer coach Larry Marcus' move in the team's final home game of the season. "And they were decent," said Marcus. "We played them pretty good for about three quarters, but they finally wore us down."

So the 16th loss of the year came to Saugerties, but the 13th victory for Poughkeepsie was not all that easy. "I think they (Poughkeepsie) were kind of down after losing to Kingston the other night, but (Dino) Larry was super. None of their other guys did too much," Marcus said.

When Larry is right he doesn't need much help anyway. He dumped in a game high 27 points and kept the Pioneers with the upper hand all the way.

Dave Auble, Jay Harris, Kerin Campbell and Jim Hackett all hit double figures for Saugerties. Poughkeepsie didn't blow the losers out in any one period, but after taking a five point lead in the first quarter, the winners added to their edge by three points in the second quarter, seven in the third and ten in the fourth.

John Jay has knocked off more than one front runner this season, but Roosevelt, even without top rebounder and No. 2 scorer Anthony Smith, wasn't about to join the list of victims.

Smith quit the squad after Tuesday's loss to Beacon, but Dan Marquardt picked up just about all the slack with 39 points and 11 rebounds to lead FDR to its 13th victory.

Charlie Woodard had 17, and Jack Hart added 14 to round out the scoring, and that was too much firepower for the Patriots. Marquardt had four personal fouls by the third period, but in that quarter the winners still managed to take a nine point halftime lead up to 21 points.

Mark Overbye scored 26 to lead Arlington to a convincing win over a flat Lourdes effort. Chad Lookabaugh added 19 as the Admirals controlled the boards and the tempo and pulled steadily ahead all night long.

Lourdes, which slipped to 4-13, got 19 points from Joe Starzyk.

Monday is the end of the regular season, and the key matchups have Lourdes at Kingston, Beacon at Poughkeepsie and Ketcham at Roosevelt. If one of the current leaders wins and the other loses, no playoff will be necessary. If both stumble, at least a three way tie will happen, and Roosevelt can join the group with a victory of its own.

Ali's Future Foe?

Another Record for Swimmer

SYDNEY (UPI) — Stephen Holland, who Friday set world records in the 1,500 and 800 meter freestyles, Saturday became the first Australian to swim the 400-meters freestyle in under four minutes during the second day of the Australian championships at North Sydney Olympic Pool.

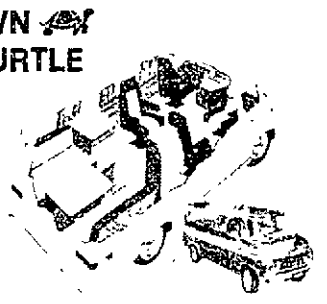

Holland covered the eight laps in 3:57.11, breaking the previous Commonwealth mark of 3:58.70 set by Australia's Brad Cooper at the 1973 Belgrade World Championships.

Holland's previous best time was 4:1.40 at last year's New Zealand Games in Christchutch.

Red Hook and Rondout In Monday Playoff Tilt

KINGSTON — After 16 games the title in Division I of the Ulster County Athletic League basketball race still isn't decided Red Hook and Rondout, tied for first place going into Friday night's contests, both contined their winning ways, and each will take a 10 6 record into the Senate Gym at Ulster County Community College Monday night to playoff for the crown

Red Hook bombed Onteora, 80-48, and Rondout moved past Wallkill, 67 58 to maintain the deadlock The victor Monday night will face Division II titleist Liberty for the UCAl championship Liberty, meanwhile, finished its UCAl season undefeated with a 65 59 win over Marlboro

In other UCAL results, Fallsburgh slapped Coleman with an 81 57 setback, Highland turned back Ellenville 68 60 and Pine Bush out muscled New Paltz, 66 53

"They weren't taking too many chances,' said OCS Coach John Meehan whose team ended the year at 5 11 Red Hook held OCS to five first quarter points then caught fire in the second quarter to run up a substantial lead

The Raiders hit almost 50 per cent of their shots in the game and connected on ten of 17 attempts in the second quarter Ed McManus and Rich Starkie were big factors in the winners' 38 17 halftime lead, and Matt Kirdziel who led all scorers with 19 points kept it going in the second half Junior Steve Ross scored ten points and grabbed 14 rebounds for OCS

Rondout trailed the Panthers after one quarter but began to have success with its press to gain the upper hand by halftime Wallkill turnovers led to eight RVC points as the Ganders came back from the deficit

Center John Million Jr contributed a steady 18 points and snatched 15 rebounds to pace the winners Bill Redding had 15, Jeff DeBrosky had 13 and Ron James scored 11 for balance

Wallkill, ending the campaign at 5-11, got 22 from Jim Castro

'We played a box and one on (Tony) Albany, and he was scoreless in the first half said Fallsburgh Coach Marty Van Vleet "And Coleman just went cold in the second quarter"

Thus the Comets route to their 12th win of the year was easier than expected Dave Barber with 22 and Mike Whidbee and Barry Davis with 18 apiece kept Fallsburgh on top all the way

Pete Gallagher dumped in 24, and Albany came back for 16 to lead Coleman which compleded an 8 8 season

Highland found the open man in the fourth quarter wiped out a five point Ellenville lead and finished the year at 7 9 one game ahead of the Blue Devils in the Division II standings

Jeff Gersch got five of his 19 points in the fourth quarter to lead the Big Blue but five other Highlanders also aided the comeback Ken Steele kept the Ellies going with a fine 27 point effort

Marlboro still hasn t figured out a way to handle Milt Martin Martin was the big gun the last time the Dukes lost to Liberty, and the story was little different this time

Hitting from all over the court with an 11 of 16 performance Martin dumped in 25 points and helped Liberty assume control of the game in the second quarter A 17 point lead was too much for the Dukes to overcome Marlboro tried to rally but could come no closer than 59 54 with two minutes left in the final quarter

Reg Biddings scored 17 and Rae Bridges had only eight, so Martin s points were needed John DeMarco and Rich Mills split 30 for the Dukes

New Paltz tried a deliberate style of attack but as Hugie Coach John Wirth said Pine Bush was just too big for us

The Bushmen controlled the backboards and got 29 points from Steve Low to complete a 5-11 year The Hughies remained winless but got a lift from soph Rich Siegel who hit 21 points

Nothing to Do But Wait for Fame

By Murray Olderman

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — (NEA) — David Jones is hardly recognized these days. The name doesn't make much of an impression. At a celebrity tournament, the American Airlines Golf Classic, his affiliation was simply listed, ". . . Jones, retired."

In four years, David Jones is almost as sure a bet as sun in the desert to be inducted into the Professional Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio. David will have completed the mandatory retirement period of five years to be eligible for selection. They will have been five years that he has been completely out of football.

Athletic feats are evanescent. David (Deacon) Jones was one of the two greatest defensive ends in the history of football — Gino Marchetti, already in the Hall of Fame, was the other.

Deacon Jones — now the name is more recognizable — is bitter about his absence from the game. In fact, he is bitter about football for what it has done to black men like himself. He feels he should be a part of it as a coach.

"All it takes to be a coach," he says, "is to be able to teach fundamentals and motivate people. I can teach and I can motivate people. The strategy is nothing. It's the same all over."

Jones is particularly upset because no black men have been considered for head coaching vacancies in the National League. Six jobs were filled in the last two months.

"You can't tell me," he says, "there are no black men who can't be at least considered."

Next to him sits James Harris, an active player in the NFL as quarterback of the Los Angeles Rams.

DEACON JONES

"It'll be 20 years," says Harris, "before there will be an active black head coach." He wonders why his college coach, Eddie Robinson of Grambling, who has sent many men into professional football, wasn't a candidate for the New Orleans post or even neighboring Tulane.

George Allen offered Jones a chance to be a playing assistant coach in 1974, his last active season, when he was with the Washington Redskins, and Deacon turned him down because he didn't think he could juggle the role of boss and employe. He is sorry now.

"I miss it tremendously," he admits. "I went through pure hell this year. The league had no use for me any more."

Five years ago, and more, Deacon rode high as the outstanding defensive player in the NFL. He was a nightclub performer in Nevada bistros. He owned two Cadillac El Dorados. In 1968, he was the toast of Orlando, Winter Haven and Etonville, Fla., where they had a special day and parade for native son David Jones (he didn't become Deacon until he became a pro).

Now he leads a subdued life as vice-president for public affairs and employe relations for Pacific Coast Medical Enterprises, a private group in southern California. He is weight conscious and has taken off 30 pounds to get down to 255, his approximate playing weight.

He won't be eligible for the Hall of Fame until 1980.

Meanwhile his crusade is to get coaching representation for blacks in professional football.

"Nobody's being trained," he laments. "It's similar to the quarterback situation that used to be with blacks. We won't have no adults if we don't have kids. I don't mean putting a guy in as a special teams coach (such as aide Elijah Pitts with the Rams). You have to be an offensive or defensive coordinator. A guy's got to be given responsibility."

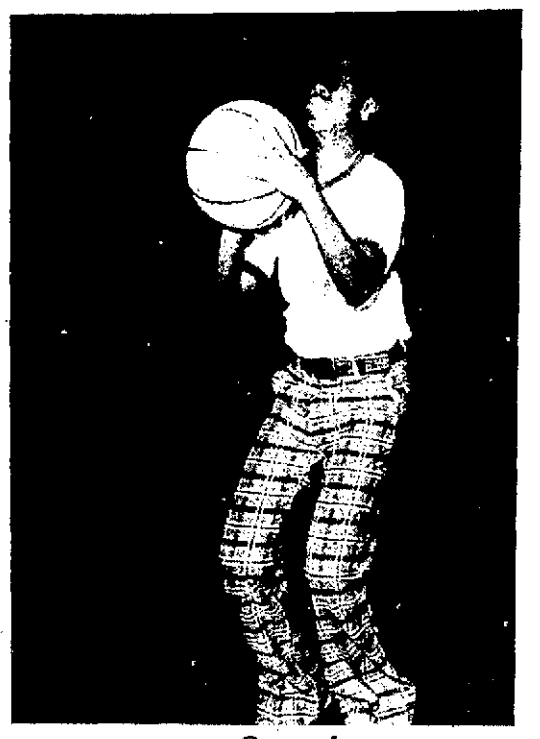

He picks out Willie Wood, who last served as a head coach in the World Football League, as a prime candidate for the NFL's first black head coach. Lionel Taylor of the Pittsburgh Steelers, who handles the wide receivers, is another possibility. "Jim Marshall would have a future," notes Deacon, if the 39-year-old defensive end of the Minnesota Vikings should choose to go into coaching.

He names Ollie Matson, Hall-of-Famer who has been a high school and college assistant, as a good football man. Several young black assistants — such as Pitts, Earnel Durden of San Diego, Al Lavan of Atlanta, Jim Colbert of Green Bay — could have a chance eventually. The list is meager.

Some of his old Ram teammates admit that Deacon would be a good coach, that he knows the game and can get people to respond to him, but they wonder about his discipline with the long hours that coaching football entails.

Meanwhile, David Jones, retired, still in the prime of life as a 37-year-old adult, deplores the absence of football in his life.

"The time passes quick," he says. "It was over before I knew it."

Charles Davis, of 408 S. Ohioville Road, New Paltz, posted a high score in the regionals of the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Basketball shootout, advancing to the quarterfinals today at Pace University in Manhattan. In the MHT Shootout quarterfinals, three boys and three girls from each grade cateory from each of the 11 areas will advance to the semi-finals on March 18 at Madison Square Garden. Also qualifying was Tom Hasbrouck of 193 Huguenot Street, New Paltz.

A Solo World Sail Is Woman's Goal

WARSAW (UPI) — An 18month round-the-world trip sounds just the right recipe for recharging the batteries of tired businessmen and bored housewives.

But not the way Krystyna Chojnowska-Liskiwicz plans to do it.

The 40-year-old Polish graduate of the Gdansk Technical University hopes to become the first woman to sail solo around the world. An Austrian woman undertook the same trip two years ago but had to give in because of illness.

"I believe I will manage it," Chojnowska-Liskiewicz said before setting off to Las Palmas in the Canary Islands where she begins her attempt Saturday.

"Not long ago the opinion was that a lone woman sailor would not be able to sail across the Atlantic. But Ann Davison on Felicity, Nicolette Mileswalker on Azis and Teresa Remiszewska on Komodor made it."

Wieslaw Rogala, chairman of the Polish Yachting Association, is convinced she has all the features which characterize a good sailor.

"She is experienced and energetic. She was selected from a group of Polish female sailors who were running for participation in the voyage," he said.

Her 31-foot yacht, Mazurek, was designed by her husband, Waclaw Liskiewicz, a ship building engineer. It is 8 feet, 10 inches wide and the mast is 39 feet, 4 inches high with a sail of about 71 square yards.

"My husband says Mazurek is his best piece of engineering," she said. The yacht has been transported to Los Palmas and its skipper plans to sail it to Barbados, the Panama Canal, the Marquesas, the Indian ocean, Durban and back to Las Palmas. The voyage is expected to last about 18 months. I'm not going to risk fighting against the high waves of Cape Horn nor will I try to set speed records," she said. "The route I am taking is quite enough for a lone woman sailor."

Chojnowska-Liskiewicz is prepared for all emergencies. She took a medical course in the Gdansk hospital and even knows how to put stiches into wounds.

The trip, including the construction of the yacht, will cost about $130,000, some 40 times more than the most expensive cruise traveling first class.

Bass Fishing Instruction . . .

CHICAGO (UPI) — National bass fishing champion "Big" Jim Rogers confided during a promotional visit to Chicago, "I don't think anyone really expected bass fishing to take off as it has in the past few years. It's even surprised me."

Bass boat builder Marv Hurst of Orlando, Fla., in town for the recent Chicago Boat and Sport Show, echoed similar sentiments.

"I can't build boats fast enough," he said, "and the market hasn't even begun to peak."

For the past few years, growing popularity in the sport has been exerting pressure on the fishing tackle market, boat and outboard motor builders and in the production of scientific fishing aids.

And, if that isn't enough, now the angler can go to school to learn shortcuts to catching bass.

The American Institute of Bass Fishing (AIBF) believes it has the answer for the angler who wants to learn everything there is about bass fishing in the shortest possible time.

The AIBF, headquartered in Hot Springs, Ark., is planning three five-day bass fishing courses to be held this year in April, May and June.

The courses, limited to 200 fishermen each, will be held April 11-17 at Lake Ouachita, Ark., May 2-8 at Lake Barkley, Ky., and June 13-19 at Lake Shastina, Calif.

Course instructors will include such noted bass fishing specialists as Tom Mann, Roland Martin, Bill Dance, Jerry McKinnis and Bobby Murray.

"We've been very careful in choosing these lakes because good fishing is a must," AIBF Director Billy Murray said.

Billy Murray said the course includes half a day classroom instruction and the other half fishing. He said each instructor will concentrate on their specialty.

Mann, a lure manufacturer and top tournament pro who lost the American Bass Fisherman World Open in November by only one ounce (costing him $15,000), will teach "Little George" and spinnerbait techniques.

Martin, the top money winner on the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society's pro circuit, with nearly $50,000 in winnings, will teach a course on structure fishing.

Plastic worm fishing will be taught by Dance, often referred to as the "Jack Nicklaus" of bass fishing, with 15 national titles under his belt.

Bobby Murray is a lure manufacturer and former Bassmaster Classic Champion. He will give instruction on fishing all types of bass plugs.

A course on seasonal and deepwater fishing will be taught by McKinnis, star of the television program, "Fishin' Hole."

The cost does not include boats, fishing tackle, rain gear, life preservers or other gear, which anglers are advised to take with them.

"It's the most complete bass fishing program ever created," Billy Murray said, "and it gives every dedicated fisherman in the nation the chance to achieve the ultimate in his sport."

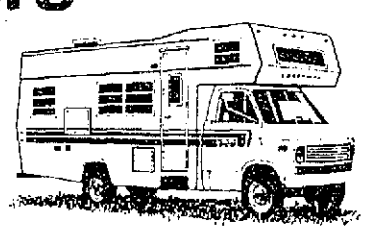

"Never before has this type of fishing knowledge been available on a noncompetitive level," Billy Murray said. "Each of these methods will be taught in detail to ensure clarity to the participant. The fact that they are teaching their best method is unique."

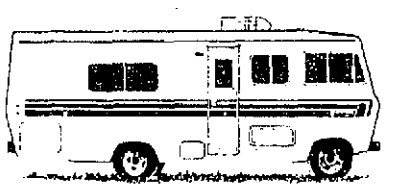

The five-day course will cost interested anglers $350, and the price includes the cost of room, two meals a day, textbooks and materials, and use of launching and docking facilities.

Rhinebeck Triumphs

WEBUTUCK

A stall in the opening minutes Friday night enabled host Webutuck to grab a 4-0 lead on Rhinebeck High, but both the slowdown and the four point advantage were short lived.

The Indians dropped into their man to man defense to wreck the Webutuck strategy and went to work on a 57-42 victory that ended their Bi-Valley season with a second place 9-3 record.

Ed Vaughn was again the big man in the triumph as he matched 29 points with an equal number of rebounds. He helped Rhinebeck jump in front by six points at halftime and add to its margin in the final two periods.

Bill Ballard chipped in with ten as Rhinebeck warmed up for its opening Section One Class C battle at home Wednesday against Pine Plains.

Webutuck turned the tables in the junior varsity contest, taking a 68-53 decision and dropping the little Indians to a final BVC mark of 8-4. Rhinebeck 10-7 overall this year, had a one point lead at halftime.

NEW PALTZ

Jim Longo, the crack 135 pounder from the Floyd Patterson Boxing Camp, was eliminated from the Open Class in the Golden Gloves competition at the Felt Forum in New York.

Longo actually lost the fight because of a "technical violation" in the third round when the bout was still up for grabs. The refree charged him with a violation when Longo told him to get out of his way so he could get at Phillips.

Three 1975 Kentucky Derby Horses Are Dead

NEW YORK (UPI) — The tragedy of Ruffian, magnified as it was by the dramatic setting of a nationally-televised match race and her own charisma, left the American public shocked and asking — why?

The following weeks were filled with almost countless explanations. The simplest answer — but unsatisfactory to much of the public — was the injury was merely part of the game.

For many whose interest in racing is limited to the Kentucky Derby and superstar horses such as Ruffian and Secretariat, the explanation seemed implausible.

If nothing else, the thoroughbred race horse is the embodiment of strength and grace. So how can anyone be expected to believe these creatures are frightfully fragile?

But less than 10 months after the 1975 Kentucky Derby, a race which attracts the cream of each racing crop, injuries have decimated that 15-horse field.

Three—Prince Thou Art, Sylvan Place and Media—are dead.

Another, Diabolo, has been in a touch-and-go situation for his life.

A fifth, Bombay Duck, fractured a bone Feb. 14 easing up after winning a race. He was one of the lucky ones. The injury was not severe, so Bombay Duck made it to the breeding farm and stud duty.

Diabolo, who won the California Derby last year in record time and was third in the Kentucky Derby, may not be so lucky. After a fracture suffered Feb. 16 in the seventh race at Santa Anita, the valuable son of Damascus has had two operations. But, whether he will survive, doctors cannot say.

If Diabolo is a good patient, his chances are good. But thoroughbreds rarely make good patients. Their temperament is such the term highstrung thoroughbred is redundant.

Her thrashing killed Ruffian.

Prince Thou Art, Darby Dan Farm's star 3-year-old and the second betting choice in the Kentucky Derby, fractured his sesamoid bone in a November workout and had to be destroyed.

Prince Thou Art's injury was the same as Ruffian's, but to an even worse degree. Insured for $1 million, he was vanned to the University of Pennsylvania where the most advanced veterinary methods were used to save his life. But, as disease set in, the doctors were forced to take risks in order to ease the colt's discomfort and luck ran out.

Sylvan Place, who ran as an entry with Prince Thou Art in the Derby, also has died. Sylvan Place dropped dead pulling up from a slow workout when a blood vessel broke in his lung.

Media, another Derby starter, suffered a fate similar to Sylvan Place, dropping dead in the stall after a leisurely workout.

The multi-million dollar business of thoroughbred breeding has developed the greatest combination of speed and strength available. Unfortunately, it also has left the breed extremely vulnerable to fatal freak accidents.

The shattered, bloodied leg of Ruffian is as much a part of the sport as the beauty and majesty of her graceful charges down the stretch.

For Buck Kills
Record Season In Ulster County

ALBANY

Although deer takes in New York State in 1975 fell below 1974 figures, six Catskill Region counties, including Ulster set new records of buck kills and two counties set new highs for total takes.

The state total for 1975 was 103,225, including 59,055 adult males, 9,496 fawns, 26,937 adult females and 7,737 fawns. The record buck take in 1975 was 63,266.

Ulster County's with no antlerless season, set a new record for adult bucks with 2,377 the total take was 2,410.

Other new record county figures in the Catskill Region were: Albany, 561; Columbia, total take (3,296); Delaware, 5,971; Dutchess, 3,054, (total take) and 1,887 bucks; Greene, 1,616 adult males; Otsego, 3,091 males; Rensselaer, 751 males; Schoharie, 1,338, males; Westchester, 2,377.

The Central and Western Regions also set new record for total (61,025) and adult males (33,117).

The Environmental Conservation Department said the department's deer management program is working well, basing its position on the fact that the antlerless deer harvest increased from 40,037 deer in 1974 to 44,170 in 1975, This said DEC was the result of its effort to bring herds within the carrying capacity of New York's deer range.

Total deer harvest in the state in 1975 was 103,225, only 78 deer fewer than last year's record.

An estimated 650,000 gunners took the 55,903 bucks. A new record 3,288 deer were taken by 100,000 archers. Deer management permittees harvested 43,673 deer. Controlled hunts were held in several areas resulting in a take of 361; Howland's Island, 36; Gilbert Lake State Park, 13; Seneca Army Depot, 210; and Suffolk County, 102.

The traditional Top Ten deer producing counties showed an increase this year in total deer take despite a decrease in the overall bucks taken. Statewide top ten counties for total deer were: Delaware, 9,531; Steuben, 9,310; Allegany, 8,069; Chenango, 6,331; Cattaragus, 5,937; Otsego, 5,380; Chautauqua, 3,775; Columbia, 3,296; Sullivan, 3,172; and Dutchess, 3,054.

Top 10 counties in buck take were: Delaware, 4,967; Steuben, 4,088; Allegany, 3,393; Cattaragus, 3,167; Sullivan 3,073; [illegible]

Different counties have varying amounts of deer range, so to compare deer densities between counties, the buck take per square mile of deer range is a better indicator than just the number of bucks.

The top ten counties in buck take per square mile of deer range were: Columbia 4.9; Steuben, 4.6; Delaware, 4.5; Allegany, 4.4; Chemung, 4.4; Chenango, 4.3; Otsego, 4.2; Yates, 4.0; Sullivan, 3.6; and a four way tie for 10th place; Dutchess, livingston, Schuyler and Seneca, 3.5

Regional buck takes were lower than in 1974 in the Catskills and Central and Western New York. The Adirondack take was slightly nigher than in 1974, the result of generally food fawn survival during recent moderate winters.

Hot Doggers Ski Auto Show Trail

CHICAGO (UPI) — Jim Garrison, Todd Harps and Joe Flick were looking for a way to make skiing more fun and wound up with a lucrative fulltime occupation.

Five years ago, the Seattle skiers started doing tricks on skis for their own pleasure. Now they do some 120 or more exhibitions a year for an auto manufacturer and a ski company and make more money at it than they could reasonably expect from competition in the pro freestylers' ski tour.

"We call it 'bash for cash,'" Garrison, 26, laughed.

The trio, appearing this week at the Chicago Automobile Show, already have displayed their tricks at the Detroit Auto Show and will appear at the Minneapolis show as well.

"Then we'll have a lot of car dealers and ski shops who'll have us appear," Garrison said.

Their show consists of doing hot dog ski tricks by sliding down a 40 foot run to an elevated takeoff, leaping into the air to do splits, twists, flips and various other moves before landing on an air bag covered with a rug. The airbag is five feet from the end of the takeoff and extends 20 feet.

"We've got to be going fast enough to make our moves in the air," Flick, 21, said, "but not so fast that we go past the airbag. We want to be going 20 miles per hour when we go off the takeoff, but not more than 25."

Flick once went too fast and landed beyond the airbag, but he said "I wasn't hurt." Garrison once lost his direction and came down on the side of the bag, also escaping injury.

Another member of the troupe, Richard Shroyer, "blew his knee apart," Flick said, and had to leave the show. But his injury came while he was skiing for recreation and not as part of the show.

"That's one of the troubles," Flick said. "You don't get enough time to ski for fun. But all of us have to stay in condition so we do a lot of exercising. A lot of skate boarding. That's great training for us."

All three got into their hot dog show styles searching for some new ways to ski. All started skiing before the age of 10 and worked as ski instructors when they began developing their tricks. They got into the freestyle show business because of tieups with a ski manufacturing company and they still work for the same firm.

"It's a lot more profitable than working the pro tour," Flick said. "We'd like more time off to ski for fun, but like they say 'you can't have your cake and eat it.'"

They use short skis, about 4½ feet long, and use a lubricant similar to machine oil for each trip down the stiff plastic track. "If we didn't use it, we'd be going too slow," Harps said. "We've got to get up enough speed."

Their track and all equipment fits into the back of a camper and they drive from show to show.

And You Think Football Is Bad?

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Goldfish swallowing, telephone booth stuffing and streaking and other college fads have been replaced — by mattress stacking.

The University of Cincinnati staged a "Grand Stackoff" Saturday to challenging the campus record of 46 students piled atop a standard-sized double bed mattress within 60 seconds.

"It has been a little dangerous," admits Jerry Summerville, the school's assistant athletic director who had to revise the rules to avoid more injuries.

"We started out allowing groups 90 seconds to pile on, and we got 54 students on one mattress, but people on the bottom were getting squashed," he says. "We had some kids bust capillaries in their chest and near their eyes.

"We reduced the time limit to 60 seconds and that seems about right. We haven't had any injuries with only a minute of stacking."

ONCE UPON A MATTRESS . . . REALLY

Freshman Mike Keefe and the rest of his Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity members practiced all week for Saturday's stackoff against two other groups — Sigma Sigma honorary fraternity and the university band.

"I'm a bottom man and we used to try it lying flat on the mattress, but we couldn't breathe on the bottom," says Keefe. "So, we've got a new technique. We get 12 guys sitting on the bottom with our legs interlocked and fists curled up by our chests. That way, we can still breathe when others pile on top and start forming a pyramid.

"It could be a fad, maybe more," he says. "Maybe even a new intercollegiate sport."

Keefe said he and his fraternity brothers had been trying to get a sorority to join them for the "Grand Stackoff".

"That should make it a lot more fun," he said. "I think it's definitely a co-ed sport."

An Arctic Race With Death

SEATTLE (UPI) — Four-year-old Adam Speerstra won his brush with death in the Arctic and has gone home to Alaska — wearing a protective helmet and a big smile.

Adam's father, Terry, was content with just the smile when the two left Seattle-Tacoma Airport for Fairbanks.

The helmet protects a head injury that nearly claimed his life in an accident at Speerstra's hunting camp 260 miles southeast of Fairbanks Feb. 12.

Speerstra was feeding four ill horses about eight miles from the cabin when Adam was either kicked or stepped on by one of the animals.

"I didn't know he was injured," said Speerstra. "He was lying on the ground. It was 15 below zero and I told him to get up."

When he didn't, Speerstra knew his son was badly injured.

Thus began an Arctic race with death.

Speerstra, a Glennallen engineer, stripped to the waist, strapped Adam to his body with his belt, put his clothes back on and made a 30-minute snowmobile dash to the cabin.

He tucked Adam in a sleeping bag and began the two-hour job of thawing the engine of his light plane, unfreezing the skis and refueling the craft.

Speerstra took off for Northway, a Federal Aviation Administration field station 90 miles away, over 9,500-foot mountains.

There he found an Alaskan businessman with a faster plane who took them to Big Delta, where they were loaded into a helicopter and taken the final 100 miles to a Fairbanks hospital.

A HELMET, BUT NO HOCKEY (UPI)

Despite the seriousness of Adam's injuries, neurosurgeons there would not attempt brain surgery because they could no longer get or afford malpractice insurance. Speerstra hired a registered nurse and booked a commercial flight to Seattle.

The journey from accident to hospital took 12 hours.

Surgeons repaired much of Adam's skull and brain damage.

Now it's up to time to heal the injury.

A Hero Forced to Move Out

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Not everybody loves a hero, as 10-year-old Leon President is discovering.

Leon drew national attention last September when he tracked down members of a juvenile burglary ring, refused a bribe — and personally captured one young thief in a television-detective-type finale, belting the bigger kid into submission and handcuffing him.

Since then Leon has been hailed as a hero by city officials, called a good example by the police chief and brought before the City Council to receive a scroll honoring him. Last week it was the Police Commission's turn.

Commission President Sam Williams praised him for showing "presence of mind, maturity of judgment and a respect for law enforcement far beyond his years" and presented him with a new pair of handcuffs — the real police article — to replace the toy cuffs he used in the capture.

Mrs. President told the commission she was proud of her son but is sending him to live in another town.

He has been getting death threats from his school mates, she said.

Leon's story began when he noticed some children in his neighborhood had a lot of money to spend, enough for trips to Disneyland, bicycles and cash gifts to friends. He also knew there had been a series of burglaries in the neighborhood, usually the apartments of elderly persons robbed after cashing Social Security checks.

Leon is interested in police work. When he lived in Utah, he said, he liked to hang around the police station, where officers taught him a few tricks of the trade, which were shortly to come in handy.

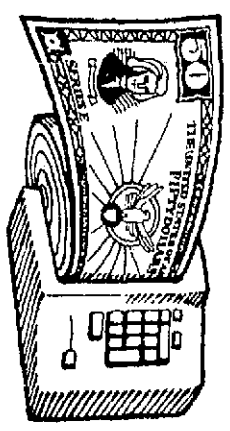

Discovering that he was on to them, the burglars — three boys and a girl, ages 10 to 12 — offered him $11 to keep quiet.

Leon took the cash to the Hollywood Division police station, told his story to detectives and rode along when they went to make arrests.

While officers were in a house taking a girl into custody, a 12-year-old boy dashed out the rear door, hopped on a bicycle and fled. Leon chased him on foot and hauled him off the bicycle, which should have caused more problems for Leon than for the other kid —who was two years older, 8 inches taller and 35 pounds heavier.

Optimism in Citicorp Survey

NEW YORK CITY

American consumers are suddenly believing all those rosy forecasts economists made during the past 10 months about the state of the economy, the most recent Citicorp Survey indicates.

Almost 30 per cent of the 1,424 people surveyed said they felt the economy is better now than it was six months ago. This compares with a largely pessimistic outlook in November when only one in five Americans gave the economy good marks.

According to Alan Murray, vice president and economist for Citicorp's subsidiary, First National City Bank, the optimism is "understandable and consistent with reports we get that consumers are now prepared to buy more expensive items and are more willing to tie themselves to long-term financing arrangements."

Murray explained that although the economists around the country began predicting an economic turnaround almost a year ago and in fact have been charting its progress for the past 10 months, it took a long time for awareness of it to reach the public. Furthermore, he said, "It's understandable that a rational consumer would want to wait and make certain that the recovery was indeed underway."

The under-35-year-olds in the survey indicated more optimism over the current economic situation than others in the poll. Close to 34 per cent in the younger category said the economy is better now than six months ago. Meanwhile, only 27 per cent of those 55 and over voiced such optimism.

Regarding the future and hopes for continued economic improvement, 37 per cent of the respondents said they felt the economy would improve within a year. In November, only 30 per cent of the people expressed such confidence.

The Citicorp Survey monthly traces the attitudes of a wide variety of Americans on a number of different topics. Most questions are consumer-oriented and designed to reflect the wants and needs of the public at large.

Rondout National Stock Offer

KINGSTON

The Rondout National Bank has received approval from the regional administrator of national banks for a two for one stock split plus a 50 per cent dividend for present stockholders

Stockholders have received two new shares for every share they presently own. The sale, which is being directed to the bank's shareholders as well as the general public, is for the purpose of raising capital to support further growth of the bank.

A new building on Hurley Avenue is a major part of the bank's expansion program for 1976.

Additionally, the bank is selling 30,360 newly authorized shares. Current stockholders will be given one right for each share they own, with five rights needed to subscribe for one share of stock. The split is expected to reduce the market value of the shares from $55.00 to $18.33, a price which should facilitate the sale of additional stock.

Persons not presently stockholders who would like to participate in this sale, the first since 1963, may contact any officer of the bank. They will be given a 1975 Annual Report and an Offering Circular providing background information on the bank, its directors, officers and shareholders. The subscription period will run to March 31, unless extended by the Board of Directors.

New Voice in the Morning

POUGHKEEPSIE

John R. Gambling, son of John Gambling, host of WOR Radio's "Rambling with Gambling," has joined the ranks of morning men in the New York metropolitan area. He will assume his a.m. chores at WHVW-AM Radio, Hyde Park and will also serve as program director for that station and WHVW-FM.

Announcement of the appointment was made by James F. O'Grady Jr., president of Castle Communications Corp. the licensee of WHVW-AM-FM and WALL-AM-FM, Middletown.

Gambling's assignment takes effect on March 1.

As morning man for WHVW-AM, Gambling will be the third generation of Gamblings to host a morning radio program, a record that represents a broadcasting dynasty of some 50 years. His late grandfather, John Gambling, originated the "Rambling with Gambling" show in 1925, the longest running program in radio.

When asked if his father's WOR show is received in his coverage area, John R. replied, "it sure is, and I want Dad to know that he's in for the rating battle of his life, at least in the Poughkeepsie market."

Prior to his position at WHVW-AM Radio, Gambling was program director for WAXY-FM (RKO General), Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; program director and research and promotion director of WROR-FM (RKO General); station manager of WTBU-AM (Boston University); and engineer and production supervisor for WOR-AM, New York.

Gambling is a graduate of Boston University with a degree in broadcasting and film.

Sorghum Hope For Bangladesh

DACCA, Bangladesh (UPI) — On the Indian subcontinent, people have been known to starve to death rather than supplement their diets with an unknown food.

American CARE and the Mennonites hope to change all that.

Past efforts to change traditional eating habits, which contribute to the perennial food shortages in the region, have generally failed due to lack of public cooperation.

For example, the Hindus of India regard the cow as a sacred animal and beef eating, therefore, is strictly taboo.

But India has the largest cattle population in the world and millions of stray cattle consume hundreds of thousands of tons of precious foodgrains each year.

Similarly, the Bengalis of Bangladesh have stubbornly refused to switch from rice, which is always in short supply, to any other staple.

But a successful experiment — substituting rice with a cereal little known in this part of the world has given agricultural economists new hope.

That cereal is sorghum, a protein-rich bonanza that is far cheaper to grow than rice or wheat.

According to one Bengali agriculture expert, sorghum "has come as a handy answer to the country's quest for an alternative cereal to reduce the pressure on rice."

The credit for successfully introducing sorghum in Bangladesh goes to two American voluntary relief organizations — CARE and the Mennonites.

The experiment with sorghum, begun two years ago by the two organizations, proved an instant success.

Farmers involved in the experiment found that sorghum can be grown on land which they had been forced to keep fallow — important in a country where only 24 million acres, about a third of the land area, is considered arable.

The cereal can be grown on dry land and the cost of sorghum cultivation is much lower than paddy (rice) cultivation.

The farmers also found sorghum yields two or three times as much as the same acreage of rice.

The first big crop of sorghum was ceremoniously harvested recently at Mirzapur, 60 miles from Dacca, in the presence of CARE and Bangladesh government officials.

To the pessimists' surprise the Bengalis loved it.

Market reports showed that people have been rushing to buy sorghum because it costs less than rice and they prefer the taste to wheat.

County's Big Brother Agencies Convene

Needy Family Grant . . . Marginal Effect Locally

by Lynn Mulvaney

KINGSTON

Reacting to President Ford's request that Congress approve a $2.5 billion annual block grant to the states for aid to needy families, Ulster County Social Services Commissioner Bernhardt S. Kramer said "if it leads to getting back to local discretion" in handling welfare, "it's a step in the right direction."

A block grant would mean the federal government would not specify what the money is to be used for, as opposed to the categorical grants now received for such things as Medicaid and Aid to Dependent Children.

Long an advocate of having local welfare districts decide what their needs are and how funds should be distributed, Kramer thinks however that the Ford proposal will have marginal effect on Ulster County. Pointing out that the President's plan affects welfare services rather than tangible welfare dollars, for such things as Medicaid and aid to children, Kramer said that services represent only seven per cent of his entire $22 million local budget.

Presently the county spends 39 per cent for Medicaid, 36 per cent for aid to dependent children and home relief, 12 per cent on its facilities such as the infirmary and county home, only six per cent for administration and seven per cent for all other services.

In his message to Congress, Ford said his plans call for ending requirements that each state provide matching funds.

No state would receive less money under his Financial Assistance for Community Services Act than in the past fiscal year.

Ford's plan cuts out much federal bureaucratic paperwork in getting the money to states for use in such programs as day care, family planning, foster care and special services for the aged, the alcoholic, the disabled and drug addicts.

The plan would:

• Eliminate numerous restrictive conditions on how federal funds may be used.

• Concentrate federal dollars on people most in need; those under the poverty threshold and those receiving public assistance.

• Assure that no state will receive less money this year than last from the program.

• Decrease federal monitoring and oversignt of state plan requirements and expenditures.

• Let the state and local governments, rather than Washington, do more in saying who will get what aid.

Under Ford's plan, New York State would get $217.5 million, the same amount it presently gets, down from $220 million last year.

Kramer said his biggest problem is the biggest part of his budget and that although his original $24 million budget was cut by better than $2 million for Medicaid, Home Relief and Aid to Dependent Children, the same services still have to be provided. Currently the three items here run $17 million alone.

Kramer is particularly pleased that he has been able to keep administrative costs down in spite of the burgeoning welfare rolls and the need to hire additional help. He said he doesn't think there are many big businesses the size of the Ulster County Department of Social Services that runs at six per cent of their budgets.

He feels that on the whole, the President's plan represents "a good start . . . it provides for a comprehensive rather than a scattered program."

Ford has said he feels his proposal is in keeping with his philosophy of reducing unecessary and burdensome federal restrictions while increasing state and local flexibility and responsibility in the administration of social services.

Davis Resigns Ulster Post

TOWN OF ULSTER

Town of Ulster Town Justice Sherwood E. Davis, who is a patient at Albany Medical Center, has resigned his post effective today.

Foreseeing an "extended absence" from performing his daily and nightly duties as town justice, Davis said he feels "it is only fair that I not throw the full burden of work on my fellow town justice," Arthur A. Reilly.

Davis has been a patient in Albany for several weeks, but left the health facility on two consecutive Tuesdays to hold night court in the Town of Ulster.

He indicated that in view of the circumstances that have arisen, he also feels it is not fair to the defendants in his court or the residents of the Town of Ulster that they not have two fulltime functioning justices for an extended length of time.

DAVIS

Town Clerk Robert Morehouse, who received Davis' resignation Friday, has sent a letter to town board members notifying them that Davis' term of office expires Dec. 31, 1979. The town board is expected to meet on or soon after March 1 to appoint a successor to Davis for the remainder of 1976 until the office can be filled for the balance of the term i.. the next general election this November.

Morehouse said a successor to Davis has not been selected but the Freeman learned that lawyer John Gotelli is among those being considered for the post.

Judge Davis was recently appointed to serve as a member of the Second Circuit Subcommittee on Courts and Community by the American Bar Association. His appointment was one of 15 made in the district which includes the states of New York, Connecticut and Vermont.

He also attended last fall's one-week judicial education program on the law of search and seizure conducted by the National College of the State Judiciary, University of Nevada.

Davis was first elected town justice in 1967 and is a past president of the Ulster County Bar Association and Town of Ulster Republican Club.

He was the first chairman of the 300th anniversary committee of Kingston in 1952 and served as commander of Kingston Post 150, American Legion.

A graduate of Wesleyan University, he attended Cornell University and received his law degree from New York University.

Boiceville Hearing on Water

ALBANY

The Assembly Sub-Committee on Wildlife Management will hold two hearings next month, in Boiceville and in Binghamton, on the issue of New York City's policy of retaining water in its Catskill Mountain reservoirs rather than releasing a regular flow, Assemblyman Maurice D. Hinchey, Jr., D-Saugerties, reports.

The Boiceville hearing is set for March 12 at 8 p.m. at the Onteora Central School, Route 28, Boiceville.

Hinchey said the Sub-Committee will hear testimony on the effects of New York City's habit of only infrequently releasing water from the reservoirs, owned by the city, in the Catskill Mountains.

Hinchey, a member of the Environmental Conservation Committee, said the policy exists "without apparent reason or justification. Many studies have shown that a regular flow of water would not endanger the city's water supplies." The policy causes harm to the fish and other life in the rivers and streams fed from the reservoirs, Hinchey said.

There has been a rising concern on the part of sportsmen and environmentalists for a change in the policy, he said.

The meeting will be chaired by Sub-Committee chairman Assemblyman Rolland Kidder (D-Jamestown) and will be attended by Assemblyman G. Oliver Koppell (D-Bronx), chairman of the parent Environmental Conservation Committee.

Ulster County Council for the Arts under scrutiny by Lefkowitz

KINGSTON

State Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz has been asked by a Saugerties resident, Alex Gross, to investigate whether or not the Ulster County Council for the Arts has been "guilty of misuse of state funds."

Gross, who is by-laws committee chairman of the council, in a letter to Lefkowitz earlier this month, asked if the state council is not also guilty of misuse of state funds.

He claims tht the group which applied for the funding is not the same group which has been receiving and disbursing them.

Ever since the by-laws wee hammered out and adopted in June, 1975, Gross said they have been "ignored, thwarted and ground to pieces by the interim board "an elitist group" the bylaws wee designed to avoid.

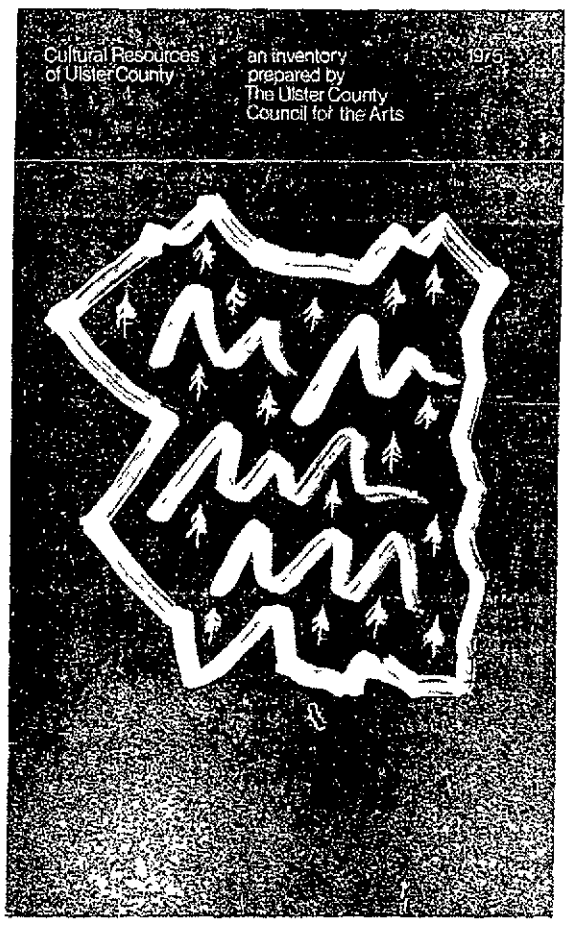

He charges that:

• UCCA has steadfastly refused to hold its annual meeting which was voted b the general membership last June and was to be held in October.

• UCCA has refused to publish a complete set of the by-laws.

• It has "resolutely refused to notify members of board meetings and has held them in secluded rural homes of board members so as to discourage attendance," even though UCCA possesses adequate quarters at 96 Maiden Lane; Kingston.

• At the illegal meetings, decisions have been made concerning jobs, priorities and disbursement of state funds amounting to $18,000

Editor's Note — Attacks on the relatively new Ulster County Council for the Arts have been coming from various quarters critical of administrative procedures. The criticisms are outlined today in the first of a two-part series on the council. The March 7 edition of Tempo will carry comments from the council replying to the critique.

• At least three interim board members have been assigned paid positions in the UCCA office without first determining if there were non-board members who might be better qualified for these positions.

Gross also takes exception to the fact that the first arts project to be funded by the local council "is one which is likely to infuriate the citizens of Ulster County, regardless of party affiliations and to hurt the cause of the arts in our county." It is a project to paint art works on advertising billboards along the highways. Gross said that while "his group supports the idea of art in public places, particularly in areas of urban blight, it does not support it on billboards in "the midst of the green Catskills."

Another critic, Paul Miller of Saugerties, a member of the council, points out that the $5,000 grant for the billboard design went to another interim board member, Martin Carey. He questions how Carey got the grant who constituted the jury that made him the recipient and how many other applicants were there for the job?

Miller is particularly critical of the council's chairman, Arthur Rashap, who he claims is "attempting to foist on Ulster County, a bureaucratic monstrosity suitable to a metropolitan area serving millions of people, but hardly appropriate in a county with a population of 150,000."

Miller points out that five area representatives have already been hired to serve five separate areas of the county.

He said that the elaborate administrative bureaucracy also includes plans for ancillary services such as publication of periodic informational pieces on art, culture and crafts. None of this, he said, is necessary to determine whether or not Ulster County is getting its fair share of available state funding. He suggests that the county legislature could accomplish the same thing by simply appointing a committee to review the situation annually.

Miller feels that those organizations in the county wanting and deserving help could continue to apply to the state council for financial aid and technical advice as to how to submit applications. He maintains that is the job that the state council is being paid to do.

Charging that UCCA has failed to raise any funds or to demonstrate a convincing record of return for the $18,000 it has received in grants, Miller asks how carefully supervised the state council's grant-making apparatus is?

Has the council measured up to its own stated purposes? Miller doesn't think so. "Has it sponsored exhibitions, performances, fairs and festivals?" he asks. "Has it been able to raise funds from any other source but the state council?" No, he contends.

Further charges are made by James Hughes, of the Committee of Citizens Concerned for the Arts, who feels the council is setting itself up as "a bureaucratic middleman that will siphon off funds from the state council which would otherwi se go to deserving organizations in the county.

Hughes claims UCCA has already violated several provisions of its by-laws He said there is "sufficient reason to suspect that the local council leadership recognizes that its small group does not have the support of most organizations in the area and does not want to answer questions regarding decisions made by the board in recent months."

Questioning UCCA's use of taxpayer's money, Hughes asks for some justification for paying office help the equivalent of $75 a day "for what has proved so far to be no more than a boondoggle." He also questions the propriety of the board assigning its own member to two of the five paying positions when other qualified people are available.

Exception is also taken by Miller to a $4,000 cultural inventory which lists cultural resources of the county. He alleges that much of the information in the printed publication is available from the chamber of commerce and that the questionnaire from which the inventory was taken, left somethig to be desired.

We have lots of Leap Year Babies

Here it is leap year again and, as usual, it's adding to the confusion.

Innumerable people will donate one day's work this year to their employers without pay. Not out of company loyalty but because the annual salaries of many are based on 365-day years and this year has 366 days. At the same time, everybody renting a house or an apartment, making installment payments, or leasing a car, boat, store, office or equipment gets that extra day's use at no charge.

Leap year intrigues not so much for those economic boosts, however, as for the fact that the long year helps everyone stay a little younger, since it postpones that next birthday an extra 24 hours. Those born on February 29, of course, could carry this to an extreme.

For 12-year-old Denise Westergard, a birthday is something "really extra special" when it falls on the 29th. While her 10-year-old brother, Timmy, a non-leap year baby, can call his day his own, Denise normally celebrates March 1 with a triple birthday party. In a normal year, that means one big cake for Denise, her grandmother and a cousin—since all their birthdays fall close to the same calendar date.

But, this year, Denise—who lives with her parents, Alfred and Ann Westergard on West Saugerties Road and who is a student at Grant D. Morse School—will spent that every fourth year extra day doing something extra special on a snowmobiling party at Old Forge.

What Denise has learned to live with as an unalterable fact of her young life is totally confusing to Ian Worthman. Ian, who was born in Brooklyn on Feb. 29, 1972, finds himself in the strange position of having his first birthday in 1976.

Even his six-year-old sister, Elisa, doesn't quite understand how Ian will manage to be not only one—but four, as well, on the same day.

But Ian, who lives on Austin Avenue in Saugerties with his parents, Kenneth and Susan Worthman, is willing to settle for a little confusion since it will mean dividends in the sweets department. Ian will taste the benefits of this particular Feb. 29 when he's presented with two birthday cakes: one with one candle . . . and one with four candles.

Leon Goyer, now a worldly-wise eight-year-old, still wonders why he doesn't have a regular birthday like everyone else. Born in Kingston Hospital on a past Feb. 29, Leon usually celebrates his birthday on March 2, when his nine-year-old sister, Sharon, was born. Together, they share one big cake for both—while another sister, six-year-old Nancy, has her birthday all to herself.

But, this year, Leon will feel "very special." His parents, Leon and Sharon Goyer, are planning to invite all of his friends to their home on Towns Road in Mt. Marion. And just to have his "own" party this year—and an all too rare regular birthday makes this particular eight-year-old happy indeed.

Sharon Williams, 16-year-old daughter of Harley and Janet Williams of Accord, has always celebrated her birthday on Feb. 28 or March 1. And, although she's always been feted to a big party, she ponders the injustice that faces her elite group of Pisceans.

Says her grandmother, Mrs. Ethel Lockwood, "Sharon once remarked to her mother, 'I feel gypped! I don't have a real birthday. Why did you have to goof?'"

Still, as one of those who faces every election year with great anticipation, Sharon acknowledges that this year, at least, "I'll have a real bash!"

At the Center Road home of the William Dutcher family in Mt. Marion Park, 17-year-old Debbie says the leap year boy in their family, 12-year-old Mark Dutcher, "feels okay about being a leap year baby . . . but he gets a litttle upset when some of the kids tease him about it."

Most years, Mark celebrates on Feb. 28 or March 1, but this year, he'll have his party Feb. 29. And since Mark is away at school in Pennsylvania, the family—which also includes Billy, 14, and Alice, 7—will visit him there to celebrate with a private party of their own.

For more perspective on birthdays that only come around every leap year, a talk with Pat Brislin of Tillson Estates should convince anyone it's an "advantage." Pat, a 32-year-old mother of four, insists she's "never found it a disadvantage at all." Says Pat, "I think you feel a little unique . . . and it was always very special when I had a so-called real birthday when it fell on Feb. 29. That meant I got a special present. And Feb. 28 was always my birthday, too, to me."

This year, particularly, Pat is "having fun" with her uniqueness by trying to explain to her eight-year-old son and her other children that he and she are both eight. "It's confusing for them, but fun for me," she says, "even though it's hard for my eight-year-old and the younger children to understand one extra day every four years. They finally concluded that I've lived 32 years but have had eight birthdays."

Our suggestion that leap year people can carry staying a little younger to an extreme drew laughter from Cynthia Vellake of West Chester Street, Kingston, who'll be 20 today.

"Nonsense," says Cynthia, "you still get as old. How could you stay the same age for four years? You'd be here forever."

Still, Cynthia feels it's "strange" being a leap year celebrant, but mostly because other people think it's strange. "I don't stop and think about it," she says, "but when I tell others, they somehow can't believe it. You don't react personally to it that way because you're used to it, but it's other people's reactions that impress you. They'll kid around; says things like, 'Oh, you're going to be five . . . is that how you act at five?'"

Otherwise, for Cynthia, who works in a local bank, there have been no disadvantages. And, today, she plans nothing special. Just cake in the afternoon with her fiance. The special part about this year will come in June when they're married.

Lynn Collette of Dewitt Drive, Saugerties, will also be 20 today and is also employed by a local bank. She's always felt it's "strange" to be a leap year birthday girl, but says she doesn't think about it at all unless other people say something.

She's always celebrated on Feb. 28 and has nothing special planned this year for that rare 29th situation. "When I was younger, it was good," says Lynn, "because I was different.

For David Fogden, a New Paltz High School sophomore, it's not strange being a leap year person. Says David, who lives on Prospect Street in New Paltz, "I feel privileged."

David, who'll be 16 today, says he's always celebrated on "any Saturday around my birthday." And, even though Feb. 29, 1976 is a Sunday, he will not toy with tradition. "I'm just having a normal party with a few friends in on Saturday night, even though I haven't had a birthday for a while."

David sees no disadvantage in his privileged position, "Even when it falls on the 29th it's just another birthday except for the special things my parents do for me," he says.

"I'll really be four years old today, I guess," says Eddie Lattin, "but I'll be 16 some day . . . I guess." Actually, that some day is today for the Kingston High School sophomore,

The son of the Edward Lattins of Elmendorf Street, Kingston, Eddie thinks it's "kind of weird" to have a birthday just once every four years. "Your friends kid you; tell you you 'lucked out.' But I don't think so. You get used to it."

Most years, Eddie celebrates the day before on Feb. 28. But this year, he'll have his "cake and stuff right on THE day," he says. Nothing special — not even a special present by special request — but a birthday that'll be different because of its very difference.

Stefani Metz is another Saugerties youngster who will be both one and four on the same day. And, while she' s not too young to "almost understand why," says her motner, she still "doesn't know why Feb. 29 doesn't come every year."

In the past, her birthdays have always been celebrated on the 28th because her mother wanted her to know her birthday was in February. But this year there'll be a special cake (Stefani wants it in the shape of a lion) to share with the immediate family in her Kalina Drive home.

Stefani's birth date also intrigues her older sister, Risa, who used it as her subject for Show and Tell at school. When Risa explained that Stefani's birthday was finally coming this year, the kids in her second grade class simply couldn't manage to understand why not every year.

As for Mrs. Metz, she suggests leap year babies don't get enough attention. "I felt shunned when Stefani was born," she says. "It's supposed to be such a big thing when you're a New Year's baby — but that happens every year. They should do something special for leap year babies. They only arrive every four years."

They owe their predicament, of course, to Julius Caesar, who — around 46 B.C. — devised that leap year should fall every fourth year . . . since the earth revolves around the sun every 365¼ days.

With birthdays that only come around every leap year, such individuals technically can be "youngsters" for life. None of the Ulsterites we interviewed were inclined toward that view. One famous gentleman saw it that way, however. Italian opera composer Gioacchino Rossini, born Feb. 29, 1792 celebrated his "18th birhday" 72 years later with a festival at which he vowed to put aside "the frivolities of youth and the indiscretions of a teenager."

The composer actually was rushing the event. He had assumed 1800 was a leap year. It wasn't, so in 1864 Rossini could have said he was only 17. And it wasn't because even hundred years only become leap years if they can be divided by four.

Everyone knows the bloomin' plice is 'aunted

If you want to go on the most popular weekend ghost hunt in the world, send your $48 to $73 dollars off to Boswell and Johnson in York, England.

Boswell and Johnson are not ghosts of two famous 18th century characters, but a travel agency which has its office in one of the most haunted places in England. Their price depends on your accomodation.

York is a very old city. It was Eboracum to the Romans, and in 1971 celebrated the 1900th anniversary of its founding. Its history has always been lively. It has seen the birth of one and death of another Roman emperor, the proclamation of a third; the birth of a man who tried to blow up Parliament (Guy Fawkes), and the death of an infamous highwayman (Dick Turpin).

The central part of the city has narrow streets and quaint (or sinister, according to your mood) shops and houses, surrounded by three miles of medieval city walls. Soaring above them is England's largest cathedral, York Minster, which took 252 years to build and was completed in 1572.

Ghost hunters meet local Police Constable Harry Martindale, who assures them the Romans are still around — he's seen them — in the ancient Treasurer's House, in the shadow of the Minster.

Twenty-two years ago, he was working as a plumbers apprentice in the cellar when he heard a musical note.

"It was like a trumpet, and it came nearer and nearer. Suddenly a Roman soldier came through the wall, and I fell off the ladder. I was terrified and I moved as far away as I could." More soldiers followed, between 12 and 20 of them, with one on horseback. They crossed the cellar and passed through the wall on the other side.

"They were within six feet of me, and I could hear them walking and mumbling. There was nothing smart about them, and they were small men. The prominent colour of their clothes was green," Harry says.

He ran upstairs. The curator remarked, "You must have seen the Roman soldiers." The men all appeared to be cut off at the knee because they were marching on a Roman road which ran a couple of feet below the cellar floor.

At York's admirable Theatre Royal, the ghost is the Grey Lady, a young nun, walled up alive for having an affair with a monk. There's also a handsome man in Regency costume with an emerald silk lining to his cloak.

Ghost-hunters call for coffee at the timbered Minster Cafe, dating from 1512. Here John Mitchell, a local schoolmaster who acts as a guide for part of the tour, tells the sad tale of Marmaduke Buckle. Marmaduke was a cripple who lived above the cafe in the early 18th century and in despair hanged himself from the central beam. His name is scratched on an upper wall with his age at time of decease — 17.

Tourists see York . . . from ghost to ghoul

When it was a private house, strange things happened in that room. If a table was laid, the cutlery was mysteriously rearranged; lights were switched on and off; doors opened; unseen presences were heard on the stairs.

Susan Frost, a waitress, says "The upper room is never used now, but after the cafe is closed, I hear noises as if someone was walking, dragging a foot across the floor. I don't go up to see what it is."

Mr. Mitchell tells tales of ghosts linked with many buildings in York. Boswell and Johnson is in Lady Peckett's Yard, which is haunted by the Green Lady, believed to be Lady Peckett herself, York's Lady Mayoress in 1200 A.D. A mother, nursemaid and child have been seen at Holy Trinity Church, Micklegate; a headless man traditionally haunts the churchyard of Holy Trinity, Goodramgate.

There's a Saturday afternoon bus trip to Bolton Priory in lovely Wharfedale, where the curators have seen ghostly figures many times, always dressed as Augustinian monks.

One of York's pubs is the Cock and Bottle which, of course, is haunted — by George Villiers, second Duke of Buckingham. He lived in Skeldergate. The pub owners, Peter and Brenda Stanley, have taken a liking to the Duke, since they moved there in 1973. Brenda has seen him many times, a man with dark curly hair and although he must be 350 now, a twinkle in his eye — he's even been known to watch her undress!

Such is the popularity of these ghost-hunting weekends, advance booking is essential. The cost is $48 to $73 dollars excluding travel to York. Write Boswell and Johnson, Sir Thomas Herbert's House, 11 Lady Peckett's Yard, York Y01 2NF.

Lady Peckett's Yard in York, reputedly haunted by the Green Lady. Obviously, the 'in' color for ghosts in York.

Oscars

the elite and the outsiders

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Every year the Academy Award nominations include some of the same familiar names and faces, Hollywood's elite, along with outsiders who come from nowhere, often never to challenge again.

The 1976 crop of Oscar contenders in the acting categories contains the same curious mixture.

Jack Nicholson, Al Pacino, Walter Matthau, James Whitmore and Max Schell, all nominees for best actor, represent the elite. They've had 15 nominations among them.

In past years such other familiar names as Paul Newman, Richard Burton, Dustin Hoffman, George C. Scott, Jack Lemmon and Marlon Brando have cropped up regularly.

Some have won, some have lost. They are perennials.

Not infrequently an outsider wins an Oscar and then falls back. Last year it was television comedian Art Carney who surprised the experts with an award for "Harry and Tonto."

This year's race for best actress typifies the chasm between the elite and the outsiders.

Glenda Jackson was nominated for a fourth time for her performance in "Hedda." AnnMargret won a second nomination for "Tommy." The elite.

Louise Fletcher, Isabelle Adjani and Carol Kane are all new names to the public and to the academy as well.

The theme is repeated in the best supporting actress category. Lee Grant has won three supporting nominations. Sylvia Miles has been nominated twice. Lily Tomlin, Brenda Vaccaro and Ronee Blakely are one-timers, at least so far.

All the nominees for best supporting actor are newcomers to the ranks, although three are old and familiar faces.

George Burns, Burgess Meredith and Jack Warden have been around for years but they've never had a shot at the Oscar before.

The outsiders are Brad Dourif and Chris Sarandon. Saradon never appeared in a movie before. Dourif had been limited to a pair of minor film roles until "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

Historically the outsiders do almost as well as the elite.

Luise Rainer, never a major star, won back-to-back Oscars in 1936-37 for "The Great Ziegfeld" and "The Good Earth" and wasn't heard from again.

Character actor Paul Lukas won best actor laurels for "Watch On The Rhine" in 1944 in an era of such elite stars as Gary Cooper, Spencer Tracy, James Stewart, Ronald Colman and Laurence Olivier.

Most elite of all is Katharine Hepburn, the only woman ever to win three Oscars for best actress, including back-to-back awards (1967-68) for "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" and "The Lion in Winter"

The academy has been accused of voting an Oscar for an actor's body of work over the years instead of an individual performance.

Many thought such was the case when Bill Holden won in 1954 for "Stalag 17." The same was grumbled about John Wayne in "True Grit" six years ago.

Yet no Oscars were voted such popular figures as Cary Grant and Paul Newman.

Squawks have surfaced about juggling categories — when a leading player drops down to a supporting category to compete unfairly in the less heralded race.

Jack Lemmon's Oscar back in 1956 for "Mr. Roberts" was an example.

This year Burns' nomination for best supporting actor in "The Sunshine Boys" is another case in point. Many feel he should have been nominated along with costar Matthau for best actor.

More often than not when a pair of stars are competing in the same category for the same picture the vote is split and an outsider comes through.

Another bone of contention is the nomination of a film for best picture of the year when the director does not get nominated.

"Jaws" is a nominee this year, but its director, Steve Spielberg was not among those nominated. Conversely, Federico Fellini won a nomination this time around for "Amarcord," but the picture itself was overlooked.

The question is, how can a movie win an award for best picture without acknowledging the contribution of the director who almost singlehandedly is responsible for the finished product?

Yet with all its imperfections the academy's system for rewarding its performers, directors and craftsman is probably the most honest of all the awards.

Bloc voting by studios, for the most part, is a thing of the past. Studio employes represent a minority of the membership today.

Personal popularity is not enough to win an Oscar. Box office receipts, however, are an undeniable factor. Not in the 48 years of Academy Award history has a flop at the turnstyles ever won the prize for best picture. The chances of it happening this year are virtually nil.

American Musical Notes!

A symphony member shows a sixth grader how to play the violin. The violin was a popular instrument in colonial America. Thomas Jefferson, like many boys of his day, learned to play it when he was a young boy.

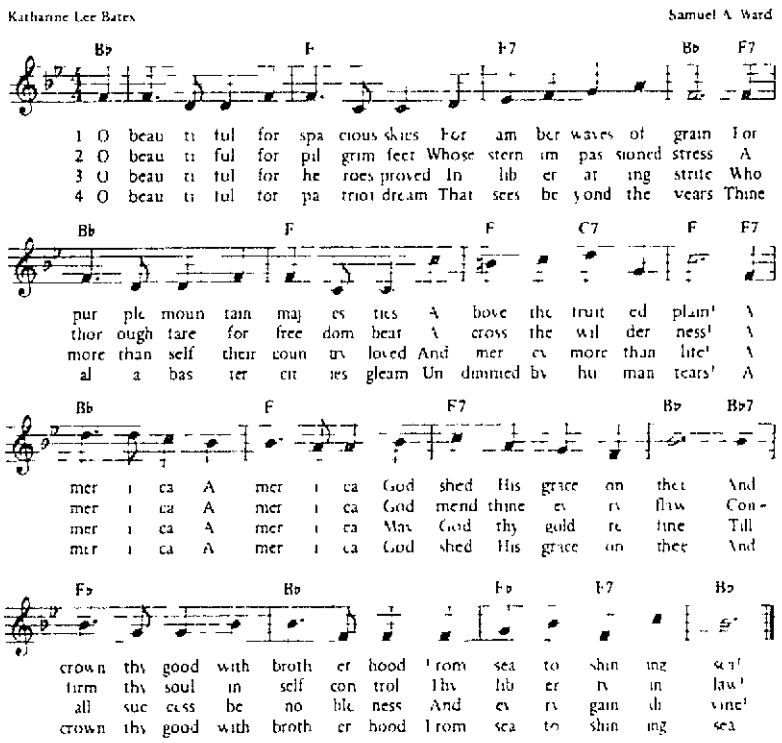

March 4: Music in Our Schools Day!

This year's nationwide celebration will call attention to music in the classroom. This special day will encourage children to make, enjoy and understand American music.

Sponsored by the Music Educators National Conference

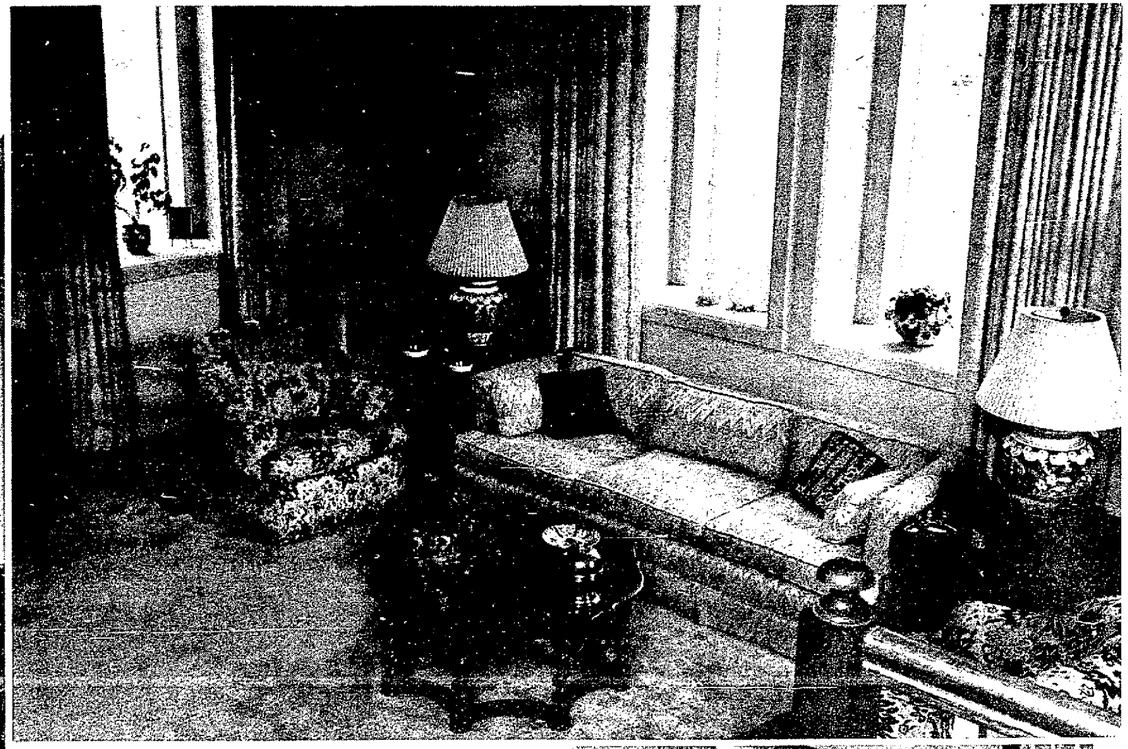

America the Beautiful

Katharine Lee Bates — Samuel A. Ward

The official song of this day is "America the Beautiful." The beautiful view from Pikes Peak in Colorado inspired Katherine Lee Bates to write the words. Later the words were put together with the music by Samuel A. Ward. Kids everywhere will be singing it on March 4.

The Berardi Home

That imposing stone fortress on the banks of the Rondout in the Hamlet of Wilbur stood vacant for decades. The blank, staring windows allowing the elements to do their worst. A vestige of Kingston's hey day when the sloops slid silently up to the attending wharf. Artists painted it; romantics sighed longingly over the chiseled walls.

James Berardi appreciated the old ruin for what it is: one of the finest examples of Gothic Victorian architecture in America. He chose to rebuild, renew, refurbish the structure. Today it stands gleaming and landscaped, with a panoramic view of the Rondout Creek.

When the house was completely renovated, they sought to furnish it in a pleasant, workable, and inviting design: they didn't want to live in a museum. Sam Cerasaro of Sera-Mont Galleries created the decor.

Careful attention was given to such details as wall paper, hardware, lighting fixtures, mouldings and doors to keep the inside within the Victorian period. The living room walls are a creamy beige; the draperies are of beige crewel. Wood pieces are Jacobean and accessories are antiques. The dining room is in the same color scheme and the furnishings are Jacobean.

The bedroom is a sunny room with a magnificent view of the creek. The white, blue and green are restful and cool. The English campaign furniture is of chestnut burl and the accessories are oriental.

Television In Review –

N. H. Primary Proved Cliffhangers can be dull !

NEW YORK (UPI) — There were almost enough television network employes in New Hampshire Tuesday night to have swung the vote in the Republican primary, and some of them had been there almost long enough to qualify for a ballot.

From a television point of view, the time and labor, the expensive personnel and equipment, all ended up producing a giant yawn.

The results in the Democratic primary, with Jimmy Carter, Morris Udall and Birch Bayh in one-two-three order, was predicted and therefore without excitement.

On the Republican side, the contest remained too close for the networks to call by midnight, so all but night owls and the politically pious went to bed unsatisfied.

The trouble might lie in frustrated expectations. Back in 1952, when New Hampshire's primary primacy began, the state had its lake country as a summer attraction, the falling leaves in autumn, winter skiing and, as a harbinger of spring, the first preference primary of the presidential election year.

By 1976, it had ballooned into an affair covered over a period of months by the three television networks and the pencil press. Last night NBC estimated it had about 140 persons working in New Hampshire, ABC had 125 and CBS 120. Among these, of course, were such top talent as Walter Cronkite, John Chancellor and Harry Reasoner, with a supporting coast of top broadcasters.

It took a combined staff of almost 400 people to let the nation know that immediately past midnight on the morning of Feb. 24, the 25 voters of Dixville Notch, N.H., cast their ballots — Gerald Ford 11, Ronald Reagan 4 on the Republican side, with the town's 10 Democrats giving Jimmy Carter six votes, with one each to four other contenders.

When it came to calling the statewide results, ABC called the Democratic contest for Carter at 7:50 p.m. Eastern time, on its radio network, even though all the polls didn't close until 8. It couldn't do the same on television at that hour because network time doesn't begin until 8 p.m., with affiliates on local access until then. ABC called Carter on television at 8:05 p.m., Eastern time.

The call was made with only 11 per cent of the New Hampshire precincts reporting, but an ABC spokesman said 33 per cent of their key precincts were in at that time. CBS didn't give the race to Carter until 8:40 p.m., with NBC coming in at 8:50 p.m.

NBC had scheduled more primary news for its 8:57 nightly news "Update" and all three networks presented half-hour special reports at 11:30 p.m., but there were few interruptions of regularly scheduled programming — not even the distraction of that ribbon of print the news departments sometimes thread along the bottom of the screen.

Apparently the conventional wisdom was that the Democrats had just began to fight — among themselves, anyway — and the focus of interest lay with the Republicans, whose contest was too tight to predict.

The ten top-rated network television programs for the week ending Feb. 22, according to the A. C. Nielsen Co., were:

1: "Six Million Dollar Man;" 2: "All In The Family;" 3: "Rich Man, Poor Man;" 4: "Bionic Woman;" 5: "Wonderful World of Disney;" 6: "Welcome Back, Kotter;" 7: "Starsky and Hutch;" 8: "Streets of San Francisco;" 9: "Happy Days;" 10: "Baretta."

MOVIN' ON

Sonny Pruitt makes his debut as a singer while his side-kick Will Chandler is threatened by hijackers in 'Sing It Again Sonny' on 'Movin' On' tonight at 8:00 PM (E.S.T.). After winning first prize in a truckers' talent contest, Sonny is signed to a contract by talent agent Sheila Powers (guest star Vera Miles). Meanwhile Will, who has been left alone, lines up a cargo and drives into an ambush.

'Rollin On,' the song Sonny sings on the episode, was originally considered as a possible theme for the series, according to Claude Akins. 'It's a trucking song with a country western sound,' Akins said, 'I really enjoyed doing it.' Akins has had previous experience vocalizing, but when asked if he would consider adding music to his acting accomplishments he replied with a laugh, 'I just don't know how long I could fool the public. I may not be much of a threat to Frank Sinatra in the singing field, but I'll bet I can drive a truck better than Frank can.'

Profile

THE SOUND OF MUSIC

'The Sound of Music' which thrilled more audiences than any other musical in movie history with its breathtaking beauty and ever-popular songs, makes its television premiere in a three and a half hour family night presentation as 'The ABC Sunday Night Movie Special' on Sunday, February 29 at 7:00 PM (E.S.T.). The film won five Academy Awards and several other nominations, including one for Julie Andrews as Maria and for Peggy Wood as the Mother Abbess.

Officially born as a Broadway musical in November of 1959, 'The Sound of Music' was the last collaboration of Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II. The musical ran for almost four years in New York and five years in London, when it was adapted for the screen by 20th Century Fox in 1965. The change over from stage to film took full advantage of the glorious setting of the story- the Tyrolean Alps of Austria- where director Robert Wise took cast and camera to film on location. The New York Times praised the camerawork that 'zooms over the snow-capped peaks and down into the green and ochre region... soared to those dizzying and breathtaking views on occasions when there's a particularly joyous song to be sung.'

'The Sound of Music' tells the story of The Trapp Family Singers, a family which fled from their home in the Austrian Alps when the crunch of Nazi boots took the music and the joy out of their peaceful life at the beginning of World War II. The key to the change in the conservative and sternly disciplined von Trapp family is Maria, a very bright and unconventional girl who is encouraged by the Mother Abbess to leave the convent, realizing that the reclusive life of a nun was not meant for her spirited young novice. The world she enters is the household of the stern widower Captain von Trapp (played by Christopher Plummer) where she becomes governess, singing teacher, and eventual mother of his seven children. Among the musical's many song favorites are 'My Favorite Things,' 'Climb Every Mountain,' and, of course the song that makes the hills come alive, 'The Sound of Music.'
